A vigorous protest was entered by W. S. Lauthers against the condition in which the excavating work on the Contractor Seybold. It was suggested that inasmuch as the contractor had not given final notice of completion of the work, and the street committee had not passed on the work, it was somewhat premature for the whole council to consider the protest, which was referred to the street committee.

An arc light was ordered installed at the junction of Jersey and Maple streets. This light makes six additional standard arc lamps that have been ordered ed in prominent locations during the last two months.

communication from E. Durand director of census, was read announcing that the official figures of population for St. Johns show 4872 residents. In view of the school census last November, which reported 1425 pupils of school by using the recognized city multiple of 4%, the population seems to ex-

Attorney Fisher and Chief Engineer Smith from the Mount Hood Light & Power company asked permission to erect poles and string the necessary wires for furnishing light and power in the city under franchise. These officials predicted that the new power house at St. Johns would be completed about the middle of April, and they announced that they would be in a position to supply current to customers before the end of the present year. The machinery to be installed in the new power house is designed to develop about 6s,000 horsepower. The officials of the company spoke of the center of activity being in the Peninsula and terminals being located on the Peninsula. Councilman Davis endeavored to draw from the officials some definite announcement of plans for car service, and while they were non com-mittal as to the date when they would bring up the question of a street car franchise in St. Johns, they conveyed the impression that it would be as soon the question of franchise and right of way in the more immediate vicinity of Portland had been definitely determined. The lighting franchise a first reading and was referred to the city attorney for consideration.

Maccabees Install Officers. Despite the inclement weather the installation of officers of the Order of Maccabees for the ensuing year was night. State Commander Sherwood was present and assisted at the inaugura tion. This order is making considerable headway in St. Johns. Deputy Supreme Commander Herbert J. Ames makes his headquarters in this city and devotes all his attention to the work of the order. Five new members were obligated at last night's meeting and arrangements If You Haven't Used Parisian were made for the visit of the No. 1 degree team. The following members were installed in their respective offices: C. M. Toole, commander; Oren E. Gould, lieutenant commander; J. Helms, chaplain; L. L. Fortune, sergeant; J. H. Calkins Strong for Assembly.

Calkins of Lane was the most outspoken in condemnation of parts of the Oregon system. He said he regarded the initiative as vicious and incapable of being changed so as to be satisfactory. He approved the referendum, but landed hard on the recall, which he also termed "victous." He said it is a club held over executive and judicial officers, intimidating them in the performance of what they ought to do. The direct primary and corrupt practices act he favored, but opposed Statement No. 1. As a climax he added;

"If you who are divided about the wording of this resolution were to do as I would do, you would hold a caucus, an assembly, or a convention, decide what to do, and then stand for it."

Sinnott said if the resolution had originally been drawn by him he did not know how he would have worded it, but he was not willing to retreat under fire or insert mild and soothing language to placate those who hate the Oregon laws. He declared his confidence in the Oregon system. Conceding it has imperfections, he declared that the people have not gone wrong oftener than has the legislature, with its past history of corruption and abortive laws. Malarkey, while denouncing Bourne, supported the Kellaher resolution, which in effect praised the initiative and referendum, the direct primary, the corrupt practices act and the recall, affirmed the belief of the legislature that these laws constitute the best syscommended this system to the legisla-sures of other states. Malarkey sought to have the resolution amended to strike out the "best system of the phrase, but after this falled he fell in line for the unexpurged version as insisted upon by Kellaher.

Defeated by 17 to 11. After the orators had become hausted and the roll was called, the resolution met defeat by a vote of 17 to 11, with Joseph and Parish absent. There were three roll calls, the first on Malarkey's motion to recommit with instructions to amend, the second on the minority report killing the resolution. The vote here given is on the minority report, perhaps the clearest in-

Kellaher Might Have Won. Keilaher probably could have won the day had he been willing to medify the resolution to the extent of omitting Burlington street sawer had been left the declaration that the Oregon system is "The best in the world." Albee, who has always been a friend of Oregon's popular laws, insisted this was unwise, and voted against it. So did Selling. who likewise appeared in strange company, and so did Barrett of Washington, who said he would vote the other way if the pruning shears were applied. Change of these three votes would have made it 14 to 14, and others might have gone into the Kellaher camp had he consented to modify.

Albee took the stand that, while havng faith in the laws adopted by the cople, he was not prepared to say that they are the best in the world.

Nottingham Fears Kellaher. Nottingham expressed the opinion that the object of the resolution is advertising and said he did not believe in hese good intentions of Kellaher.

McColloch of Baker said he was willng to indorse the resolution just as it stood, as it expressed his belief that Oregon's system of laws is the best in Bowerman spoke in sarcastic vein, devoting much of his time to an excoriation of Bourne. He said the resolution was not comprehensive enough, because it did not indorse all the laws passed by the people. He suggested additional clauses, calling attention to the home rule bill, the two bils "annihilating" the fishing industry on the Columbia, the referendum on the appropriation bill in 1906, the vote on the tax amendment last year, the jury amendment, the other acts meeting his disapproval.

As exhibits, he said, he would attach the senior United States senator, one of the nine foot ballots, and one of the official pamphlets sent out to legislation measures to the people.

Norton resented the idea of "putting him on record" when no legislation is pending. No one's business what his views are, he declared. He added that he favors the people's laws, but would vote against the resolution because it is useless and would exhibit "arrogance and inordinate conceit."

Chase and Carson next attacked the esolution, the latter announcing he is willing to be called a standpatter.

Malarkey delved into a defense of the resolution and in reply to Bowerman suggested that additional exhibits be attached to tell of the blunders and corruption of legislatures of the past. He said that except for the initiative the local option, the direct primary and corrupt practices act would have been de-
