IN SOCIETY

Two events of unusual interest claimed the attention of society last night. The Gaynor concert at Masonic Temple brought together a brilliant audience of society folk and music lovers, who were more than charmed by the delightful program given by Mrs. Gaynor and her two attractive daughters, the Misses Rose and Dorothy Gaynor. At Christensen's hall the younger set were enjoying the first subscription dance of the season. Many charming new gowns were in evidence and the event was quite the most successful of the sort yet given.

In compliment to Miss Eleanor Booth of New York, the house guest of Miss Genevieve Thompson, a theatre party was given at the Orpheum Wednesday with supper following at the Portland grill. Those who were asked to enjoy the evening with Miss Booth were Mr. and Mrs. Wilson Clarke, Miss Genevieve Thompson, Miss Madia Hart, Miss Louise Carey, Miss Anita Burns, Miss Meta Buchner, Miss Elizabeth Stewart, John Banks, Sturgis Rodine, Maurice Deley, Arthur Mears, Carlton Hudson, Lester Hodson and Phillip Fry.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter John Burns have sent out invitations for a dancing party Thursday evening, October 27, in Murdock hall.

Miss Winnifred Loomis of Ellensburg, Wash., has been the guest of Mrs. Edmond J. Labbe since Wednesday, having come down for the subscription dance last night at Christensen's hall. Miss Loomis was recently a guest in Tacoma, her former home.

Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Hixon Reads (Miss Helene White) left yesterday from Tacoma for an extended eastern trip. They will stop a week in St. Paul, Mr. Reads' former home, and visit with relatives. New York, Boston, Baltimore, Washington and Princeton, N. J., will be included in their itinerary. Football games between Yale and Princeton and Yale and Harvard at New Haven and later the Minnesota-Chicago game in Minneapolis will claim their attention.

Miss Kate Cameron Simmons and Miss Dorothea Nash have taken an attractive apartment at Ionian Court, on Couch street, for the winter. Yesterday afternoon a few friends came in very informally to tea.

Mrs. Jay Smith entertained informally with six tables of bridge Wednesday in compliment to her cousin from Salt Lake, Mrs. James Hogle. All through the rooms were American beauty roses and yellow chrysanthemums, and the prize, a beautiful bouquet, was carried off by Mrs. Ben Trunkman. Mrs. Hogle is returning from California where she and Mr. Hogle have been sojourning since their marriage about two months ago. Mrs. Hogle was Miss Mary Copley and is a direct descendant of Copley, American painter, who is most widely known from the Copley prints.

One of the largest bridge parties of the season was given Wednesday by Mrs. Le Roy H. Parker in her beautiful home at Main and St. Clair. The rooms carried artistic decorations which

THINGS OF BEAUTY

By Darra More.
EVERY woman owes it to herself, to her family and to the world in general, the sacred obligation to be a thing of beauty. No matter what an ugly duckling a girl or woman may be, if properly clothed and well mannered, she may add immeasurably to the beauty of the world. There are few walks of life wherein the smartly garbed and good mannered girl does not have the field all to herself.

Did you ever slip quietly into a meeting of the maligned Association of Intellectual Women, whose purposes are to elevate the condition of the working girl? They are a strangely clad lot usually; their nails are seldom manicured; their hair bears marks of neglect; they always wear shirt waists and skirts, and shoes that are "run over" at the heel. These same women go about trying to gain favors from men; they ask them for money; they ask them for legislation; they ask them for all manner of indulgences. And they wonder why their efforts are comparatively fruitless. Man has to be interested, dazzled, or even shocked in these days of the blouse and the sash. It sometimes takes a savage to gain his attention, and always a close to reach it. Until these organizations learn what a delicate job it requires to manage the masculine mind, it were much wiser for them to give their time and skill to the service of their families.

A nice little woman who numbers a husband among her assets telephoned a few days ago to say that she was in great trouble. She had been to a bridge party, and husband had devoted his entire evening to Miriam Lee. I asked the wife why she wore to the bridge party. She didn't bother to get into anything blended beautifully with the various hangings. Twenty-three tables were played and a souvenir awarded at each table. Mrs. Parker was assisted by Miss Ella Stevens.

CLUB DENOUNCES PORT COMMISSION

Members of the Port of Portland were last night denounced by the Brooklyn Improvement club as obstructionists having a selfish interest in the delay of the Broadway bridge. This club further unanimously voted to offer its support to the north east side improvement club that have worked for the bridge. The Brooklyn club met at 577 Powell street, and adopted the following resolution:

"Whereas, There is a tendency to delay and prevent the erection of the Broadway bridge by the Port of Portland commission and by others who have a selfish interest in preventing its erection, and as the Broadway bridge is needed by the northeast side, having resolved a large majority at the last municipal election; therefore, be it

"Resolved, By the Brooklyn Improvement club, that we express our disapproval of these efforts to delay the erection of this bridge by the Port of Portland commission and others, and commend the stand taken by Mayor Simon; that no more delays will be tolerated; and furthermore, that we extend our sympathies and cooperation to the people of the northeast side in their fight for this bridge."

MERCHANTS TO TALK PROSPERITY

Under the auspices of the transportation committee of the Portland chamber of commerce a meeting will be held this evening in the convention hall of the Portland Commercial club. The purpose will be to discuss transportation problems affecting the shipping situation of Portland and Oregon. It is expected that the hall will be well filled.

In a circular letter Chairman H. Wittenberg of the committee calls particular attention to the remarkable growth of the city of Portland as well as the state of Oregon during the past few years. He says it is simply phenomenal. And every jobber, manufacturer and merchant is sharing in the commercial prosperity of the city and state.

"It has undoubtedly occurred to you many times, how hard it is to maintain this prosperity and commercial development, in view of similar progress by other cities on this coast and in the interior of our western states," says the letter.

"No community or state can ever become great commercially without ample transportation facilities and reasonable freight charges by rail and water, on both the products of the soil and the output of its factories and jobbing houses.

"The entire country is about to experience a complete readjustment of its freight rates on practically every commodity consumed, and therefore, every commercial interest of Portland will, in a measure, be affected. Addresses will be made by those thoroughly familiar with our transportation problems, and who will explain in a careful, yet simple manner, Portland's wonderful advantages and opportunities as a transportation center.

"This is considered a splendid opportunity of becoming better acquainted with a subject which very few people have given time to properly investigate, and yet it is daily affecting their interests and the future welfare of the community."

NEW ALASKA CLUB WILL HOLD MEETING

A meeting of the members and directors of the Alaska club will be held next Monday at room 315 Railway Exchange building, when matters of the first importance connected with the organization will be brought up for discussion. The organization promises to be as successful as its sister clubs of Seattle and new members are being enrolled every day. Some of the leading citizens of the northland have already joined, many of them being those who have been connected in the past with the leading affairs of the great territory. Rooms have already been secured where the headquarters of visiting Alaskans will be located and where Alaskans who have cast their lot with Portland may meet fellowships.

The organizers of the club are confident that, owing to the great influx of Alaskans to Portland recently, that the organization will enjoy eminent success and will mean much to northerners who have hitherto been almost strangers in a strange land while here. A large attendance is expected and hoped for at the meeting next Monday. It will be presided over by President Frank Swanton.

YANCKWICH WILL RUN AGAINST OLSON AS J. P.

Harry Yanckwich has announced himself as an independent candidate for Justice of the peace and is making a speech making campaign. Last night he addressed a crowd at Seventh and Washington streets. His opponents, who received the nominations at the primaries, are Fred L. Olson and J. W. Bell, the incumbents. Yanckwich is directing his campaign particularly against Olson.

BRINGS SUIT TO TEST LEGALITY OF QUICK MARRIAGES

Scores of marriages of Portlanders and Oregonians will be invalidated, according to the district attorney, if a case brought in municipal court and to be carried to the higher courts is decided in the state's favor.

The question at issue is whether a principal in a divorce case may go to Washington or any other state and contract another marriage within six months from the time the divorce decree is granted, without violating the Oregon law. Deputy District Attorney Hennessy and Garland maintain that marriage in another state does not evade the law, and on a charge of illegal cohabitation Mr. and Mrs. Mathew Monaghan, living at 421 Harrison street, were taken into custody last night.

The complaint against the couple is made by Monaghan's first wife, who came here from Iowa to press charges against him. She says that he sent her to visit in Iowa from their home in Auburn, N. Y., in order to get her out of the way. She charges that he then came to Oregon and secured a divorce from her on the grounds of desertion. He obtained the decree in Oregon City in April, and in the following month he was married in Vancouver, Wash., to Sarah Nonnen. Monaghan is a locomotive engineer and has made his home in Portland for more than a year.

Monaghan has produced both the divorce decree and the certificate of his marriage to Miss Nonnen. He also declares that he was advised by the attorney who represented him in the divorce proceedings that if he went to Vancouver and was married he could not be reached by the Oregon state law, which prohibits marriage within six months from the time of obtaining a divorce. He has prepared to make a fight on the grounds that the Oregon authorities cannot prosecute him on an affair which he says is out of their jurisdiction.

While decisions have been made in other states on this point, Prosecutor Hennessy says none has ever been handed down by an Oregon court. He declares that he will make a test of the Monaghan case in order to stop the practice of principals in Oregon divorce cases who go into Washington and marry without awaiting the expiration of the six months.

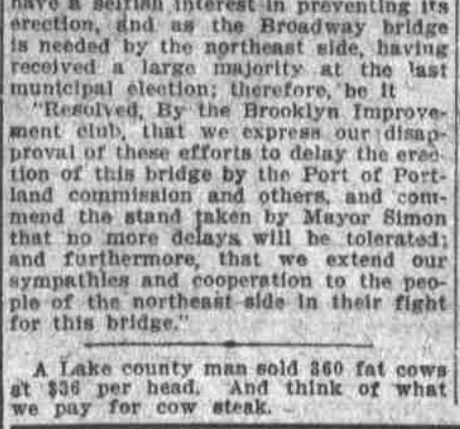

Hennessy will quote to the court at
