Berlin Mecca of American Musicians

By I. W. A. (Special Correspondence.) BERLIN, Nov. 9.—Berlin is a remarkable city in more ways than one and not the least remarkable in its music—especially the concerts given by celebrated artists, every night, two or more appearing at the different "Salles." One night it will be Fritz Kreisler with the Philharmonic orchestra, and Rosenthal with another, the next night perhaps Busoni and Mischa Elman with different orchestras. Of course such brilliant artists do not appear here every night, but there are always worth while ones, giving splendid programs, and to a music lover it is hard to choose, because one feels one can not afford to lose a single concert.

Among the best things of the season are the concerts, given by the famous Philharmonic orchestra, assisted by some well known artist, and Arthur Nikisch as director at their own historical (musically, for here have appeared all the famous artists, now passed away) "Salles."

These concerts are given once a month, on Sunday from 12 to 2, and repeated Monday night, but at double the price. I judge the Sunday concerts are given at the low prices for music students, and the hours are to accommodate the church goers, also to enable some of the audience to prepare a luncheon, for between parts one and two of the program, there is quite a long wait, and then it is rather amusing to see many of the people eating—anything from a cheese sandwich to a dainty piece of chocolate. After watching their evident enjoyment, the joke seems to be on those who "only stand and wait," but when Nikisch raps his baton, or rather when the bell rings, which it does at the commencement of all concerts here, one forgets the material things of life, and is only hungry for the music.

At the first of these concerts Mischa Elman was the soloist and while the same warm, beautiful tones were there, the technique and finish did not seem so perfect as two years ago. One felt that he needed to retire, for a time, and do some serious work, for certainly his splendid musical talent demands more maturity to do itself full justice, this concert here, one feels that he is in a concert, which was given later on, with only a piano accompaniment.

At the second Nikisch concert, Busoni was the soloist, and such a soloist! The perfect harmony between him and the orchestra left nothing to be desired musically or technically. In the Beethoven number his work seemed perfect, but in the Liszt Concerto it was remarkable and no wonder he was Liszt's favorite pupil.

Busoni is said by one to be the greatest pianist with an orchestra of the day. He was evidently very nervous, if one could judge from his actions, with his unoffending handkerchief. They were very amusing. His hands must have been too warm as he dried them on it at every piano rest, after which he would put it in his coat tail pocket, the next time in his hip pocket. This he kept up until it was a guess, if he would remember where it would be when he wanted it. Finally it went into his trousers' pocket. You felt sure he would not find it, and you were right, he had long forgotten, and the piano wait was not long enough for him to make a thorough search. So it rested peacefully under the balance of the evening and his trousers did duty thereafter. I thought how little critics real-use the nervous strain artists labor under at such a time.

Orchestra's Excellent Work. The work of the orchestra under Arthur Nikisch was faultless. Such perfect ensemble work and interpretation, then what beautiful pianissimo and crescendo, and all without any apparent effort on the part of the director of the orchestra.

It is restful to watch Nikisch lead after witnessing the gymnastics of many others. There are those who think the Royal Opera House orchestra is better, but I doubt it. The personnel may be better, but not as a whole, although Richard Strauss of "Salome" fame is the director.

Many Portland Students. There is quite a colony of Portland students here. Miss Beth Young, who is developing a fine voice under one of the leading singers in the Royal opera, as is also Mrs. Belcher I understand. Misses Edith and Lenor Gregory are both making rapid progress in their work. Portland's music lovers will remember Miss Lenor Gregory's violin recital two years ago in the old Heilig theatre. Ward Alden, who is studying under Professor Wirt, Maude Powell's teacher, W. W. Graham, who is with the celebrated violinist, Marteau, and Mrs. McCracken and Miss Eleanor U. Vincent, who are in Vienna studying piano.

Americans Good to Meet. On every hand, or rather at every concert, one meets American students and often their mothers, and your own people never seemed so good to see, nor your own language so good to hear, as when you are away off here in "Deutschland."

I heard of an American gentleman, a recent arrival, who asked a conductor to let him off at a certain street, and when they arrived there some one behind him shouted "Brooklyn bridge," and in relating it afterwards he said it was the finest music he had heard in Berlin.

FATHER IN RAGE SLAYS LITTLE SON

Goderich, Ont., Dec. 31.—One of the most brutal murders in the history of the county occurred here when George Vanstone, in a fit of temper, because his 6-year-old son, Freddie, whom he had been teaching numbers, could not count correctly up to 20, beat the child to death with a broomstick.

Mrs. Vanstone, after beseeching her enraged husband to stop, ran out for assistance, but when she returned with the police the child was dead. Vanstone broke the handle of one broom and seized another, which he must have used considerably, as there were blood marks on the handle.

The body was beaten to a pulp. The murderer spent some time in an asylum some years ago and had the reputation of possessing a most violent temper.

INSURGENTS BUSY IN MACEDONIA

Guerrilla Warfare Carried on and Anarchy is Threatening.

By Emil Andrássy. (Publishers' Press Leased Wire.) Vienna, Dec. 31.—Trouble is again becoming acute in Macedonia. Bands of Macedonian insurgents are active in the hills and are carrying on a particularly irritating system of guerrilla warfare. Bomb throwing, railroad wrecks, murders and robbing are matters of almost daily occurrence. The Turks are pursuing a policy of extermination against the bandits, who are retreating in kind and a practical state of anarchy exists.

The renewal of the troublesome times in the Balkan mountains is due to the avowed purpose of the dominant element in Turkey to make the whole country Turkish and Mohammedan. One result of this policy has been to put a stop to the age-old feud of the Greeks and Bulgarians and to bring about a more friendly feeling between Albanians and Macedonians, equal victims of the new missionary spirit of the young Turks.

Vienna is worried over the situation. It is realized here as nowhere else that the Balkans are inflammable to a degree and that the increased lawlessness in Macedonia, with the ruthless methods of fighting employed by both sides might very easily bring about a situation which would set Bulgaria and Turkey by the ears again.
