

DISCOVERIES OF FRIENDSHIPS SERMON'S TEXT

Dr. Luther R. Dyott Points to Life of Christ as Standard to Be Followed by All Christian Peoples.

"The Discoveries of Friendship" was the title of the sermon delivered by Rev. Luther R. Dyott, pastor of the First Congregational church, yesterday morning at 11 o'clock.

He said: "The price of excellence is superlative qualities, sustained by adequate personality. In the life of souls set at the accents of illumined vocation, and uncompromisingly loyal to the highest ideals and noblest aspirations, moral and spiritual imperatives utterly transcend clever expediency and calculating opportunism."

"To live under this dominion means that we move unwaveringly along the path of choice as if impelled by strict necessity, and thus we join the freedom of heaven in the heart of truth with the service of earth in the heart of duty, and demonstrate that grandeur is high, our dust and God is in man."

Jesus Was Ideal Man. "Jesus was not only the son of God, but ideal man in real application to the problems of life. He was always under the control of the necessary imperative, from the time he said, 'I must be about my father's business,' until, with eyes swimming in death, he lowered his head upon the cross and said, 'It is finished.' Hence, in connection with the episode from which our texts are taken, it is said, 'He must needs go through Samaria.' Other Jews of his day would not have done that. It would not have been in keeping with their prejudices and customs if they had done so."

Should Do the Right. "Even today some of the followers of Christ are inclined to say, 'When in Rome, do as the Romans do,' but we ought to do that which is right, whether in Rome or anywhere else. An ounce of right is worth more than a ton of expediency, and a handful of good life is more valuable than garners of musty wheat hidden in an admixture of vigorous tares."

The Jews and Samaritans hated one another, and they had old grudges which had become stale and sour. Jesus had to go through Samaria, not because of physical necessity, but because of the divinity and democracy of his friendship. He sat by Jacob's well, not merely because he was weary, hungry and thirsty, but because his providence would compel him there to meet a sinful woman of Samaria and give him a chance to rekindle the friendship of his friendship. He sat by Jacob's well, not merely because he was weary, hungry and thirsty, but because his providence would compel him there to meet a sinful woman of Samaria and give him a chance to rekindle the friendship of his friendship."

Eschewing the commonplace and conventional teachings of our texts and certain obvious and stock truths, I would have you observe that the deeper meaning is here found by considering this practical theme, 'The Discoveries of Friendship.' First, we find in this discovery that friendship itself is, or should be, infinitely more than the poor little thing which some would make of it. It is not the mere luxury for which the hypocrite would be known, but the propensities and more propinquity and congenial affluities. Friendship may, indeed, at times have its specialities, and even a certain pardonable favoritism. But it dare not stop there, without finding the peril of stulticity. It is not in reality the friend of any person who is not a friend of every person."

Savior Exemplified Friendship. "Hence, the discovery of friendship in the universality and catholicity of its application, rather than its own essential and immediate perfection. The Savior exemplified it in its universality and catholicity, wherever he went, and he made no exception of this sinful Samaritan woman. The woman was treated in its nascent incipency. She was not good, but she was good enough for the Savior of the world to ask her to give him a drink of water from the old well. She could, at least, do that much, though, indeed, she became so confused that she went away and forgot her water pot, but afterwards she had power enough to move a whole town in the name of Christ as she said, 'Come and see a man who told me all that I ever did.'"

Christ's friendship had begun by asking a favor of her; it had continued by exposing her life to herself and her conscience; it reached its climax in thoughts of God, and the imperial impulse to duty. "The friendship is not the soft thing that forever prides itself on showing us to ourselves, exposes our faults, our sins, our imperfections, and helps us to overcome all these things, and compels us to be of service to other people. He is your friend who compels you to be your best and to do your best."

Friendship Points Faults. "There is not as much friendship in the hand that makes our pillow soft for us to rest upon as there is in the finger which points out the way of duty, and the voice which moves us to go where we ought to go, and to do what we ought to do. Let us resolve, therefore, to keep our lives under the imperative which should make us the friends of all mankind. Not only those who are good and pleasing to us, but those who are not good, and in need of practical friendship."

Let us, furthermore, be good enough to our friends, and loved ones to show them their faults, and help them overcome the same. Let them reciprocate by doing as much for us. Moreover, let us get nearer to life as it actually is and prove our friendship by doing that which needs to be done. Let me live in the house by the side of the road, where the race of man goes by, the men who are good, and the men who are bad, as good and bad as I."

HEALTH SEEKING UNIVERSAL

Dr. Brougher Greets Former Congregation With Interesting Sermon. Testifying their affection for their former pastor, two immense audiences greeted Dr. J. Whitcomb Brougher at the White Temple yesterday upon the occasion of his first visit to Portland since taking up his new duties at Los Angeles last February. At the morning service the big auditorium was comfortably filled and in the evening both rooms were filled to overflowing. Dr. Brougher chose for the text of his evening sermon the words of the Apostle Paul, "May your spirit and soul and body be preserved entire, unto the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ."

He said in part as follows: "More people are looking for health and happiness than anything else in the world. If they work for money, it is that they may get by means of it health and happiness. The New Testament recognizes this fact. Jesus Christ healed the sick and was interested in the bodies of men. He came to seek and save that which was lost. He came to save the whole land. In fact, the 'holy' man in the truest sense of that term is a 'whole' man. He is wholly saved—body, mind and spirit."

"The tendency of the church has been to care for the souls of men and neglect their physical needs to the gymnasium and their mental needs to the public schools. But more and more the church is coming to realize that it must deal with the whole man, body, mind and soul. I do not mean to say that the chief object of Christianity is to give a well body. But it does have regard to the well being of the body. In the vision of John the leaves of a tree were for the healing of the nation. The tree was to bear fruit, but as a side issue the leaves were for the healing of the nation. Health and happiness have much to do with each other. A Christian man ought to present body, mind and soul developed in perfect harmony with God's laws. As a matter of fact, people are coming to learn that they cannot ignore the laws of God in any sphere and have health and happiness."

Health and happiness depend upon the proper care of the body, upon a proper state of the mind and upon our spiritual ideals and achievements. Right and wrong do not mix. I say it reverently, there are some things that God Almighty cannot do. God has not arranged for a man to grow another arm in this life if he loses the one he has. The man who is going to enjoy health and happiness must seek to live a clean life and have a clear conscience before God and man. He must be delivered from his own selfishness. Selfishness is the root out of which all evils and vices grow. It is impossible for a selfish man to be happy. He cannot always have the thing that pleases. The man who has yielded up his selfishness and taken the unselfish spirit of Jesus Christ will find that life has a new vision and a new meaning."

Jesus Was Ideal Man. "Jesus was not only the son of God, but ideal man in real application to the problems of life. He was always under the control of the necessary imperative, from the time he said, 'I must be about my father's business,' until, with eyes swimming in death, he lowered his head upon the cross and said, 'It is finished.' Hence, in connection with the episode from which our texts are taken, it is said, 'He must needs go through Samaria.' Other Jews of his day would not have done that. It would not have been in keeping with their prejudices and customs if they had done so."

CENTENARY TODAY OF GEN. JOHN B. MAGRUDER

Richmond, Va., Aug. 15.—Today marked the centenary of General John B. Magruder, one of the most famous military sons of Virginia. General Magruder was born in Winchester, this state, August 15, 1810, and graduated from the West Point military academy in 1830. He served with distinction in the war with Mexico, but his fame rests chiefly upon his services as an officer of the Confederate States army. For several weeks, until incapacitated by illness, he successfully resisted the advance of McClellan's army. Subsequently he was given command of the department of Texas and succeeded in recapturing the city of Galveston from the Federals. After the war he lived for a time in Mexico and then returned to Houston, where his death occurred in 1871.

NO NEWS RECEIVED OF C. A. ROSENBAUM

Sales Manager of Coal Company Believed by Friends to Have Killed Himself.

Mystery still shrouds the disappearance of C. A. Rosenbaum, sales manager of the Pacific Coal & Gas company, who has not been heard from since Thursday, when James Sargent, auditor of the Hotel Portland company, got a letter from him threatening suicide.

Rosenbaum's accounts have been gone over carefully by officers of the company, and are said to be straight. No reason for Rosenbaum to either kill himself or run away is known except that a few small checks that he drew were returned by the banks marked "No funds."

So far as the officers have been able to find Rosenbaum took nothing with him, not so much extra clothing as could be carried in a hand satchel. He left all his personal effects and clothing, letters, photographs and accounts. For that reason his friends fear he killed himself, and do not believe he went to Spokane, as the police of Vancouver, Wash., reported.

Rosenbaum, whose brother is a prominent attorney of Seattle, came to Portland about three weeks ago and opened offices for the Pacific Coal & Gas company, which operates mines at Tenino, Wash., in the Hotel Portland, occupying suite J. He seemed well content with his business affairs and no one suspected his mind was troubled. The first intimation of his departure was received Thursday morning in a letter to James Sargent. Rosenbaum had written it on the note paper of the Hotel Columbia, Vancouver, Wash., and mailed it the night before. Rosenbaum said that when the letter was received he would be dead.

Mr. Sargent spread the alarm. Investigation made by the police showed that Rosenbaum had written the letter in the Hotel Columbia about 5 o'clock Wednesday afternoon, and had inquired about the departing time of the North Bank train bound for Spokane. Then they found persons who said they saw a man answering Rosenbaum's description get aboard the train that left Vancouver shortly after 7 o'clock that night for Spokane.

Rosenbaum's friends are more inclined to believe he has killed himself than that he has run away from small debts. They have begun a country wide search for him.

BAND CONCERTS WILL END NEXT SUNDAY. The next Sunday afternoon concert in City park will be the last of the series this season and will mark the close of a most successful season. A program of special merit, such as is seldom played by the largest visiting bands of the country, will be put on. Possibly a vocal soloist will be added to the features.

Yesterday afternoon's concert was most enjoyed by the many thousands who spent the afternoon in the park, principally to hear the music. The big numbers were overture to "Der Freischutz," by Von Weber, Verdi's "Aida," and Balfe's "Bohemian Girl," all of them excellently rendered. Director Charles L. Brown, connected with his left arm in a sling, the limb having been broken at the elbow in the street car collision on the Oregon City line early Saturday morning.

The concert began at 3:15 with Chopin's dirge in honor of the memory of the late Harvey W. Scott, and most men in the audience bared their heads during the strains of the solemn music. Opening of the concert had been delayed 45 minutes because the band had been selected to attend the funeral of Mr. Scott.

The midweek concert will be held next Wednesday evening at Ladd park, between Sunnyside and Laurelhurst, on the Sunnyside line over the Morrison bridge.
