

OXYGEN HELMET USED IN BURNING MINE AT LEYDEN

Rescuers Sent in on Chance That Ten Entombed Men May Still Live; Other Rescuers Run New Tunnel.

(United Press Leased Wire.)
Leyden, Colo., Dec. 15.—In a desperate attempt to save the lives of 10 miners entombed in the Leyden mine of the Denver Tramway company, rescuers equipped with oxygen helmets today entered shaft No. 2 and are endeavoring to explore the lower levels. Other rescuers, working with feverish energy, are bratticking off shaft No. 1 in the hope that they may be able to reach the entombed men through a tunnel connecting the two shafts at a point between the entrance and the point where the explosion occurred.

Though it is believed the men in the mine are still alive, the lower workings are filled with gas. The rescuers are working under great difficulties and the relatives and friends of the entombed miners fear that when those exploring the tunnels finally come to the passage in which the workers are imprisoned, only their dead bodies will be found.

In shaft No. 1, near the entrance, a number of dead mules were found, killed by the fumes that filled the shaft after the explosion.

Professor J. C. Roberts, head of the government mine rescue bureau, is leading the oxygen helmet squad, who have undertaken the most dangerous part of the rescue work. Roberts believes there is a chance that the miners may be alive. Before he entered the mine today he said that if the men remained at the point where they were working when the accident occurred, he believed they might have escaped death from gas. If they tried to escape through the tunnel connecting the two shafts, however, the professor fears they have perished.

Some of the miners were old, experienced men, and Professor Roberts thinks they may have realized the danger from gas and been able to wall themselves in.

The cause of the explosion remains a mystery. Though the mine officials say every precaution was taken to extinguish the fire, which broke out some days ago, many of the men employed in the mine believe this fire may have eaten its way around the cement barrier put in to smother it.

CABLE FROM SEATTLE TO CORDOVA PLANNED

Seattle, Dec. 15.—Plans for the laying of a direct cable from Seattle to Cordova, Alaska, are being considered by Secretary of War Dickinson, and if this long line is established the credit will be due the business men of the northwest, who declare that the high tolls now exacted are made necessary by the crowding of business on the single cable that runs as far north as Nome.

The Cordova cable would cost about $2,000,000 and would stretch a distance of 1884 miles. With the laying of the proposed cable, Cordova would become the central station. Instead of Sitka, where all Alaska cable messages are now relayed.

GUGGENHEIM MANAGER IN ALASKA RETIRES

(United Press Leased Wire.)
Seattle, Dec. 15.—Captain David H. Jarvis, for many years a confidential agent of the Guggenheim interests and the man who persuaded the Guggenheims to enter the Alaska field, in which they have made many millions, is stepping down and out. He has announced that he has resigned.

Jarvis organized the old P. P. & N. Fisheries combine and represented the Morgan-Guggenheim syndicate in Alaska. Jarvis has cleaned up a fortune through a quiet ownership in the De Groff mines at Chicagoff and at the end of the year will retire from business.

CHINESE SENATE VOTES THAT ALL CHINESE MUST CUT OFF THEIR QUEUES

(United Press Leased Wire.)
Peking, Dec. 15.—By a vote of 102 to 28 the Peking senate today passed an edict removing the traditional queue from the heads of all residents of the Chinese empire. The order to remove their queues sent out to the Chinese representatives in foreign countries a month ago was regarded as an intimation of what was to follow, and the edict today occasioned no surprise. Every Chinese subject, from the royal family to the lowest coolie, will be expected to shave his head forthwith.
