IN SOCIETY

The wedding of Miss Winnifred Loomis and Arthur G. Labbe will be celebrated this evening at 8 o'clock at Trinity Episcopal church in Tacoma. A reception will follow the ceremony at the Cranston-Potter house. Rev. Frederic T. Webb will read the marriage service, and the bride will be given in marriage by her father, Lyman Upshur Loomis, who arrived Monday evening from New York. Attending the bride as maid of honor will be her younger sister, Miss Ethel Loomis. Miss Elizabeth Ballie, who was recently the guest of Miss Anita Burns, and Miss Bertha Potter will act as bridesmaids. Kurt Koehler will be the groomsmen and the ushers will be Lee Hawley Hoffman and D. J. Cox of Vancouver, B. C.

In honor of her house guests, Mrs. Morton H. Insley and Mrs. Lee Hawley Hoffman, Mrs. William Jones of Tacoma entertained at tea at the Country club on Tuesday. Mr. and Mrs. Insley and Mr. and Mrs. Hoffman left Monday for Tacoma to be in attendance at the Loomis-Labbe wedding.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Scott Brooke (Miss Christine Pomeroy) are enjoying their visit in the City of Mexico, and have sent letters describing their trip. They have extended their visit in the south for a fortnight. Mrs. Brooke has secured a number of interesting antiques in silver and mahogany for her new home.

Mrs. Bernard O'Hara and Miss Katharine O'Hara will leave Monday for California, where they will spend a month. Early in January they will go abroad for four or five months, returning to Portland in May or June, when Miss O'Hara's wedding to Joseph Mauss of Seattle will take place.

Miss Katharine Hunt will entertain a group of girls on Saturday, complimentary to Miss Gertrude Jones of Lahain, Meadown, who is the house guest of Miss Hazel Tichenor.

Mrs. Sanford Whiting has issued cards for an afternoon at "508" at the Portland Heights club.

Mrs. Daniel Andrew Ehindler entertained Monday with the first of a series of informal bridge teas.

Miss Boss Allen left last night for Oakland, Cal., where she will spend the winter. Miss Allen accompanied her aunt, Mrs. N. Lane of Seattle, who is going south for her health.

Mrs. Oscar Overbeck entertained informally at bridge Monday complimentary to Miss Grace Davis, her guest, from Leavenworth, Kan., who is the house guest of the Overbecks for the winter.

Dr. and Mrs. C. V. Littler, of Albany, had at their Thanksgiving guests from Portland Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Robinson, Ralph Robinson and Dr. and Mrs. Harry M. Hendershott.

Mr. and Mrs. Martin G. Maginnis of Seattle are the guests of Mr. and Mrs. John Maginnis, 321 East Ninth street, North. Mrs. Martin Maginnis will be matron of honor tonight at the wedding of Miss Mary Maginnis to Clifford H. Dice. Captain and Mrs. T. S. Maginnis of Woodburn, Or., are also in town for the wedding, and are the guests of Mr. and Mrs. C. P. Maginnis. Miss Maginnis has been the motif for a number of delightful pre-nuptial affairs. Saturday Miss Margaret Sheehy and Miss Margaret Hughes entertained in her honor with a luncheon and an afternoon at 508. She was the guest of honor at a luncheon for eight given Monday by Mrs. C. H. Maginnis and of a towel shower given the same afternoon by Mrs. C. P. Maginnis. Yesterday afternoon Miss Mary King gave her a luncheon shower and five hundred party, when the decorations were all of caryatid anthemns.

sation to succeed J. R. Shepard, who has left the state. Seven men were placed in nomination by the governor of the state for appointment as trustees of the society and their names will be forwarded to him for approval. He selects three men as trustees of the fund voted by the legislature each year. The men nominated were W. E. Wann of Portland; L. T. Reynolds of Salem, the retiring trustee; Dr. B. N. Hamm, Portland; L. D. Minton, Portland; J. O. Holt, Eugene; C. E. Whistler, Medford, and Dr. S. A. Robinson, Portland.

SAYS GROWERS SHOULD DECIDE NOW ABOUT SHOW FOR NEXT YEAR

In his report to the State Horticultural society, Secretary F. W. Power, recommends that his position should be made a salaried one, so that the mah holding it can afford to devote all his time to it. He also calls attention to

THE WORLD AND HIS WIFE

By DARRY MORE.
MR. AND MRS. POTTER had been happily married for about 20 years. It was quite impossible to imagine a tragedy stalking through the Potter household. That is, not until Mrs. Potter joined the afternoon bridge club. It is said, "a card club is a natural gathering of women entirely surrounded by pessimism," and Mrs. Potter had not rolled many daily morsels of gossip under her tongue until she began to suspect Mr. Potter of all manner of breaches of faith. She decided that her husband was an unusually good looking man for his age, and—and—well, possibly he was just a little bit like other men, after all.

Shortly after Mrs. Potter joined the bridge club, it became necessary for Mr. Potter to establish temporary business headquarters in a near-by city. This business arrangement made it necessary for the husband to be much away from home. From Saturday to Monday was all the time he could spare for his family, but he wrote frequently and told of many little episodes, at the hotel. As the card club philosophy began to sink into Mrs. Potter's brain, she wondered about many things, and one day she announced to her daughter that she was going to the nearby city to surprise her husband, and return home with him on Saturday.

She arrived about 5 o'clock Friday night and went directly to her husband's hotel. He was not in his room, and at 6 o'clock came. Mr. Potter had not put in an appearance. Seven o'clock, no husband yet. She looked about the room and discovered that he had discarded his business suit for other clothes, and had donned fresh linen. At 8:30, she had a little tea and went to her room, evidently her husband was dining out with friends, but surely he would return soon. One o'clock, and Mrs. Potter was in the throes of insistent jealousy, tinged with extravagant wrath. Two o'clock found Mrs. Potter crying, and wondering how to proceed to get a divorce. At 3 o'clock she felt she never wanted to see him again. She would go home and protect her children from their dreadful brute or a father. The terrible secret must be hers alone. She would guard it with her life.

A tired, bedraggled little woman alighted from the train, and sorrowfully climbed into a taxi. As she approached her home, she saw her daughter picking roses for the breakfast table, and a brilliant sunshine was streaming over the lawn. Mr. Potter couldn't stand the agony of it all. Barring into tears she said to her daughter, "Your father has deceived—" Never mind, mother, you are tired and weary from your trip. Come upstairs."

At the door of her room, she stopped short. Mr. Potter emerging from the delights of his morning shave, eyed his wife indignantly, and then he wondered why she had hysterics when he demanded sternly: "Why mother—where have you been all night?"

Mr. Potter had planned to surprise his wife by coming home a day sooner than he was expected.

Frank W. Power, reflected Secretary of the State Horticultural Society.

the fact that now is the time for growers to decide whether they will give an exhibition next year. The report, in part follows:

"This state is too large and her horticultural interests too great to allow this society to become a two-man affair at its own expense, and it is asking so much of the secretary and treasurer to do all this work at their own expense. "We had to pay collectors for securing concessions and advertising on the program, which was printed and mailed with expense to the society. We also pay our judges, helpers, etc., and the society should be willing to pay its secretary or president at least an equal amount for doing the same work as we had to pay outsiders for doing it. "Some plan should be devised for having a regularly paid secretary whose duty it would be to attend to the business of the society, and devote a part, if not all his time to this work as the society would then have some one it could call on for doing the work and gathering statistics, etc."

"Every day I have inquiries from the east asking statistics about Oregon fruit raising, but none is to be had. If we cannot have such a man, then combine it with the office of secretary of the Board of Horticulture, who devotes all his time to the work. This is done in California. "Now is the time to decide whether the growers want a large exhibit next year, and whether they will assist. This would give an entire year for securing funds and fruits, and we could all get to work and make it a success. I am in favor of either making it a large show or dropping it altogether as three-fourths of the secretary's work is connected with this show. "If we cannot employ a paid secretary, the officers should be changed annually, or at least one each year, so that all the members would have a chance to devote their time and money toward making it a success. "We should have a committee on exhibits, with a member in every fruit district whose duty it was to secure exhibits and help secure new members. We should also have a soliciting committee to raise all funds needed for premiums and expenses. "We have only about 100 paid up annual members, while other states with not nearly the fruit interests, have a larger membership. We should have at least 1000 if not 2000 paid up members, which would give us what funds are necessary to properly carry on the office, and this would only be an assessment of $1 per year on each orchard in the state, certainly not exorbitant. "In closing I wish to say a word for our state press and especially our local press. We never could have made this show a success without their aid."

SAYS APPLE GROWERS OF PACIFIC NORTHWEST NEED A CENTRAL BODY

Overproduction, the bugaboo of many people contemplating or already engaged in apple raising, is not in sight, declared H. C. Atwell, president of the State Horticultural society, in his address this morning at the apple show. "It is a pertinent question, one that we should not avoid," he said. "It is, however, an old question, one that is raised whenever there is extraordinary activity in any line of production. I do not think we need feel apprehensive on this subject. Generally speaking, it may be said that there has never been more than a temporary over supply of any staple. "Apples are a staple. Moreover, two sects may be cited annually to plow our rear; one, that thousands of acres are being planted which ought not to be planted and which will never seriously

Baked Onions With Nuts.
Cook peeled onions until almost tender. Then remove and cut out the center, but do not go through to the bottom. Reserve the centers to season soup or meat dishes for the next day. Have ready some fine bread crumbs mixed with peanut butter, and fill the centers over to the top of the onions, sprinkle some plain crumbs mixed with butter over the top. Set in a buttered dish and bake slowly one hour in a moderate oven, basting with melted butter and milk. Serve on a hot dish and pour a spoonful of hot cream about the onions, not over them.

Eggs and Spaghetti.
Put four ounces of spaghetti into a saucepan of fast boiling water, cook till tender, then drain it well. Put a layer into a thickly buttered pudding dish, then a layer of slices of hard-boiled eggs; dust with a little salt and pepper. Next put in some more spaghetti, then more slices of egg, and so on till the dish is full, ending with spaghetti. Four half a cup of white sauce over this, sprinkle two tablespoonfuls of grated cheese over this, put some little pieces of butter on the top. Bake in a quick oven for 10 minutes, then serve in the dish in which it was cooked.

They Say.
Two people who are in love try not to look at each other, but succeed in never looking at anybody else.

The church-going woman feels she is a great success when she gets a dollar from her husband for the collection plate, and then puts only a quarter in.

A bank account too often stands between husband and wife.

No girl objects to being kissed; what she objects to is that you think you can kiss her.

Dictates of Fashion.
Fashions of bright satin, silk or velvet are popular on white or black dresses.

The miss in school considers her tailored suit quite as much a necessity as does her mother or older sister, and the tailored suit made now for the girl in her teens is quite as expensive as that worn by her mother.

Coats and skirts of velvet are dainty, more particularly since so much decoration is shown in their decoration. Contrasted inserted pieces appear in unexpected places and the free use of rare embroidery tends much to give a coat and skirt of this beautiful fabric a most artistic effect.

The uncured ostrich plume is a newcomer in fashion, with already considerable popularity.

Early showings of fabrics for suits are mostly tweed and serge in mixed colorings. Velvet will be extremely fashionable for winter wear in dark colors with a fine stripe of another hue.

The vogue of tricote—that is, knitted coats, caps, skirts and sweaters—will evidently be continued this year, as their cozy durability is giving them sufficient favor for a second season.

Frills of the Moment.
The person who keeps eyes and ears open and mouth shut fares the best in this world.

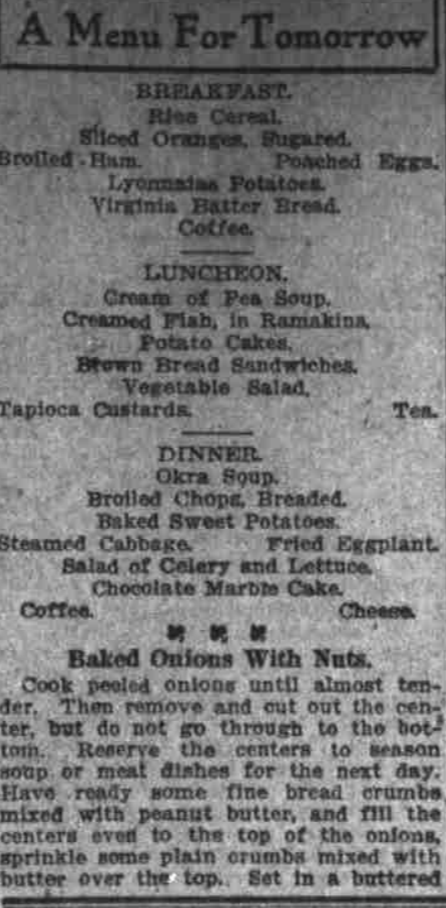

English grapes and French artichokes are new arrivals from the other side.

Ribbed stockings both in silk and hosiery are with us once more. They look most fetching when worn with a velvet pump.

The Tyrolean hat is entirely passé.

Jabots of ribbon roses falling from a lace bow are exquisite little fancies.

PORTLAND'S POPULATION IN 1850 ABOUT 400

Portland, Or., Nov. 29.—To the Editor of The Journal—The population of Portland in 1850 has been given as 221, an amazing figure, and one obtained from the United States census report of that year. In view of the fact, however, that the vote of Portland in June, 1851, for delegate to congress was only 220—162 for Joseph Lane, Democrat, and 58 for Dr. William H. Wilson, Whig—and the further fact that there were but few women and children in the country at that time, it is safe to say that the actual population of Portland in 1850 could not have been over 400. If that number. This view is strengthened by a letter from Rev. Samuel C. Damon, chaplain of the Seaman's Friend society of Honolulu, who arrived at Portland on May 15, 1849, in which he says that the population of the place was about 100, with between 20 and 30 buildings.
