As long as there is a greater demand for cheese than makers are able to take to the utmost. Practically no cheese has gone into storage here but some of the creamery men are making an effort to get a surplus. A small amount of butter is reported going into storage but more would go if makers could not sell their output. While the market is not so firm as formenly the trade in general is hold-ing prices intact at the level quoted by The Journal. Reports have been received here of heavy buying of eastern markets. Wheat started there with an advance of 1% d for both options and closed 2% d higher for the July and 1.7-8d for September. Big people have evidently come to the conclusion that wheat prices have been hit a trifle hard; that is, while prices were abnormally too high a short time ago, the market has swung back entirely too far.
