SUMMARY OF THE MESSAGE

THE president begins his message with a statement concerning the arbitration of two international disputes, thus placndred words relating to foreign ffairs, which though not trivial,

Next he discusses the maximum nd minimum feature of the tariff w, and especially our tariff relalons with Canada. He seems to rade with that country, which is a lition that should be beneficial countries. A high tariff wall between the United States and anada is international folly. He es a marine mail subsidy, but it doubtful if such a law can get through congress this winter; it ertainly cannot during the next two ears thereafter.

The president points out various eductions in expenditures that have en made and urges further econmy and more businesslike methds, especially in the customs serwhich suggestions the country will heartily approve.

The president's comments on the Payne-Aldrich tariff act are weak evasive. Most of the adverse infounded, and he makes no specifrgument in support of the board tariff commissioners, a body that may do some good work, but caniot legislate.

TANGLEFOOT

By Miles Overholt

THE SHEEPHERDER.

He stood in the street, forlorn and alone, And his pale blue eyes were sad. And he mumbled the while in a mournful

Like a man demented and mad. His clothes were tattered, his head was bare.
His hair was ragged and long.
He gazed around with a vacant sta
Then mumbled this pitiful song;

"I'm a ba-ba-ba, I'm a ba-ba sheep,
I ba-ba a lonesome lay,
Sometimes I laugh, sometimes I weep,
Sometimes I gambol and play,
But I ba-ba-ba my whole life through,
I ba-ba from morn till night;
I'm the ba-ba man of the ba-ba crew—
That's right."

He follows the herd on a desert bare.

A dreary, lonely trail.

No human being e'er meets him there
And he follows in sun or gale.

The mournful cry of the mournful herd
Rings ever in his ears;

From month to month he says no word
And solitude stunts his years.

For he's the king of a wild domain
As he follows his mournful flock,
He knows no joy, he knows no pain,
And the echoes jeer and mock
When the ba-ba-ba of the ba-ba sheep
Disturbs the desert air,
And he hears "Ba-ba" in his troubled

And he knows naught but despair.

On a sandy knoll he stands awhile
And looks across the plain.
Nor on his face the faintest smile,
And neither a sign of pain.
'Tis only a listless, lonely life,
And the minutes are much too long
But mingled feelings within him rife
Bring forth his pitiful song: "I'm a ba-ba-ba, I'm a ba-ba sheep,

I ba-ba a lonesome lay.
Sometimes I laugh, sometimes I weep,
Sometimes I gambel and play.
But I ba-ba-ba my whole life through,
I ba-ba from morn till night;
I'm the ba-ba man of the ba-ba crew—
That's right." Railroads and the Cost of Living. From the Philadelphia North American

Here is something about the cost of living. It is a subject which concerns all but the idle rich. For even those so well-to-do that they do not feel the immediate pinch of high prices may be dependent on the common spending power for their business prosperity.

The cost of living is made up of innumerable items. When the price of any considerable number of these goes up, the price of nearly all the others moves in sympathy. It is the law or trade If from any cause whatever, such as increased freight rates, the retail merchant has to pay a fraction of a cent more for cotton goods than he did for-merly, he is not likely to bear that loss himself. He passes it along to the con-

To advance goods from 5 to 5% cents is to add 10 per cent to that item in cost of living. If a merchant finds that the shoes in which he deals are costing 2 or 3 cents more per pair, he must either bear the loss, which might be very considerable in the course of a year, or else he must pass it along to the customer. If he does pass it along, it becomes at least 10 cents, but more likely 26, as prices sumer. That, too, is the law of trade.

In all but the very cheapest shoes usually move in quarter dollars, The manufacturer, finding that the merchant has such a large margin of profit, proceeds to absorb it, for he knows that he in turn will have to It over to the leather trust or some other combination that can make its own terms. The same rule applies when the price of the mechanic's tin dinner pail is increased, or his hat or broom or kit of mackerel or overcoat or wagon-load of lumber for that extension to his house, because of the many children with which he has been blest, or a high chair for the last baby, the old one having been worn out These instances illustrate in some measure how the proposed increase in the price of railroad freight rates con cerns the common man, the mechanic, the clerk, the small merchant, the professional man. And because every increase in the cost of living restricts the buying power of the public, these instances also show how the proposed advance in freight rates threatens manufacturer, the wholesaler and the big retail merchant,

Process of Education,

From the Harney Valley News (Rep.) Word comes from Portland that an organization has been started there with the object of educating the people about Bourne and thus encompass his defeat for reelection. This is certainly England in 1743 and was never able to a worthy object and should receive the return to Georgia owing largely to the indorsement of every Republican in the fact that he had already sacrificed his state who has the party and the interprivate means for the welfare of the ests of the state at heart.-Ontario

Argus.

So! It is barely possible, friend Argus, that it is the "jack pot" politicians who will get the "educating" and not the people. The latter seemed during the recent campaign to be far better and more reliably educated about Bourne than the self styled "intelligent leaders" were.

The work of the "jack pot" which is now proposed to be raised by contribu tions from the enemies of Bourne will simply arouse the masses to a further and more emphatic "educating" of the dunder-headed bosses of the Republican machine gang.

Bad Breaks

I've made a million bad mistakes, I've made a million foolish breaks, in this wide world of wonders; and I exto make some more before I reach that happy shore where no one ever And I shall not apologize, or squirt the briny from my eyes, or make long explanations; the breaks I made in other days are made-their I shall not raise, to swell men's tribulapast with grief and wailing; the future, like a sunlit sea, is waiting still for you and me, so let us both go sailing. marks the future's curves, about the past, deserves the kicks that he'll be given; he likes to make a friend
