Weather Conditions.

Portland, Or., Dec. 6.—The barometer is relatively low over the north Pacific states, and a severe storm central over eastern North Carolina controls the weather in the Atlantic states. The western high pressure area has moved south to Texas. Unusually low temperatures prevail in the western states from Minnesota south to Texas. The line of freezing temperatures extends south to Memphis, Tenn., in the Mississippi valley, and farther west it extends as far south as California. In Minnesota and the Dakotas zero and below zero temperatures are reported. Precipitation in the north Pacific states has been light, but in the Atlantic states it has been general and heavy snow has occurred in the Ohio valley and western Pennsylvania.

Payment was opposed by the administrators, O. M. Rankin and Howard Rankin.

EAST PIERS OF NEW O. R. & N. BRIDGE FINISHED

Piers and bases of concrete on the new O. R. & N. bridge on the east side from the water to the main pier at Oregon and Adams streets are ready to bear the steel superstructure. On the west side work remains to be done on the pier which is just at the edge of the Alaska dock. Nothing is being done for the bridge approach between Front and Third streets, this work being held up until permission can be procured from the city.

Manager Seltzer of the Union Bridge & Construction company said today that repairs had been made to the pier which suffered an accident some time ago, and that this pier now was nearly completed. The second of the main piers upon which the lift will rest is under way. Much blasting has been done in the river bed, preparatory to sinking the monster caisson, 36 feet wide and 72 feet long with 50 ton steel cutting edge appended. A few weeks more will witness much progress on the bridge, thinks Mr. Seltzer. The Union Bridge & Construction company has contracted only to build the substructure of the bridge.

OREGON SEEKS RED CROSS SEAL RECORD

Many agencies have united to aid the Visiting Nurse association sell 1,000,000 Red Cross seals. The society women of Portland have charge of the booths in department stores and public buildings. The theatres, the moving picture shows, the local press, all are participating in presenting the merits of the campaign.

It is desired by all that the record of sales made last year in Oregon be broken by this year's sales. Oregon was a leader among the states last year. Competition among the states this year is keen. To make Oregon first in sales of Red Cross seals that Oregon may be first in the fight against consumption is the ambition.

Besides throwing notices upon screens telling of the Red Cross seals and the reasons why they should be purchased, George W. McBride, who has charge of the work, is inducing managers of the theatres to buy large quantities of the stamps, which are then pasted on the little envelopes in which theatre tickets are sent out. Red Cross seals are also to be pasted on the programs. In this way use will be found for many thousands of them. In other places large sales are being made by distributing stamps through the audiences between acts, but this will not be attempted in Portland.

School children will help sell Red Cross seals. Last year many were sold by students in the local colleges and in the public schools. Any one who wishes to aid the campaign either by selling or by buying Red Cross seals is given the opportunity. Only by the assistance of many and the "purchasing spirit" of all will it be found possible to raise the needed $10,000 with which to fight consumption in Oregon during next year.

TO DISCUSS PROPOSED LAWS AT CONVENTION

M. S. Shrock, P. B. Maris and W. B. Duncan, deputies in the office of the state dairy and food commissioner, will leave tonight for Eugene, where they will attend the annual convention of the Oregon State Butter & Cheese Makers' association, which convenes tomorrow, and the annual convention of the Oregon Dairymen's association, which meets Thursday.

At these conventions it is expected that many legislative measures will be considered and urged for adoption. J. W. Bailey, the state dairy and food commissioner, who is now in New Orleans, attending the annual convention of the National Association of Dairy and Food Commissioners, will return to Portland some time next week.

One of the features of the two conventions to be held at Eugene will be a post mortem tuberculin test on two cows to be performed by the state veterinarian, Dr. W. H. Lytle of Pendleton.

The premium list offered by the two associations in convention is the best that has yet been put up for the various competitions, including in addition to a quantity of dairy supplies, eight silver cups valued at from $25 to $250 and several cash prizes.

A number of Portland people will address the conventions, including President A. H. Lea of the Butter & Cheese Makers' organization, T. S. Townsend and J. A. McLeod of the Klock Produce company.

WILL POWER AND WHISKEY

Lack of Former Blamed for Excessive Use of the Latter Not True in Many Cases.

The man who drinks whiskey excessively is charged with having "No Will Power." It is believed that if that party would just make up his mind to quit drinking, he could do so. This might be true in some cases who have just started, but it is a different matter when the man has been using any alcoholic liquor excessively. It would not be fair to say that the excessive drinker looks for relief because he has no will power, for after a certain stage his only relief is more whiskey to satisfy the alcoholic poison which has accumulated in his system. At least that is the state of condition, unless he investigates and finds out that the Neal treatment has been discovered in the last seven years. If he or his friends will do that they will find that the Neal treatment will in Three Days' time drive out the stored-up alcoholic poison in the drinking man's system—will thereby drive out the CAUSE of that man's craving for drink, and by driving out the cause, the effects of excessive drinking are eradicated also, and the treatment will put the man back to the day before he took his FIRST DRINK, and, more than that, eradicate all desire, craving or appetite for alcoholic liquor. That this can be done positively, is the verdict of hundreds of skillful and prominent physicians, who are by their profession best qualified to know.

F. C. GROVER, M. D., C. M., of Milwaukee, Wis., says: "From investigation, I believe the Neal treatment will remove entirely all desire, craving and appetite for liquor."

This is the verdict of thousands of physicians, as well as ministers, Mayors, Police Chiefs and prominent men, who through their profession or by having friends or relatives treated have investigated the Neal treatment.

Their indorsements, with names and address of writer, can be seen at the office of Neal Institute, 354 Hall St., Portland, Or.

They indorse the Neal treatment as a CURE for ALCOHOLISM—something which would not be done unless all doubt has been removed as to the efficiency and thoroughness of the treatment.

Any man or woman who has indulged in alcoholic liquor until the habit has been formed should at once call at the Neal Institute. The Institute is conducted on the highest plane, and reaches a class that have heretofore hesitated in seeking relief for fear of publicity and disastrous results. All business transactions are strictly confidential, and anyone can secure the plain facts and convincing proofs of the efficiency of the treatment by calling or writing, without obligating themselves in any way.

The cost of interments have been greatly reduced by the Holman Undertaking company.

Heretofore it has been the custom of funeral directors to make charges for all incidentals connected with a funeral.
