

"NOT GUILTY" PLEA OF "DETECTIVE"

Despite Evidence J. H. Reed Says He Didn't Impersonate Secret Service Officer.

Wearing a cynical smile, a budding mustache, a suit of clerical black and with his hair brushed and plastered down so that it shone, J. H. Reed came into federal court this morning to plead not guilty to the charge of impersonating a secret service officer. On the table before him were spread out the imitation secret service star, the nickel-plated revolver, the handcuffs, the brass knuckles and the photographs taken as he wore the star on the front of his coat, all of which had been taken from his person by William A. Glover, genuine secret service officer, in the lobby of the imperial hotel Wednesday night.

There were placed in evidence, too, the voucher on the postoffice department which Reed had given E. H. Prior, driver, on the automobile stage, for a ride between Umpqua and Oakland, Or. Reed's own confession written for Mr. Glover, telling how he made the stage driver think him a secret service man was also in evidence, and in the face of all this accumulation Reed, who, according to his own statements, has spent much of his time communing with nature, writing love poems and seeking inspiration from the masters of literature, preferred to plead not guilty.

Mr. Glover, who had been assisted by Clyde Nickerson in making the arrest, told the story of the capture. He had read a newspaper story in which Reed told of his plans for marrying Florence Cooper, daughter of a California smelter king, whose heart he had won by successful work on an important case. Mr. Glover had followed up Reed because he knew there was no man of any such name in the secret service.

When the fake secret service agent was arrested he had inquired if it was not because of his relations with a woman in the city. At first he had talked freely, but soon decided that he would like to get free from the charge, so became very silent.

Upon the testimony of Officer Glover, Commissioner Cannon felt himself warranted in binding Reed over for grand jury investigation. In default of $1000 bond, he was remanded to the county jail.

Notarial Commissions.
Salem, Or., Oct. 21.—Notarial commissions have been issued to E. Lipton, Corvallis; John F. Ehn, Medford; Homer D. Angell, Freda Jensen and Charles H. Knapp, Portland, and Arthur McPhillips, McMinnville.

The kitchen is placed in the center of Australian dining cars, with the first class compartment at one end and the second class at the other.
