MEDFORD 10,000 PORTLAND 250,000

A few days ago a 300-acre tract of land near Medford was sold for $40,000. This land is unenclosed, covered with brush, and it will take at least one year to clear it and set it to fruit. As it must be set to apples or pears, it will take nine or ten years before it can bring any considerable return, as in that period it takes trees about three years longer to mature than in this section. When this orchard comes into full fruition it will bring a large return on all it has cost and the purchaser has undoubtedly made a good buy. Medford is a city of less than 10,000 inhabitants; Portland has at least 250,000. Hence there is a big difference in acreage near Medford and acreage near Portland. Our Banner Acre tract will in very few years be within the city limits of Portland; it is just as good fruit land as the Medford tract; it will cost $25 per acre less to clear it; it will come into bearing in six to seven years, or cherries three years before the Medford orchard; when in full it takes trees but pay more dollars per acre than the Medford tract—therefore we contend that on the basis of the Medford sale our Banner Acre tracts should be worth and are worth more than $400 per acre. But we are selling these lands at $85 to $125 per acre. These if Banner Acres is not the best buy on the market, where can you find it?
