WARREN HARDING AND STANDPATISM FOR G. O. P. IN OHIO

corporation officials in case trust laws are violated.

Taft Endorsed.
The plank referring to Taft reads: "We commend in highest terms the splendid administration of President William Howard Taft, and are proud of the results he has achieved in 17 months in office. We pledge him our hearty and united support and endorse him for re-nomination in 1912."

"The record of the achievements of the administration and of the sixty-first congress is unequalled in history and guarantees adherence to the pledges of the last Republican national platform. The election of a Republican congress is imperatively necessary to the accomplishment of the entire program of the administration. The tariff has been reduced in accordance with the Republican doctrine of protection of home industries and American labor. Congress has not raised the duty on a single common food product. The tariff affords no more than an adequate protection to the industries of the nation, fair to consumers and producers. The tariff law has ever been most unjustly assailed. It has justified the expectations of its friends, turning the national deficit into a surplus and reducing the average rate on all commodities. The maximum and minimum rates operate to give use for the first time an equal opportunity with nations for foreign trade."

The document is the strongest "standpat" platform that has been presented in Ohio for many years.
Garfield's Withdrawal.
Garfield soon after the adoption of the platform announced his withdrawal from the gubernatorial race. He declared he could not be a candidate on such a platform. His leading supporters failed to get into the fight for him. He was outgeneraled by the standpaters and the progressives were put to rout when the final test came.

It was expected that Congressman Howland would present a minority report, but he failed to do so. Garfield and Howland conferred this morning and they conferred for a short time but it is said reached no understanding regarding the progressive fight. Progressive supporters at first accused Garfield of

MARGUERITE AND DICK

By Jean Dore.
MARGUERITE is a splendid young girl, distinctly feminine and charming. She graduated in June, and is fairly bubbling over with plans for the future. A career in the dazzling ball that is beckoning her. At college she was accounted clever with her pen, and now she has ambitions to write a book, to be a famous litterateur. True, her powers have never been put to the test, but Marguerite is perfectly sure of herself, and more than sanguine of the future.

Dick is a fine, clean cut young chap. He is madly in love with Marguerite. He has loved her since she was a wee bit of a girl with a love that has never faltered. He is always patient and forgiving. He worships Marguerite, and is equal to all her little moods and whims.

When I asked Marguerite what was to become of Dick, she only laughed and said, "Oh, Dick, is such a nice chap, but I couldn't really give up my career for him, Jean, dear. My work will always satisfy—always fill my life. I don't need Dick." I did not tell Marguerite of a woman whom I know who has climbed to the dizzy heights of the ladder of fame. Ethel and I were girls together. When I called upon her in her palace of luxury and fame she fluttered into my arms and nestled like a poor little bruised birdling. "Jean, to have just one glimpse of a heart that once loved me I'd gladly welcome failure, privation, even want. To have some one to care for me and to be kind to me, spontaneously. I'm the most miserable woman in the world." And that woman's name is on every lip. All low-low and kneel before her, and are sent into realms of delight with just one smile from her famous mouth.

Foolish, self-absorbed little dream-girl! Marguerite has not yet learned that accomplishment is not everything in a woman's life. She does not know that the time will come when sheer loneliness and the pain of heart hunger will almost treason. Howland finally declared he had not prepared any minority report and rushed to the convention hall.

The progressives expected, after the Dick platform was read, that Howland would present a minority report. They were dumfounded when Howland refused to present such a report. The collapse of the platform fight ended Garfield's contest in the convention.

Friends of Garfield declare they never intended to present his name to the convention. Garfield said it would have been futile to make a fight for the adoption of the platform he favored.

"The progressives accomplished much, in spite of appearances," Garfield said. He refused to discuss his plans for the future, declaring, however, that he would continue the fight for progressive Republican principles.

CHAUFFEUR IS HELD FOR INVESTIGATION

An inquest will be held this afternoon to investigate the death of Herman Heisig, aged 13, who was struck by an automobile yesterday afternoon at East Morrison and East Sixth streets and died shortly afterward at St. Vincent's hospital. Thomas Magers, the chauffeur, is held as a witness for the case. He is a German, but stories told by witnesses tend to exonerate him from blame.

Heisig was riding on a wagon going south on East Sixth street when Magers approached on Morrison and slowed up to permit the wagon to pass. Heisig is said to have jumped off the vehicle directly in front of the auto and though Magers tried to veer to one side and avoid striking him, the rear wheel passed over Heisig.

He was taken to the office of Dr. Ravenna Spurrier and the physician afterward sent him to St. Vincent's hospital. The boy died before his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Heisig, Fifty-sixth and Ash streets, could reach his bedside.

Detectives Mallett and Craddock were detailed to investigate the matter by Captain Moore and took Magers in charge. The latter is a licensed chauffeur and at the time of the accident was driving the machine of Albert Welch, a contractor. Magers came to Portland from The Dalles, where his parents reside.

CRIPPLED CHORUS GIRL FUND PASSES MARK OF $5000

At Noon the Marjorie Mahr Fund Totaled $5331.19—Benefit Performances Prove Great Success.

Fund Still Growing.
O. C. Letter, treasurer of the Marjorie Mahr fund, reported at noon today that the fund had reached $5331.19. In this amount $136.75 received from the sale of candy in the lobby of the theatre is not included.
Checks are still coming in, and patronesses of the fund said today they believe it may go to more than $6000 before the day is over. Mrs. John K. Kolloch sent in $25 yesterday, which she had collected among her friends. A check was received by The Journal this morning for $2.50 with the request to report as cash.

More than $5000 will be the amount turned over to Miss Marjorie Mahr, pretty chorus girl whose legs were crushed two weeks ago, when custodians of the fund raised for her benefit make an accounting today or tomorrow.
Money poured into the box office of the Lyric theatre, where the benefit performance for the maimed girl was held last night. Added to receipts from the sale of tickets and contribution, it undoubtedly will aggregate in the neighborhood of $5000.

Portland has not before seen such a climax to a charitable movement as that which occurred at the Seventh street theatre last night. Arrangements had been made to start the first performance at 7:15 o'clock. Long before that time the lobby of the theatre and street in front of it were crowded with a throng which pushed to gain entrance to the show house.

San Francisco has ordered down all the overhead wires.

BAIL IS REDUCED, GRAY IS RELEASED

Fred B. Gray, Charged With Misusing Mails, Furnishes $1000 Bail; Leaves Jail.

Fred B. Gray, waiting for the action of the federal grand jury under a charge of having used the mails wrongfully in a swindling operation, was released from the county jail this morning upon furnishing $1,000 cash bail.

Gray is the man who is charged with swindling various people by means of a fake commission house on the east side. He left Portland and went to Seaside, where he was arrested by Deputy United States Marshal Hammersley, escaping from the officer by climbing through a kitchen window at his home while his wife kept up a conversation to deceive the officer.

Hammersley caught Gray after chasing him from Seaside to Tillamook City, and the prisoner was bound over to await the action of the grand jury under $2,000 bonds. This morning, upon motion of his attorneys, the bail was reduced to $1,000. The money was paid by his attorneys, John H. Stevenson and John P. Logan. It is believed that Mrs. Gray furnished the money as she is known to have considerable means. Gray has been in the county jail for more than a month.
