

SENATORIAL FIGHT IN NUTMEG STATE ONE OF WARMEST

If Bulkeley Wins He Must Beat a Barrel, a Bunch of Newspapers, a Railroad and His Uncle Bill H. Taft.

Hartford, Conn., Jan. 6.—The efforts of the opponents of United States Senator Bulkeley to prevent his reelection by the legislature which has just assembled here have brought about an exceedingly interesting personal contest in Connecticut. There are very powerful forces at work against him, and if he wins another term in the senate in spite of them all it will be a remarkable victory. No Connecticut politician has ever faced so formidable a combination as that which now confronts him.

This combination includes a rival aspirant backed by almost unlimited wealth, a large and influential section of the Connecticut press, the powerful New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad company, and the indirect influence of the federal administration.

In the campaign of 1908, Morgan C. Bulkeley was elected to the United States senate in January, 1905, to succeed General Joseph R. Hawley, having been mayor of Hartford from 1880 to 1888, and governor of Connecticut from 1888 to 1893. His principal competitor for the nomination in the legislature was the late Samuel Fessenden of Stamford. Senator Orville H. Platt died a few weeks after Senator Bulkeley took his seat in the senate, and another contest in the legislature took place immediately. A vigorous aspirant for Mr. Platt's seat appeared in the person of Allan W. Paige of Bridgeport, the two other candidates being Mr. Brandegee, then a member of the house of representatives, who finally won, and ex-Governor George F. McLean, who had been for many years very closely associated with Mr. Bulkeley. In the triangular contest Senator Bulkeley warmly supported Mr. McLean, who came within a few votes of obtaining the nomination in the legislative caucus.

McLean Only Competitor Now. In the present contest ex-Governor McLean appears as the only competitor of Senator Bulkeley. From being the closest of friends they have changed to the keenest of opponents. The McLean following give as the principal reason why Senator Bulkeley should retire at this time, an alleged promise made by the senator that he would, after one term in the senate, retire and make way for the younger man and do whatever he could to bring about his election.

Fought Taft's Nomination. The attitude of the federal administration toward Senator Bulkeley grows naturally out of the opposition of the senator to the nomination of Taft as the successor of Theodore Roosevelt in 1908. It may be recalled that the Taft men were strong enough in Connecticut to prevent either of the United States senators from being sent as delegates to the Chicago convention in that year. The support given by Senator Bulkeley to Senator Foraker of Ohio in the latter's defense of the Brownville soldiers was another matter that did not tend to improve the relations between the Connecticut senator and the White House.

McLean's Rise from the Banks. Ex-Governor McLean, who is fighting hard for the Bulkeley toga, has been one of the prominent men of Connecticut for many years. He began life as a reporter on a Hartford newspaper. His family was not rich and he had to make his own way in the world. He studied law and entered the office of the Hartford lawyer, who was the prin-

SENATOR OWEN OF OKLAHOMA EXULTS AT BANK DECISION

Explains How System More Than Pays for Itself; Says Would Be Still Better if Made Universal.

(United Press Special Wire.) Washington, Jan. 6.—In a statement issued exclusively to the United Press, Senator Robert L. Owen of Oklahoma has expressed his gratification over the decision of the United States supreme court upholding the bank deposit guaranty laws of the various states.

By Robert L. Owen. (Copyright, 1911, by the United Press Associations.) The decision of the United States supreme court upholding the bank guaranty laws of the various states, is a public business and the banker invites the public to deposit its money, and the state in issuing a charter should place the proper safeguards about the banker to protect the public as well as the banker. In Oklahoma we believe that the banker in demanding security for the money he lends the public should receive from the public. The cheapest form of security is the guaranty fund contributed by banks in proportion to their deposits, practically giving insurance at absolute cost, which costs are almost a negligible quantity. Law More Than "Pays for Itself." The fact is, that the banks contributing to the fund had their deposits so increased by the additional safety offered that it has been most profitable to them as a commercial and financial proposition, the increased deposits earning many times more than the cost of the small contribution to the guaranty fund, deposits in the state banks being nearly three times what they were three years ago. System Should Be Universal. The recent panic was due largely to the timidity of a certain class of depositors, who at the least public alarm secretly withdrew their money. Taking the banking and trust companies as a whole, their deposits average ten times the total cash, so that if 5 per cent of the depositors withdraw their deposits suddenly they remove from the banks half the cash, and when the banks become frightened there is a panic in the land, paralyzing commerce. To establish tranquility in financial affairs and insure stability of commerce and business, the bank guaranty law of Oklahoma, properly perfected, should be adopted by every state in the union and by the national banking system, so that every depositor would have as a safeguard a bank guaranty fund. Same as $100,000,000 Expansion. There is a total of $300,000,000 not deposited in any bank now that would come from its hiding place under this system. It would be as effective as a thousand millions under the banking system to establish this method, because every cash dollar means $10 in deposits and credit, as has been proved and exhibited in the report of the comptroller. If the amount of the National banks of the country were converted into a guar-

INSANITY IS CAUSED BY LIGHT, SAYS DOCTOR

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.) San Antonio, Texas, Jan. 6.—Dr. Chalmers Prentiss, who is sojourning in this city, makes the startling statement that much of the insanity of the present day is due to light. He says that statistics show that in the last 30 years insanity has increased 100 per cent. He declares that the increased use of lights has overworked the visual center of the brain and brought about many nervous disorders. "We no longer live," Dr. Prentiss declares, "as nature prescribed. When night comes we turn on the electric, or other light, some of us stay up until midnight and some later. This is in direct opposition to nature, and by doing so we are making some notes which must be paid later on in many forms of mental derangement."

SHORT COURSES AT O. A. C. POPULAR

Registration Shows Increase of Over 90 Per Cent—From All Over World.

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.) Oregon Agricultural College, Corvallis, Jan. 6.—With the largest attendance ever recorded for the winter short courses at this college the registration is still growing. The various deans are registering students daily, and judging from the fact that in previous years many students have entered after the first week of the work the attendance will probably increase at least 10 per cent more. At the present time the registration in the agricultural courses has increased over 90 per cent. At noon today 152 students were registered in this work. One hundred of these are entered for the course in horticulture. The large number of students coming to the college for this work has taxed the resources of the institution to their utmost. The class rooms are overcrowded and conditions are such that it will probably be necessary to divide some of the classes. There is not, at present, a recitation room in any of the buildings large enough to accommodate the short course students.

Please serve "Sunkist" oranges at breakfast tomorrow and learn the superiority of tree-ripened, seedless, fiberless oranges over the commonplace kind. Don't fail to save the wrappers.
