First Program at Heilig Theatre is Heard by an Appreciative Audience.

Definite approval was stamped by musical Portland yesterday afternoon upon popular Sunday afternoon concerts. Who could resist laughing at Henry asude, for applause was generous, hough just, and many complimentary emarks were heard as the big audience filed out after applause that followed the last strains of Sir Edward Elgar's "This Banner of St. George" had faded away. And may it be said that the people remained seated for several mo-ments after the last number had been sung, as if waiting for a final encore notwithstanding the lateness of

The next popular concert will prob-ably start at 3 o'clock instead of 2:30, the hour announced for yesterday, be-cause it was found impossible to begin on time owing to the fact that the crowd continued to arrive till nearly 3 o'clock

"Two-thirty is just a bit too early," said Manager Pangle after the concerwas over. "Next time we will make "it 3 o'clock and begin promptly. It seems that a good many people have their Sunday dinner about 2, and it hurries them to get to the theatre in half an hour. The intention is to give a performance lasting an hour and a half, and that, I believe, is about what the public wants. The excellent attendance certainly indicates approval of Sunday afternoon concerts."

The augmented Heilig orchestra, directed by David C. Rosebrook, gave an excellent concert of half an hour's duration for the first part of the program, including a cello solo by F. Hanlein, s recent acquisition to Portland's musical fraternity, an artist waving greeting.

As "Molakai the Blest" is approached the first thing seen is a great green range of mountains running east and west along the island. Over and behind, on the sheltered side, there are many people—the lepers living in peace and contentment. Soon little bright es of green can be made out, and then most of these people gather and wave greetings to the strangers they can As "Molakai the Blest" fades in the
