

BALLOON CRASHES INTO FOREST BUT CANNOT BE FOUND

Strange Craft Plainly Seen and Heard but Not Located; Considered Almost Certain It Is the America II.

(United Press-Lessee Wire.)
Montreal, Oct. 25.—Hope for the safety of Pilot Allan Hawley and Alde Augustus Post of the balloon America II was abandoned when hunters from Fort Wayne, Ind., arrived here today telling of having seen the balloon Wednesday 36 miles north of Kippewa. The country all about Kippewa is uninhabited, rugged and covered with an impenetrable forest. That the aeronauts should ever find their way out after landing is considered an impossibility. The hunters declared there could be no doubt that the balloon they saw was the America II.

St. Louis, Oct. 25.—Pilot Von Puhl and Joseph O'Reilly, the latter as aide, left for Chapleau late today, taking with them the balloon St. Louis III. They will make the ascent in search of the America II, from Chapleau.

Toronto, Ont., Oct. 25.—A balloon that was seen passing over Chapleau, Ontario, Thursday night, and which afterward was heard to crash into the forest near Rumpsey Lake, 32 miles north of Biscuiting, is believed by officials of the Aero club, who are conducting the search for the crew of the missing balloon, to have been the America II.

The balloon, when seen by the agent of the Canadian Pacific railroad at Chapleau, and by several other persons, was headed eastward. Guides were within a short distance of the spot where it was believed it landed. They fired guns and searched diligently for the balloon or its occupants but were unable to find trace of either. Leaving provisions on the shore of the lake, they abandoned the search and returned to Chapleau, where they reported the occurrence.

It is considered almost certain that the balloon was the America II, as all the other balloons entered in the race had landed before Thursday.

Chapleau, Ont., Oct. 25.—Louis Spindler, representing the Aero Club of America, arrived here today to supervise the search for the balloon reported to have landed near here Thursday. Those who saw the aeronauts are certain that it was the America II and that it landed in a dense forest, probably 25 miles from here. Searchers have been out since last night but at a late hour today no trace of either balloon or aeronauts had been found.

Seven state tickets will appear on the ballot in the Pennsylvania election next month. They are the Republican, Democratic, Keystone, Prohibition, Socialist, Workingmen's league and Industrial parties.

BOWERMAN WAS WORTHY OF HIS HARRIMAN HIRE

mitted the following report:
"Senate Chamber—Salem, Jan. 23, 1908.—Mr. President—Your committee on revision of laws, to whom was referred senate bill No. 60, beg leave to report that we have had the same under consideration, and respectfully report it back without recommendation, there being two senators, to-wit, Malarkey and Coshaw, voting in favor of recommendation that the bill pass, and two senators, to-wit, Rand and Bowerman, voting in favor of recommendation that the bill do not pass."

"DAN J. MALARKEY, Chairman."
That is the record—Bowerman, with his Harriman pass in his pocket, prevented a favorable report on the bill. His obituary was quickly written. It came up for passage the following day, but without a favorable report from the committee its defeat was assured. Again Bowerman voted against it (See Senate Journal, 1908, p. 25), and Senator Nottingham, now Bowerman's campaign manager, is recorded as "absent"—perhaps he was "sitting on the floor behind his desk."

Not until 1907, the third session at which the bill was introduced, was it finally passed. The pressure of public opinion had become too strong to be resisted, and furthermore the people had secured at that session the law creating the state railroad commission, so that further opposition by Harriman and his agents was plainly futile. By a vote of 22 to 7 the senate passed the bill. Bowerman yielded to the inevitable and voted for it. Even Nottingham did the same. The time for opposition and for dodging had passed. A few days later the house acted favorably on the bill and it finally became a law after five years of strenuous endeavor on the part of its advocates.

"WHERE ROLLS THE OREGON" IN COLORS

Sixteen pages of Oregon, many of them colored in pictures that are true to life and will open the eyes of many Oregonians as well as easterners, is the article on "Where Rolls the Oregon," which is the special feature of the November issue of Sunset magazine.

This is the first of a series of articles to be run by Sunset descriptive of the Pacific coast country, with the idea of interesting many new readers in the wonderland beyond the Rockies.

The article is written by Walter V. Weehike, who takes his text from Bryn's "Take the wings of a morning—where rolls the Oregon," and is an excellent and accurate account of the things to be seen from the Columbia to the Rogue, while it pays particular attention to the new central Oregon country being opened up by the Deschutes road. The illustrations are four color photographs and are unusually handsome, including views of many of the features of Oregon's scenic and productive beauties. The pictures of the Deschutes country are probably the first colored photographs of that remarkable region to be printed and will attract much attention in Portland for that reason.

CLIMAX NEAR IN DYNAMITE CASES

Special Grand Jury Impaneled; Jurors Charged to Assume No Given Agency.

(United Press-Lessee Wire.)
Los Angeles, Oct. 25.—Formal organization of the special grand jury that will investigate the explosion and fire that destroyed the plant of the Los Angeles Times, October 1, sending 21 men to their death, was accomplished today under the supervision of Presiding Judge Walter Bordwell of the Los Angeles county superior court.

After 19 veniremen had been selected Judge Bordwell delivered to them his instructions. The keynote of his statement to the jury was as follows:

"You will not assume that the explosion that destroyed the Times was the work of human agency but will determine that question from such evidence as is obtainable."

Charles Wier of Los Angeles was made foreman of the grand jury and the members retired to complete their formal organization.

But 36 of the venire summoned appeared when the session was called to order today. Deputy sheriffs reported that five of the men who had been called were out of the jurisdiction of the court. An even 19, the required number, were found who were acceptable.

It is generally believed that the jury was summoned at the request of representatives of Earl Rogers, who has been in charge of the investigation for the Merchants and Manufacturers' association. Neither Rogers nor attaches of the district attorney's office would state today for whom indictments would be sought.

San Francisco, Oct. 25.—O. A. Tietmoe, secretary of the State Building Trades council, and prominent in the union labor movement, arrived here from Santa Cruz today and went into conference with Chief of Police Seymour regarding his reported acquaintance with men suspected of having blown up the Los Angeles Times. The conference continued into the afternoon.

Detective Brown of Los Angeles today moved from his quarters at the St. Francis hotel, in an effort to elude newspaper men, who have been watching him in anticipation of the service of subpoenas on San Francisco men who might be wanted as witnesses before the Los Angeles grand jury. Brown was not successful in his effort, and was located a few minutes later at the Herbert hotel, not far from the St. Francis. It is believed that he is awaiting word that the grand jury in the southern city has been impaneled before beginning service of the subpoenas.

Mayor Schoenbeck of Syracuse, the Republican candidate for lieutenant governor of New York, was employed for 16 years in a blacksmith shop in Syracuse, working at the anvil by day and studying law at night. Schoenbeck's parents were blacksmiths. His father was a blacksmith, and young Schoenbeck as a boy sold newspapers on the streets of Syracuse.

CREAMERY BOARD FAVORS STATE TAX

Hearty approval for the plan of co-operative effort between consumers, dealers and producers in framing a law for state-wide tuberculosis test of dairy cows was given at a meeting of the Portland Creamery board held last night. W. B. Shively, attorney of the board, was instructed to frame a law based upon the city's pure milk ordinance, including its desirable features, broadening its scope and eliminating features that have been found harmful or impracticable.

An outline of the proposed law will be submitted at the next meeting of the board. It will be submitted for approval or disapproval to city and state health officers, the press, the Consumers' league, and others. A vote of thanks was tendered The Journal because of its stand in favor of the state wide tuberculosis test. It was arranged that the law be ready for action by the legislature.

PORTLAND BIDS FOR GRAND CAMP MEETING

The first big gun in the campaign to bring the Grand Camp of the Arctic Brotherhood to Portland next year was fired last week, when the Portland Commercial club sent out an order for 1000 buttons which will be worn by the delegates to this year's convention when they meet next month at Vancouver, B. C.

The buttons will be sent in charge of the delegates who will represent the Alaska club of Portland at the convention and will be worn not only by the delegates at the grand camp, but by the many hundreds of other Alaskans who always accompany the regular appointed delegates whenever they meet. The buttons are of a most attractive design and carry the colors of the Brotherhood as well as lettering which describes their purpose of getting the next convention for this city. Among the delegates who will probably represent the Alaska club of Portland are Vice President Bard, who was formerly mayor of Nome, and Secretary Shoup, son of the former United States marshal of the first division. In addition to the regularly appointed delegates several other members of the local club will also be present at the convention to boost Portland for the next meeting.

Through the United Press service the newspapers of Alaska have been furnished with the news of the formation of the Alaska club here so that the thousands of Alaskans who are yet to come south for the winter will be informed in good time of the fact that Portland is ready to receive them in a club of their own where they may meet all their old friends and be assured of a royal welcome.

GREEN PROSPECTOR FINDS HIS FORTUNE

Nome, Oct. 25.—P. Greenberg, a recent arrival in Nome, has just returned from a brief prospecting tour, unguided and without previous experience, bringing with him 200 pounds of virgin gold, which will be worth about $35,000. Greenberg found the gold in a little creek off the Squinal river. Hundreds of Nome prospectors are today joining in the stampede for the new bonanza.

BOWERMAN TRIES TO SQUARE RECORD

Addresses Oregon City Audience in Defensive Speech; Attacks Bourne.

Oregon City, Oct. 25.—Jay Bowerman, assembly candidate for governor, spoke before a fair sized audience in Shively's theatre last night, devoting a large part of his time to an attack on Jonathan Bourne and reiterating his usual talk about an effort on the part of Bourne to aid Democratic success in the state. Bowerman spent considerable time in seeking to square his record as an assembly man with his present professions of friendship for the primary law. He explained his record on the normal school question and took a few digs at The Journal. His speech was throughout on the defensive.

Dan J. Malarkey, who won the nomination for state senator by fighting assemblyism and Bowermanism, followed Bowerman and said he believed the Republicans who favored the assembly had given it up. The audience did not indicate that it was quite ready to swallow this, and Malarkey also took a big club to Bourne and belabored the senior

SCARED INTO SOUND HEALTH.

H. M. Winkler, Evansville, Ind., had all the symptoms of a serious kidney disorder, and as none of the medicine he had taken helped him, he finally tried Foley Kidney Pills. He writes: "My back gave out. I seemed to have lost all strength and ambition, and felt all played out, was bothered with dizzy spells and would become nearly blind, my head would swim and specks dance before my eyes. At this time I heard of Foley Kidney Pills and took them regularly. Before they were half gone I was much improved, and the action of my kidneys and bladder became regular and natural. I am now perfectly well and Foley Kidney Pills have cured me."

TAKE CONVENTIONS TO SEASHORE IS PLAN

R. W. Raymond, chief of the industrial bureau of the Portland Commercial club, returned this morning from a trip to Clatsop beach, and is now singing its praises in eloquent terms. To say that he was astonished to find such wonderful beach resorts within a few hours' travel of the metropolis is putting it mildly.

"We should by all means encourage visitors from the east to take a trip down to the beach. It would prove one of the biggest attractions that I know of. I have been in Oregon only a short time, and so want down to see the ocean. Why, the hotels and scenic attractions down there excel those of many of the famous Atlantic seashore resorts, and even more remarkable is that in winter the weather is so balmy that one may go into the surf almost any day. I took a dip in the sea yesterday, and it was fine."

"Gearhart hotel has a fine convention hall in connection, and I think when conventions come to Portland arrangements should be made so that at least one day could be spent at the seashore. Take people from the inland states, especially, and they would regard that trip to the ocean the greatest feature of their visit."
