

QUELLE MAY LOSE LIQUOR LICENSE

Renewal Will Be Denied if the Council Accepts Committee's Recommendation.

The liquor license committee yesterday afternoon, at a special session, refused to recommend the granting of a license to the Quelle restaurant, a resort famous over the country for its crawfish. The present license is held by Sechten & Schlenk, who have been under fire on a number of occasions for violations of the law.

The Quelle license was only one of 16 that were held up by the committee. But the other nine were all for places conducted by Japanese and other aliens. The committee also held up licenses of seven saloons for further consideration and a report from the chief of police.

USED PART OF MONEY LEFT TO CHILDREN

On account of property loss in the Exposition building fire last July, Mrs. Nina C. McCommon petitioned the county court yesterday to be allowed to apply $475, formerly set aside, to the expense of caring for two children under her charge for six years. The money was to be presented to the children when they became of age. The children are Florence and Oscar Milligan, 14 and 12 years old, respectively.

The money and children were left in the care of Mrs. McCommon six years ago. She lived over the drug store of her sons at Nineteenth and Washington streets, which store was destroyed in the fire. This loss left the foster mother in pressed financial circumstances, and she had to use part of the money belonging to the children. The original arrangement was set aside by the county court, and when the board of the two children was figured, it was found to be only $12 a month for the two youngsters.

Besides the amount originally left for the children, Mrs. McCommon spent $37 of her own money, and has offered her care without charge. Mrs. S. Zimmerman, mother of the children, readily agreed to the settlement. Mrs. McCommon took charge of the children January 15, 1904. Had not the fire caused the loss to the woman, she would have had a neat sum to present the children when they became of age.

Treat for "Aloha" Excursionists

Palm Bordered Road in Nature's Paradise Where Hawaiian People Roam.

Those who accompany the "Aloha" excursion to the Hawaiian Islands in February next will have no chance to complain of a lack of sightseeing.

Probably nowhere else in the world are people so blessed by beautiful nature, with the things that are pleasing to the senses. On every side are towering palm trees, bordering in graceful magnificence the drives and walks in both public and private grounds. The royal palm is probably the most symmetrical of all the various varieties, and is one of the first objects to attract the attention of the visitor.

The wonderful mountains and beautiful valleys which radiate from the city of Honolulu as a center are a constant invitation to the average nature lover. And it is in Hawaii as nowhere else that the call of the wild is wholly beneficent. None of Hawaii's beauties is sinister. If the mountains tempt you, yield without question, for in all their extent they contain nothing poisonous. Hawaii has not a snake of any kind, nor reptile or insect more to be dreaded than a bee or a wasp. Moreover, there are no poisonous vines or shrubs, such as poison ivy or poison oak, to be avoided.
