

WIFE FLED WITH FORMER HUSBAND, CHARGES BURNYS

Aged Contractor Declares She Loved No. 1 Best and Obtains Divorce; Several Others Relate Marital Woes.

While the New Year bells were ringing for the entrance of 1908 Robert Burnys, carpenter and contractor living in Montavilla, and Mrs. Minnie Thornton took advantage of the calmness and were married. It was a joyous occasion for the carpenter, who was 73 years old, and had long wanted a wife and companion. She was 33 years old and had recently been divorced from Frank Thornton.

Everything went well until St. Patrick's day, when the carpenter came home in the evening and found his home empty. All traces of the wife were gone. He inquired near and far, but was unable to find her. A private detective agency was asked to locate her, and it was discovered the woman had eloped with her former husband, Frank Thornton, charges Burnys. She would not return to the carpenter, saying that he was too old.

Burnys asked Judge Cleland this morning for a divorce. He recited how he had been deceived, and that since Mrs. Burnys had left him it has been necessary to board around the neighbors. The judge granted him a decree.

Alleged Affair in Figure. Flora Morris, another resident of Montavilla, said she caught her husband, Jack Morris, in their home with women. Upon one occasion there were two women with him, and he declared they loved him more than did his wife, she charges. They were married at Forest City, Iowa, in 1906. She is a divorcee, and it was while she was away from home working that her husband would invite his women friends to the home, she declares. She was granted a decree.

Mrs. Laura E. Tyler, who was the wife of a chauffeur, told the court that such professions caused the wrecking of many homes. She suspected her husband, and one evening found him with a woman by the name of Miss Martin on Thirtieth street, she alleged. Upon another occasion, she said, she caught him with a woman in their own home. Trouble followed and he left. They were married June 7, 1906, and separated one year ago. She was given a decree and the custody of the child.

Change of Spurred. Samuel Adair gave his wife one chance to return to him after she had gone to the home of her parents. She did not return, and a divorce suit followed. In the hearing this morning Adair said he was married August 27, 1904, at Stratford, Ill. His wife left him in 1907. He was given a divorce.

Mrs. Hazel M. Larabee asked for a divorce from Jack Larabee, whom she married in 1906 in Portland. He suddenly disappeared, and nothing was heard from him until two years ago, when he was located in California. He said he could not stand the Oregon rains and refused to come back to his wife. She was granted a decree.

Mrs. Ida White was granted a decree from C. J. White, whom she married in 1906 at Junction City, Or. She was also granted the custody of the child. Anna T. Hoffman said her husband just went away, and she never heard from him. This happened in 1907. She was also granted a decree.

"PASS ORDINANCE OR PEOPLE VOTE ON IT," RUSHLIGHT

But I do believe in serving the public and in getting an ordinance that will be as fair as possible to all interests and satisfactory to taxpayers.

Councilman Rushlight reiterated his previous declared intention of remaining in the city council in order to continue his fight against the O. R. & N., which, though it has announced that it will not seek further to obtain the vacation of valuable East Side streets, Mr. Rushlight believes to be only bluffing.

"My attorney has informed me that I can refuse to qualify as a member of the state legislature to which I was elected last month and in view of the fact that the people of this city, through a number of representative civic organizations have expressed their desires that I remain in the council I will do so, although it was my wish to serve in the state legislature.

"The railway company has apparently withdrawn from the fight for street vacations, but before it can use its new steel bridge now in process of construction it will be necessary for the road to secure franchises to connect with the approaches. It is my intention to resist the granting of such franchises until the company agrees to give the city rights of way for the Broadway bridge. And I am certain that the city will get these rights of way without cost."

SAN DIEGO WANTS TO SEE THE NELSON FENDER

The Nelson automatic air-controlled street car fender, which has been officially adopted in Portland, is attracting attention all along the Pacific coast. This week a representative of the San Diego city government called at the fender demonstrating rooms, No. 202 Washington street, to see the operation of the device, and declared it to be just what they are looking for. Arrangements will be made to demonstrate the device in San Diego in the near future. Similar requests for demonstrations have been received from other coast cities including Oakland, Tacoma and Spokane.

The Nelson fender will be demonstrated daily at No. 202 Washington street, until the time of the Wool Growers' convention at the armory on January 4, 5, 6 and 7, when it will be installed as one of the attractions at that place.

wasteful manner in which such resources of the west are used.

Welcome President Foster. The convention extended a welcome to President Foster and his corps of educators connected with the Reed institute, and expressed a desire for the highest degree of success to the college.

Oregon was felicitated on the re-establishment of the State Normal school and the convention pledged its members to place it on a high plane of efficiency.

State School Superintendent Aokerman was congratulated upon the record he has made during his term of office, and was presented with a bouquet of flowers.

The principal addresses of the day were delivered by F. F. Nalder, deputy state superintendent of Washington; R. F. Robinson, superintendent of Multnomah county; L. R. Alderman, state superintendent-in-charge for Oregon; Dr. Margaret Schallenberg and Dr. David Snedden.

At 4:30 the convention adjourned, leaving the place for the next meeting in the hands of the executive committee.

The attendance has been the largest in the history of the association, and the interest did not flag until the gavel fell for the last time.

sands and it is feared he may have been forced to alight there. Unless he managed to stick to his machine, it is feared he must have perished, as the sands form a sink over which no human being unaided could cross. Under the wings of the biplane struck squarely and were not broken by the fall, it is feared Grace may have been buried. Even if still alive, perched in his machine, rescue will be extremely difficult, as crossing the sands, even with every possible aid, is a task that has seldom been performed.

Grace wore a cork jacket and if he fell in the sea, he could have kept afloat for some time, but it is feared that if he was in the water he could not have gether with a fairer distribution of taxation.

The new law divorces from the state the influence of the Catholic church and is similar to the one in force in France. The Spanish law also reduces the number of religious orders and restricts or reduces the power of those remaining. The orders will not escape taxation where they engage in anything except strictly religious work.

The vote on the measure was 108 to 29.

AT THE THEATRES

Chorus Girls' Contest. Tonight, as is the usual custom at the Lyric theatre on Friday nights, the chorus girls of the Lyric Musical Comedy company will hold their regular weekly contest. The curtain rises tonight on the first performance at 7:30 sharp.

Laughing Hit of the Season Tonight. Wilson Franklyn and company are presenting the international comedy success, "My Wife Won't Let Me," at Fantages this week and are scoring heavily. Franklyn, in the role of the henpecked minister, is irresistible.

Investments for Aliens. From the New York Times. To Lajos Steiner belongs the honor of directing public attention to the fact that there is today no direct, purposeful effort in the state or nation to persuade the 400,000 resident immigrants that each year go abroad with their accumulations of savings, amounting easily to $275,000,000 or $300,000,000, to invest them in American farm lands.

It is foolish for this state, or for any state, or for the nation, to advertise abroad for fresh immigrants. Mr. Steiner points out, and very pertinently, that newly arrived immigrants have no funds wherewith to purchase farms, and their labor is best rewarded, not on our farms, but in the mines, factories and on great works of construction. But from such work they save money.

And they are hungry for land. As owners they would till our fertile eastern farms by the intensive methods learned in Europe. They would bring in their friends and relatives to help them, who would thickly settle the rural districts.

If they knew that agricultural land within easy access of the great American markets was obtainable at from $15 to $100 an acre, they would cease investing in lands in Austria and Italy, the value of which has been increased within a decade to $400 or $500 an acre. Why are not the officials of the department of agriculture in this and other states, of the bureau of information in the federal immigration service, and of the national department of agriculture busily spreading broadcast among the aliens resident in New York city information about investments in American farms?

Is it because no such information is to be had? Or is it because they do not realize that here is a method of infusing directly and profoundly, and for the better, conditions of prosperity in this country?

California increased its coal output at a greater rate than any other state last year, mining more than twice the quantity mined the year before.

An American at Tampico, Mexico, has discovered a method for extracting a textile fiber from banana plants and has formed a company to exploit it.

This recipe can be filled at home, so that no one need know of another's troubles, as the ingredients can be obtained separately at any well stocked drug store. They are in regular use and many different prescriptions are constantly being filled with them.

This will prove a welcome bit of information for all those who are overworked, nervous, dependent, nervous and have trembling limbs, heart palpitation, dizziness, cold extremities, insomnia, fear without cause, timidity in venturing, and general inability to act naturally and rationally as others do, because the treatment can be prepared secretly at home and taken without any one's knowledge.

Overworked office men and the many victims of society's late hours and dissipation will, it is said, find the restorative they are in need of.

The reader decides to try it, get three ounces of ordinary syrup sarsaparilla compound and one ounce compound fluid balsam; mix and let stand two hours; then get one ounce compound essence cardiol and one ounce tincture esdomene compound (not cardium); mix all together, shake well, and take a teaspoonful after each meal and one when retiring.

A certain well known medical expert asserts that the majority of men and many women are sufferers all because of dormant circulation of the blood and consequential impairment of the nervous force, which begets the most dreadful symptoms and untold misery.
