H. B. 246—By Rackleff, providing a minimum width of the to be used on Two Petty Engineer Officers Sentenced to Seven Years' Imprisonment for Inhuman Conduct to New Stoker.

> Berlin, Feb. 4 .- At a naval courtmartial held at Kiel two engineer petty officers of a torpedo boat were sentenced to seven years penal servitude each for brutal fit treatsentenced to ment of a stoker, causing the latter's death. Petty Officer Wroscke sent a recruit named Brandt to clean a boiler furnace which was still red hot and thrashed him with a rope's end because he wanted to come out. Subsequently Wroschke locked Brandt in the furnace till the latter fainted. Then he was brought out and abused for two hours, while in a fainting condition. On the following day the man died.

That hazing is not only winked at but encouraged is shown by the fact that Emperor William has commuted the sentence of a week's "imprisonment" passed on two Bonn students for "ragging" to a week's "detention." sentence of imprisonment would have closed the roads to all official careers in the army or civil service to the two young criminals in question, both of whom belong to the "nobility," that is to say, people who follow no useful trade, calling or occupation." The police have failed to find the owner of the voice which was heard in the flat of the eccentric old lady, Frau Hoffmann, who was later found dead in her bedroom

Murderer Escapes.

The police, summoned by the neighbors, who had heard a scream and the sound of a fall in the flat, had to force their way in. Each door was locked, and as each was broken open the police heard a voice protesting in the room beyond. The mysterious person is supposed to have escaped by the back stairs. The mystery was pursued no further, the body not being discovered by the police, who abandoned the search for a week.

The result of the investigation has heen rather to shake the theory that the criminal was a woman. The police and the neighbors who heard the murderer through the closed doors were convinced that the voice was that of a

The murderer must have been well acquainted with the old woman and her habits. She was so suspicious that she would admit nebody whom she did not know well. The murderer must have been able to gain access to her sitting room without opposition. A large sum, stated to amount to $30,000, chiefly in securities, has been found in a drawer in the flat. Probably it was this that the murderer was looking for.

Researches have elicited another fact exemplifying the extraordinary coolness and daring of the criminal. After he was disturbed by the police and the neighbors, he remained in the flat hunt- the trial was held, were several in the doors, fully two hours later. The acles, handcuffs and chains, police and the neighbors, completely deceived, were convinced that Frau Hoffmann had been suddenly seized with Illness, which they thought sufficiently accounted for the fall and the scream they heard, and that she left the flat rather than admit strangers.
