THE STAY-AT-HOME SHOPPER

By Darra More. THIS is the time of year when Maggie Mills, inquiring carelessly, "Are you going down town this morning, dear?" When the former replies in the affirmative, the latter continues, "Oh, I'm so glad. I have a lot of things to do today, and want you to stop at M— and get me a pair of white gloves to wear to the Watson's-tonight. I have a sample of blue velvet that I want matched, too. I'll send the sample over by Minnie, and you can get me two yards of ribbon, etc."

Again, Maggie makes for her car, and meets the postman, who hands her a letter, postmarked "Woodburn." It is from Cousin Julia. Quickly she opens it, and reads, "Dearest Maggie: Would you mind doing a little shopping for me. It is so hard to get what one wants in a small town. You know what's what, so I'll leave everything to your excellent taste and judgment. Please get me three yards of lace to match enclosed sample (I got some last year at B—, and maybe they have some on hand), send blue straw hat with flowers on approval. Possibly, you had better send several hats; then, I can help to build, and where their second son, William N., was born. He took up a donation claim there, but in 1869 sold it and removed to Pierce county."
