EXPECT MUCH FROM MT. HOOD RAILWAY

St. Johns People Have Visions of Big Power Plant and Competing Cars.

Satisfaction seems to be the keynote of the comments in St. Johns with regard to developments in the Mt. Hood railway project, in so far as they affect that city. Ground has been broken and building operations begun for the erection of a power house of the most modern design, which it is estimated will cost close to $200,000 by the time that the traction and light units are installed.

The announcement last week by an official of the Weyerhaeuser company that the long awaited mammoth saw-mill is to assume material form during the coming summer is likely to prove a prelude to the erection of extensive workshops, a drydock, repair shops and car building facilities for the Hill system in close proximity, for the statement that Hill holds a valuable if not a controlling interest in the Weyerhaeuser tract has never been contradicted and officials of the Hill system have made no secret during visits to St. Johns of the intention of the company to erect a series of shops and foundries in the vicinity.

The route outlined would tap all the warehouses and the growing manufacturing concerns along the waterfront and would give residents of East St. Johns an opportunity of reaching the retail center of St. Johns without undergoing their present trials of a two mile trip along a quagmire road or a journey to the heart of their own city by way of Portland, a distance of about 15 miles.

The adoption of the boulevard has been for many years publicly urged and by uninterested residents, believing that the utilizing of the road, the only 100 foot street in Portland, would create an attractive scenic highway.

the Portland council agreed to take over and maintain its portion of the boulevard is considered undeniably due to the receipt of tentative proposals for a street car franchise, and there is little doubt that the Hill interests, acting through some intermediary, were the power that formulated this proposal.

That events towards such a competing car service have moved rapidly during the last few weeks is patent and in view of the active preliminary work that is being carried out, important developments are expected in the immediate future.

J. H. Kobarg of Hood River was a visitor to St. Johns on Friday, his mission being to make an inspection of the street work, being attracted to the city by the accounts of street improvements he had noticed in the columns of The Journal. He reports that extensive street improvements are immediately to be put in in Hood River, and he obtained a large amount of information with regard to methods of construction and prices of material, visiting the city rock crusher, and interviewing contractors and councilmen.

Don't pass up this opportunity—the information contained in this special exhibit may be the means of saving many important cases for you. Our representative—an expert—will gladly give you his time, if interested. Phone us, Main 85 or A-6068—tear out this announcement NOW, so you won't forget.

the several churches of St. Johns yesterday. At St. Johns (R. C.) church on Portland boulevard the forty hours' devotion service was inaugurated at high mass. This is the first time this devotion has been held at St. Clements.

At the Christian church, a revival mission was begun under the leadership of State Evangelist Gregg. The coming of this notable evangelist had been unexpected until a few days ago, and Elder J. R. Johnson and his flock had little opportunity of heralding his visit. In spite of this, the church was well attended at both services and the mission will be continued for some weeks.

Forty Hours' Adoration Begun. There was considerable activity in the basement of a liquor house at 218 Morrison street was followed yesterday afternoon by a little excitement among the patrons of the Oh Joy theatre next door.

When smoke broke through the floor of the theatre a stampede for the door resulted. Officer Sims, who was at the theatre, took charge of affairs and with the assistance of the manager of the house succeeded in getting all out without an injury to anyone.
