

EXPLORING THE HOOD RIVER BEGIN THURSDAY

Steamer Charles R. Spencer to Make Daily Round Trips to Upper Columbia River and Town of Apple Fame.

Announcement was made this morning that Captain E. W. Spencer, owner of the river steamer Charles R. Spencer, will again place his steamer on an excursion run to Hood River, the first trip to be made on Thursday.

According to the information received this morning the Spencer will make a daily trip to the point on the upper Columbia above the Cascade Locks, with the exception of Wednesday, which will be her layover day.

In former seasons the Spencer has been on the excursion run to Hood River, but for the last two years she has not made excursions to that point, and it is thought that this popular trip with the traveling public.

The Spencer has been on the ways at the Portland Shipbuilding company's yards in South Portland for the last month or so, where she has been entirely overhauled and refitted for her present run. She has been painted inside and out and when she makes her first trip out Thursday morning will look like a new boat.

LOBSTERS STOP TRAMP Steamer Hermine Held Up by Sea of Crustaceans Off Mexican Coast.

A strange tale of how a big tramp steamer had her progress impeded by a sea of lobsters off the Mexican coast has just come to the local hydrographic office through Lieutenant A. B. Wyckoff, U. S. N., hydrographer at Port Townsend.

The captain's report is as follows: "On May 29, while the steamer was between Cape Corrientes and Cape San Lucas, she encountered a dense mass of small soft lobsters about 1 1/2 inches long. The steamer had to stop and a five gallon bucketful of small lobsters were taken from her circulation pump."

BRINGS LARGE CARGO Nome City Arrives With 50 Passengers and 900 Tons Freight.

After a deep sea voyage, the steamer Nome City, Captain Hansen, arrived at 8 o'clock this morning from San Diego by way of San Pedro and San Francisco, bringing 50 passengers and a large cargo of general freight.

On her last trip from this port the Nome City had grain for San Pedro and lumber for San Diego, and on her return she had more or less cargo from all of those ports. Her cargo consisted of 300 tons of asphaltum, 300 tons of cement and 200 tons of general merchandise.

ALONG THE WATERFRONT Carrying 38 passengers and 500 tons of general freight, the steamer Breakwater, Captain Macgregor, sailed this morning for Coos Bay.
