

FREEZE MAY STOP NAVIGATION AGAIN ON UPPER RIVER

With Ice Forming and Water Two Feet Below Zero Mark, Operation Above Celilo is Considered Perilous.

Ice and snow on the upper Columbia river are threatening to close navigation again for the present, according to advices received by the Open River Transportation company. It is probable the steamer Inland Empire will not make another trip up the river until the ice is out.

Information received this morning by Captain W. S. Buchanan, general superintendent of the company, from Captain Dave Smith, master of the Inland Empire, was to the effect that snow-storms and cold weather had made navigation of the river dangerous and with the water two feet below the zero mark, that further navigation would be practically impossible until weather conditions become more favorable.

The Inland Empire reached Pasco and Kennewick yesterday after a successful run over the lowest stage of water she has yet been operated on. Captain Smith said in his report the weather was a little better yesterday, but that it was very cold and that ice was making in the river.

Captain Buchanan said this morning he expected the steamer would be able to get back to Celilo all right, but that until the ice gets out and the weather moderates she will not be sent out again.

If the cold weather in that section continues a few days longer it would be impossible to operate the boats anywhere as the water is now at the lowest stage at which boats can be navigated without serious danger and it will probably remain at least its present low stage until some of the snow has melted to give a rise. After the snow begins to melt and Snake river begins to rise the Twin Cities will be placed on the Lewiston run.

The Inland Empire has been on the run between Celilo and upper river points only about a week as she had to be taken off more than a month ago because of the ice in the Columbia.

NEW TYPE OF BUOY

Holds 2120 Cubic Feet of Gas and Can Be Re-Filled in Water. First of its kind in this district, a new type of compressed acetylene buoy was received by the lighthouse department this morning and will be installed on Ellen Sands, in Willapa Bay. The distinctive feature is that the tanks, or accumulators, which hold 2120 cubic feet of gas and are good for about a year, can be changed while the buoy is in the water. With the present type of buoys used in this district it is necessary for the tenders to bring them in and it is expected that the new buoy will be saved a lot of wear and tear because it will be only necessary to place a new tank in the buoy and bring in the old one to be refilled.

ROBBER SHOTS OFFICER AND RUNS

Ellensburg Patrolman Interrupts Bandit Holding Up Restaurant; May Die.

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)

Ellensburg, Wash., Feb. 27.—Joe Shull, former chief of police of Ellensburg and now special merchant's patrol, was shot in the hip by a bandit who held up the U. & N. cafe at 2:10 this morning. Shull had been following a suspicious character all evening and when he went by the cafe he noticed the Chinese proprietor and cooks lined up along the wall with a bandit looking in the cash drawer. Shull pulled his gun and started for the door, but the bandit suddenly raised his revolver and shot at Shull through the glass window several times. Smoke prevented the watchman from seeing where his assailant was for a moment and the next thing Shull saw was a bandit rushing toward the kitchen in a day.

Shull fired twice through the glass of the door and then turned and ran toward the alley to head the man off. As Shull ran into the alley some one shot him at close range through the hip and then rushed by him. Shull, although wounded, emptied his revolver at the man.

The officers are unable to say whether two men were involved or not. It is thought that an outside man may have shot the officer. Shull is not certain whether one or two men were together. Shull is in the hospital and suffering much pain. Doctors say that the bullet apparently has not broken the bone and that the officer has a good chance to live. Sheriff German and deputies and all members of the police force worked all night and have rounded up some suspects, but so far have been unable to connect any one definitely with the crime.

MOORES "JUMPS JOB," NEW CLERK CALLED IN

(Salem Bureau of The Journal.)

Salem, Or., Feb. 27.—Owing to the fact that Journal Clerk Gordon Moores has "married a wife," Chief Clerk Drager has been compelled to call to his assistance in revising the house journal Representative George Neuner of Douglas county, who was journal clerk in the house two years ago. Moores has completely jumped the job, leaving Drager to perform the task alone. Mr. Moores married Miss Jessie Hurley. Both were students together at the University of Oregon. The marriage was quite unostentatious, the parents of neither of the young people being aware of the nuptials. The wedding was held in this city, at the residence of A. N. Moores, an uncle of Gordon Moores.

A Great Aid in the Dairy.

Professor Dean's first advice to dairymen is—"Clean the pails, cans and separators thoroughly, at least once or twice a day."

S soap and water remove surface dirt but they do not thoroughly remove all the little germs which sour and taint the milk. The greatest of all cleansers is Gold Dust washing powder. It not only removes all the visible dirt and grease, but goes deep after every trace of impurity, and leaves the milk pails, cans and bottles really clean, wholesome and safe. Moreover, it does the work more quickly and easily than any other cleanser known.

THE MEIER & FRANK STORE

Manufacturers' Association's Made-in-Oregon Exposition

THIS great Industrial Exposition at Meier & Frank's opened the eyes of thousands yesterday to the immense scale on which manufacturing is done under the "Made-in-Oregon" banner!

Few people have any idea of the multitude of products manufactured within the state—of the wearing apparel, the food products, the every-day necessities which are made by Oregon people with Oregon materials.

At great expense, both to ourselves and the Manufacturers' Association, these exhibits have been arranged. The big Fourth Floor of our Main Building fairly hums with activity—right before your eyes dozens of young women are engaged in the making of shirts, overalls, etc. Men are weaving bed springs, making tents, mattresses, etc., besides all the big showings of finished products.

And in the show windows, too, overalls are being made. One window shows the production of coffee from the native tree to the packages in which it reaches the consumer. And many others too numerous to mention.
