

STRIKE BREAKERS JOHN TEAMSTERS

Pickets Succeed in Keeping Men Off Wagons and Traffic Badly Crippled—Iron Workers Hold on Firmly.

Three nonunion drivers left their wagons this morning to affiliate with the teamsters' union. They were put on the street by the Employers and Daymen's associations in attempted fulfillment of the promise made Saturday that the transfer business of the city would be moving as usual today, in disregard of the strike.

In anticipation of the arrival of strikebreakers, all transfer barns affected by the strike were heavily picketed at an early hour this morning. Three nonunion drivers were sent out from as many transfer barns. No violence was necessary to persuade the strikebreakers to leave their work.

No Material Change. In the general strike situation there seems to be no material change. The jobs of millmen and daymen to meet union requirements. Four non union men were received this morning at the Willamette Iron & Steel works, which was posted nonunion Saturday. They were not former union men. The presence of William Hilgert, an expert machinist, to the works, was denied by a body of union pickets. When Hilgert persisted in his determination to go to work, he was jostled by the pickets. One of them, Hilgert, who was with him, drew a knife, and when attacked again cut one of the pickets in the arm. He was then allowed to go to work.

Both teamsters and machinists reaffirmed their conviction that they will win the strike. "We are fighting for principle more than are the employers," declared the head of the teamsters. "We have funds sufficient to carry us through and we are not losing any men."

Money Comes In. "Our treasury is being filled from outside unions," said Business Agent Carlson of the machinists. "We are not using any men, in spite of nonunion posters. The work of manufacturing machinists positively cannot proceed without the union men, and we will not go back to work until our demands are granted."

"Despite opinions to the contrary, there is not a better friend to the workmen than myself in the city of Portland," said W. E. Corbett, president of the Willamette Iron & Steel works, this morning. "I am willing to pay men all they deserve, even if it is more than the union men. My steadiest and best men are ready to come back on terms if they were not kept away by coercion. But the Willamette Iron & Steel works will shut down forever before we will be bossed by the unions or be governed by the closed shop policy."

POLICEMAN TAKES SHOT AT RACCOON

Patrolman R. L. Whitehead has out-gunned James Whitcomb Riley's famous bear story.

His story that of a raccoon, and is condensed into a short report made to Captain Slover last night. The report starts out by saying: "I chased a raccoon up a tree at Twenty-fourth and Hoyt streets this morning about 1:35 o'clock. The raccoon was on a limb and I tried to shake him off. The raccoon climbed back to the trunk of the tree and out on the second limb above my head. He was holding tight to the tree and was 18 feet from the ground."

FOREIGN SECRETARY ANSWERS ROOSEVELT

(United Press Special Wire.) London, June 12.—Sir Edward Grey, secretary of foreign affairs, today answered the criticism of England's policy in Egypt voiced by Colonel Theodore Roosevelt recently at Guildhall. Sir Edward declared that the government had complete confidence in Sir Eimon Gorst, consular general of Egypt and British agent in Cairo.

The reply of Sir Edward was received with special interest, as Roosevelt spent his last night in England as a guest at the country home of the foreign secretary.

SECRETARY MADE WAY INTO $775

Court Holds Deed to 1700 Acres of Land Passes Perfect Title.

The Rogue River Timber company was given title to 1700 acres of land in Jackson county by Judge Bean in the United States court this morning. At the same time the Victor Land company lost its contention that it should be considered owner of the property.

The Victor Land company brought suit some time ago to quiet title to the land. The difficulty arose over a couple of transfers made in 1902. The land formerly belonged to Aaron Wait, who died in 1898, leaving a will which named his son, Charles N. Wait, as his administrator. The administrator in settling the estate asked permission of the court to sell the lands under controversy. This permission was granted, and the land was sold to the Rogue River Timber company.

OVER 5000 PEOPLE AT O. A. C. JOBLEE

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.) Oregon Agricultural College, Corvallis, Or., June 12.—The big jubilee at O. A. C. is under way. Yesterday over 5000 people sat in the mammoth assembly and listened to Rev. Dr. E. W. Clappert, rector of Trinity church, who delivered the baccalaureate sermon and again preach at the evening service. Dr. Clappert's sermon was scholarly and his theme emphasizing uselessness of college education unless backed by character was masterful and impressive. He said the greatest weakness of American youth is in its lack of reverence and America's greatest need is intellect backed by character.

LAW RECOGNIZES TRIBAL MARRIAGE

Judge Bean Holds That Tribal Ceremonies Still Are Binding.

When an Indian man marries an Indian maid in the Indian way, he is within the protection of the white man's law, according to United States District Judge R. S. Bean, who said so this morning.

The reason for the judge's decision was litigation growing out of the title to certain lands on the Umatilla reservation, where Indians had married according to tribal customs, had been divorced, and finally had died, leaving the settlement of the estates to the care of the white man's court.

FROM EMERSON

Gypsy Violinist Captures the Heart of Philadelphia Girl and She Casts Off Bonds That Galled Her.

Mrs. Casper Emerson, Jr. wife of the well known Philadelphia artist, who was known to Portland, where she dined about for several months as the wife of "Dear Jack" Rigo, the Gypsy violinist, who played with his eyes as much as he did with his fiddle in one of the downtown cafes, was divorced in the courts of New York state last week.

Almost every one of the merry downtown set which makes its home in the grills knew the Rigos, and particularly the so-called Mrs. "Jack" Rigo, for she was, with her fair hair, expansive figure, bare, notoriously wide-plumed hats, flashy gowns and dazzling jewelry, the object of many a second look. But only a few knew she was the wife of the Philadelphia artist and daughter of Prof. J. E. Hadley, of Philadelphia, and a graduate of Wellesley college.

"I love my Rigo. If other men must love me it is quite hopeless, but my own risk," is the conclusion of an article ascribed to Mrs. Emerson, written several months ago. Now she is "on the road" with Rigo. She stayed with him while he filled an engagement in San Francisco, spent nearly a year with him in Portland and during a month or so ago, he took his orchestra to Seattle, where he is playing in the College Inn, she went with him. In Portland they lived together as husband and wife.

Mrs. "Jack" Rigo-Emerson was married to the Philadelphia artist when she was 17 years old. After her marriage she went to Europe to "study art." She went back to Emerson again, left him and then met "Dear Jack." She has been on the stage.

"Dear Jack" Rigo had already occupied space in the prints owing to his escapade with the Princess de Chimay, who was Clara Ward of Detroit, with whom the violinist eloped in 1896. This "romance" lasted until early in 1907. Then the princess became the wife of a railroad porter at Naples and Rigo returned to his country. While playing in the Harlem Casino, in New York city, he met Mrs. Emerson, who became infatuated with him.

"He is the dearest creature in the world," she told her interviewer. "He has the adorable nature of a little child. He loves me truly and with his simple nature cannot be restrained from showing it even in public. He kisses me in our automobile right in the street. At home he plays like a baby, sitting on the floor, singing and laughing."

In the article signed "Katherine Emerson" published in Philadelphia, the writer thus rhapsodizes about "My Jack":

"Sometimes the impulse is in me to describe impermissibly the great passion. Once I wrote or dictated these lines to me.

"My Janca! "If you to me should prove unkind, and I to you untrue, The winds that blow on the same, sweet heart, Just as it used to do.

"The stars will flutter in the sky, And the sun will kiss the sea; The winds through the trees will whistle, And laugh at you and me.

"But the world won't seem so kind to me, As it now seems to two; So I think that you had best be kind, And I had better love you true. And I'd love love love love, sweetheart, Just as it used to do."
