Feel So Sore Couldn't Walk Down Stairs—

TIZ Cured Her Quick

If you have sore feet, tired feet, sweaty feet, lame feet, tender feet, smelly feet, corns, callouses or bunions, read what happened to Mrs. Crockett, of Jeffersonville. TIZ DID IT. Mr. Crockett says: "After the second treatment she walked downstairs one foot at a time. She has not been able to walk downstairs before in past five years, except by stepping down on each step with one foot at a time. This is remarkable. Send five more boxes."

No matter what ails your feet or what under heaven you have used without getting relief, just use T I Z. It's different. It acts right off. It cures sore feet to stay cured. It's the only foot remedy ever made which acts on the principle of drawing out all the poisonous exudations which cause sore feet. Powders and other remedies merely clog up the pores. TIZ cleans them out and keeps them clean. You will feel better the first time it's used. Use it a week and you can forget you ever had sore feet. There is nothing on earth that can compare with it. TIZ is for sale at all druggists, 25c per box, or direct, if you wish, from Walter Luther Dodge & Co., Chicago, Ill. Recommended and sold by Cherry Omelet.

DRAIN the liquor from a can of cherries and chop the fruit coarsely, reserve a dozen or 15 of the cherries whole; and three tablespoonfuls of the cherry juice; bring it to a boiling point and keep hot in a double boiler while preparing the omelet. Beat the yolks of five eggs light; add two heaping tablespoonfuls of white sugar, and whip in the whites, which should be very stiff; melt a spoonful of butter in a hot omelet pan, and pour in the omelet. Cook until set; spread upon one-half of the omelet the minced cherries. Sprinkle with white sugar, fold the other half of the omelet over the fruit; put on a heated platter, and place the whole cherries around the edge of the dish. Serve at once with the hot cherry sauce. Fresh cherries in season can be substituted for canned cherries.

FLAMES LICK OUTSKIRTS OF TOWNS ABOUT STATE

of feet of the most valuable timber are being burned. The only fire fighters in the section are some forest rangers, whose numbers are known to be few. No deaths have been reported, but such intelligence is hourly expected.

Thus far forest rangers and citizens have been able to prevent forest fires on the Upper Calapooia in Linn county, where some of the finest timber in the northwest is located. Some small fires have been reported from that locality, but so far they have been extinguished without great damage to standing timber, or loss of life.

DALLAS, IN POLK, REPORTS DAMAGE FROM BIG FIRES

Dallas, Or., July 21.—The heat here during the last few days has caused the thermometer to register almost 100 degrees. Yesterday the atmosphere was filled with smoke from the forest fires above Black Rock. Considerable damage has been done by the fires in the timber west of Falls City. Logging camps have shut down and the men are fighting the flames. Tanbark camps are closed, many valuable claims are being injured and the inhabitants of the mountain region are hoping for rain to quench the flames.

RAIN HELPS FIGHTERS AND CATHLAMET FIRES ARE NOW ALMOST OUT

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)

Astoria, Or., July 21.—The steamer Julia B. arrived this noon from Cathlamet and way points, and Captain Babbidge reports that the forest fires five miles in the Bradley logging camp have been almost put out, and that further danger is not imminent. In the Grays river district the flames have been overcome and no further damage is reported. In the region back of Brookfield 800 acres have been burned over, about 200 cords of wood being destroyed. It is now raining slightly with indications of continuance. If so, for 24 hours, all the fires will be subdued.

BOOTH-KELLY COMPANY FIGHTS FOREST FIRES IN EUGENE VICINAGE

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)

Eugene, Or., July 21.—The Booth-Kelly Lumber company reports a bad forest fire above its logging camps near Wendling, 20 miles northeast of Eugene. The fire started about a week ago on a tract that had been logged off and up to yesterday it was thought to have been entirely under control. Rain will be the only means of checking its ravages.

ONLY RAIN CAN REMOVE DANGER— COTTAGE GROVE

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)

Cottage Grove, Or., July 21.—This section was in a dense smoke last night from forest fires at the head of the valley, principally near Wendling, where a considerable area of logged off land belonging to the Booth-Kelly Lumber company is on fire, reaching out towards much valuable timber. In this immediate section no damage has been done, though unless rains are had soon there is great danger.

Some Manifestations of Charity

By Jean Dare.

TWO incidents of recent date throw interesting sidelights on the contradictions of humanity. Just 21 weeks ago, a little manicure lady who had been a member of the Y. W. C. A. for five years called at the new home on Sixth and Taylor streets. The elevator boy was missing. In his absence, one of the girls at the desk offered to take her upstairs. The girl did not understand the working of the elevator, although it was evidently her business to manage it during the boy's absence.

Results, the elevator shot up three flights of stairs uncontrolled, the manicure's leg was caught between the elevator and the floor, and her leg was frightfully crushed and lacerated. She is now in her twenty-second week at the Good Samaritan hospital. Her friends appealed to the Y. W. C. A. for financial aid to defray the hospital expenses. Three days after the accident, the association sent an agent to the hospital, saying that the Y. W. C. A. would not be responsible for any expenses contracted by the manicure. In addition, the authorities refused to answer any question about the accident, or in any way take cognizance of it.

At the Lyric theatre there is a little chorus girl, Marjorie Mahr, whose story everybody knows. After her accident a week ago Sunday, she, too, was taken to the Good Samaritan hospital. The Lyric Theatre company left instructions that the little cripple should have the best of care and no expense be spared. The theatre would be responsible for all bills incurred.

The next step was to locate the girl's husband, and send for him. Not only send for him, but telegraph him the money to defray the expenses of the journey from California. Then, a monster benefit was started by the theatre people under the auspices of the newspapers. All Portland has interested itself in the cause, and it is expected that the result will be one of the biggest charity affairs in the history of Portland.

A prominent worker in the Y. W. C. A., when told of Marjorie Mahr's misfortune, said: "If the girl had not been working in vaudeville on Sunday, the accident would probably not have happened. It is the judgment of God." Woman of professed Christianity and Godliness, what about the manicure lady? Was hers, too, the judgment of God, and even so, should not a slight effort be made to help a human being in distress? The writer knows little about the Y. W. C. A., but she knows that theory and talk do not count much when actions and proof of Christian feeling are lacking. The Y. W. C. A. undoubtedly does a good work, but it has yet something to learn from the theatre about charity.

In cases of distress, there is something fine and splendid about theatrical folk of whatever level. They are the most unselfish fighters on earth and the stanchest friends in trouble. They stand head and shoulders above any charity organization, in being always ready to step into the breach to help a fellow craftsman when he's down.

While other organizations are waxing sentimental over the closing of vaudeville houses on Sunday and saving the heathen in foreign lands, the theatrical folk are paying the rents and filling the mouths of the hungry. The Actors fund of America is a splendid testimonial to the charity of the theatre. I would rather trust my cause to one eccentric, self loving, praise eating actor than to any charity organization on earth, when it comes to devotion that asks no questions, but just "devotes."

IRISHMEN WITH GERMANS IN WAR AGAINST ENGLAND

sides. Ireland shall be a free nation."

The banquet last night was the greatest ever spread before a Portland assemblage. There were present Hibernian leaders from nearly every state and from Canada. They were seated at glittering tables extending the whole great length of the room. Round about and above them were twined the Irish green and gold with the Stars and Stripes and the scene was impressive beyond forgetting.

Typical Irish Gathering.

"No purer Irish blood flows in the veins of those who live in Dublin or Cork than that which flows in the veins of those who are here tonight," said President Cummings during his address, and it was so.

It was a gathering typically Irish. Under the spell of Irish music and Irish eloquence they were swayed from storm-like applause to Gaelic merriment. When the music tangled itself with the heart-strings, with songs of the motherland and the speakers touched with pathos the eight centuries' struggle for Irish freedom, the tears were frankly shed. When the appeal was to their American citizenship and their loyalty to the flag, all were spontaneously on their feet cheering wildly and the lights were not brighter than their faces. When the middle of the night had come and the music stilled and the toasts were ended they were still slow to separate from each other.

"The Holy Father" was the first toast proposed and the response from Archbishop Christie was: "If others turn against him and his church we shall still be his faithful children; we will still acknowledge him, Pope Pius X, the pope of the living God."

Patriotic Expressions.

"Our Country: Our President," brought Bishop Carroll of Montana to his feet with a ringing: "May my right arm be withered and my tongue cleave to my jaws if I forget thee, O Columbia! If I make thee not the beginning and the end."

"A flash of color in the sky of liberty," exclaimed T. B. Minahan impassionedly, when he responded to the toast, "The Flag."

"The flag, the harp and the shamrock have always been planted side by side, whether in peace or where the blossoms of blood bloomed upon it on the field of war," he concluded.

Miss Anna C. Malia gave brief tribute to the work being done by the ladies' auxiliary, naming it "the largest organization in the world of women of one race and one faith."

Ex-Governor Joseph W. Folk of Missouri, arriving late, gave unqualified approval to Irish-American plans for home rule in Ireland. Professor Michael G. Rohan, Irish historian, mingled quaint humor in his toast to "Commodore Barry."

"The Study of Irish History," was a toast to which Mrs. Ellen Ryan Jolly responded seriously, regarding it, as she does, as a matter of paramount importance in the life both of the A. O. H. and the ladies' auxiliary.

Music Good.

Dr. Andrew C. Smith, the toastmaster, was called away and his place was taken soon after the speaking began by J. Hennessey Murphy.

The music of last night deserves unqualified approval and praise. The directorship of Professor Frederick W. Goodrich was masterful. The Capello chorus sang beautifully every number, but it sang best "The Wearin' of the Green," which had been especially arranged for the occasion by Professor Goodrich. Mrs. Ray Sullivan sang with splendid power first the "Star Spangled Banner," then "Killarney." Frank Hennessy was given an ovation of applause in approval of his singing of "My Own United States." Among orchestral numbers by far the best was "Tone Pictures of the North and South." There was an appeal to every lover of distinctive national songs in this selection.

Former Governor Claude A. Swanson of Virginia, who is slated to succeed the late John W. Daniel in the United States senate, served two terms in the lower branch of congress, resigning his seat in 1906 to accept the governorship. He is 48 years old and a native of Virginia. Beginning his career as a store clerk, he worked his way through the University of Virginia and later became prominent as a lawyer.

GUN ACCIDENT AT TARGET PRACTICE; TEN MEN KILLED

dead was fixed at ten and those fatally injured at two. Lieutenant Van Dusen is the only commissioned officer hurt. He was in charge of the firing squad.

General Carlos, in an official report to the war department, says:

"I regret to report that an accident at the commencement of the student officers' battle practice with two 12 inch guns, resulting probably from premature explosion, caused the death of eight men and probably fatally injured two. Lieutenant Van Dusen suffered a broken leg and three men were slightly injured. An investigation is in progress."

The target practice referred to by General Carlos in his report was the final events in a course of instruction of 30 officers of the artillery corps who are attending the artillery school at Fortress Monroe.

When the accident occurred five batteries were making ready to fire at a target 6000 yards away across Hampton Roads.

Although the official statement does not give in detail the cause of the accident, it is generally believed here that the premature explosion was caused by closing the breech before the firing pin had been drawn back.

The official statement issued by the war department says that the accident was caused by a breech block explosion.

Norfolk, Va., July 21.—The almost instant death of 10 men, the fatal injury of two others and serious injury of several more in an explosion of a 12-inch coast defense gun of the De Russey battery at Fortress Monroe today promises one of the strictest and most important official inquiries in the history of the artillery corps. The men who met death and injury were trying out a new battle practice in which the guns of five batteries were discharged simultaneously at a target. In addition to the desire to hit the target was the anxiety of the gunners to be the first in obeying the firing signal.

The experiment was being held under the eyes of General Carter, assistant chief of staff of the army, and of Colonel Bailey, assistant chief of the coast artillery.

The explosion is believed to have been caused by the premature closing of the breech block before the firing pin had been drawn back.

Frequently in target practice, according to artillery officers, expert gunners will set the trigger so that the shell is exploded as soon as the block is closed. The safer way is to close the lock and then pull the trigger; this, however, causes delay when rapid firing records are being sought.

M'CREDIE DEFENDS UNCLE JOE CANNON AS GOOD AND TRUE

ciple and would not butcher one of our good men.

"One of the regulars stepped into the aisle and said that though he were consigned to political death, which he probably would be in his district, as it was against Cannon, he would not betray and desert at that moment. If there was one member in the house I wanted to see renominated it was that one. I shall not tell you who he was, but he was renominated; he would make an excellent speaker.

"One insurgent paid a tribute to Cannon by saying that he was rugged, honest, downright and loved his country, but followed up by saying that Joe was in bad company and that he was sorry; that it was necessary to break a good man in order to break a system which was rotten to the core."

McCredie said insurgency was no new thing; that President James K. Polk prepared a diary in which he complained bitterly of insurgency, which, at that time, consisted of a faction of Republicans and Democrats. There were insurgents at the time of Washington and Lincoln, he said, and he produced and read newspaper clippings to bear out the assertion.

When asked if the national committee would help an insurgent, he said it was unlikely that the committee would help elect a man to return to Washington to fight them. The question came from a Democrat. He said La Follette was the father of the present wave of insurgency and, naturally, the representatives of Wisconsin were with him.

Speaking of himself, McCredie said: "I never abused an opponent. If principle is right, it should prevail in preference to the man."

He paid a glowing tribute to President Taft and said that through his gentlemanly, conservative and business-like acts, this congress had passed more legislation in keeping with the administration than any other congress. He took credit for an amendment in favor of the homesteader. He said he was fortunate in getting through three appropriations for his district and that now Vancouver had an appropriation for a site for a federal building at a cost of $100,000.
