A CHONEND CHONEND Under the River

The company just incorporated for the purpose of tunneling the river and placing four street railway tracks therein, is not, we hope, a dream. The amount stated as the cost of the work is fifteen millions of dollars, which is a large sum-but the work is bound to be done sooner or later, the West Side must have better connections with the East Side, for three fifths and perhaps three tourth of the population of the Greater Portland of a few years hence will reside east of the river. The financial district will perhaps always be on the West Side-but even the wholesale district of the future may be east of the Willamette. Think of these things in buying property.
