IN SOCIETY

Mr. and Mrs. David Taylor Honeyman are being felicitated by their friends upon the advent of a son Wednesday morning.

Mrs. Herbert Kirkland Selby entertained 19 little maids Wednesday in honor of the tenth anniversary of her daughter, Marie. Pink rose buds carried out the color scheme of flowers and favors. Miss Marguerite Hume assisted the hostess.

Dr. and Mrs. George O. Pelgram are in Philadelphia on their way to Atlantic City, where they will remain a month before going to their camp in the Maine woods.

Mrs. Clarence Davis of San Francisco, who has been the guest of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. O. Pouch, for the past three weeks, is returning to her home in the Bay City Sunday. During her stay she has been entertained by numbers of her friends. Wednesday Mrs. George Willard Brown gave a buffet luncheon and bridge afternoon for her when card honors were captured by Mrs. George D. Peters.

Mr. and Mrs. George Davis will give a small bridge tonight at their apartment in the Rose-Friend.

Mrs. H. L. Chapin opened her handsome home, 623 Wasco street, yesterday for the May day tea, benefiting Patton home. The music room, in its tones of brown, was made more beautiful with decorations of Scotch broom. The drawing room, hall and dining room were attractive with snowballs. Despite the inclemency of the weather over 200 women called during the hours. They were received by Mrs. H. N. Rand, Mrs. August Lang, Mrs. Benjamin F. Weaver, Mrs. H. Burgard, Mrs. Oscar Ballou, Mrs. C. C. Newcastle and Mrs. H. L. Chapin. Presiding in the dining room were Mrs. J. W. Hefferlein, Mrs. Lake Wolford, Mrs. Osterhout, Mrs. Herbert G. Reed, Mrs. Root, Mrs. Fuller, Mrs. H. G. Lattin and Mrs. Waldo Stewart. An excellent musical program was furnished under the direction of Mrs. H. A. Heppner.

Mrs. Harold F. McCormick of Chicago, daughter of John D. Rockefeller, who is introducing Chicago to an all fresco life, such as the Parisians enjoy at Armonville and in the Bois. At the head of 35 of Chicago society's most exclusive men and women, Mrs. McCormick paraded through Lincoln Park and down the Lake Shore drive recently, thereby inaugurating the first of the semi-weekly parades of fashion which she hopes to make popular in her set.

Afternoon Tea.
Tea tables are unusually pretty this spring, and no place is quite so satisfactory to show off one's latest table accessories and dainty gowns, no place do my lady's dainty jeweled hands appear to greater advantage than when presiding at her informal 3 o'clock tea. This cozy, unconventional hour is becoming popular with the men as well as the fair sex, and those who have been in England some homes thoroughly addicted to the tea habit.

How to Spend a Dollar Usefully

By Darra More.
NEW YORK has recently had a Child Welfare Exhibition. So great was its success that Chicago has had the exhibition brought to that city, and this week the big Coliseum is crowded daily with men and women seeking to learn in how many useful ways a dollar may be spent. The women of Chicago have financed the venture, and it is to them that Chicago is indebted for the splendid display.

Mrs. Emmone Blaine sounded the keynote of the purpose of the exhibition when she wrote: "We pay more attention to our trees and plants than we do to the lives of the children of our great city. The Child Welfare Exhibit is intended to draw the city's attention to the lives of the children and to the ways in which city life affects them. It is intended to put questions to us which we forget to put to ourselves and to give answers which we might search for a long time and not find, except for the work of the experts who have put their work and their wits together for the production of this exhibit of children's interests."

"They have taken the child as he is found in his city setting and asked: What are his chances of having a wholesome environment as a home? What are his chances of being properly cared for as an infant? What are his chances of being protected from disease which a city surrounding makes him so much more in danger of than would life in the country? What are the opportunities for his health to be conserved against the thousand endangering, down-pulling tendencies of the life of a little child spent in a continuous crowd—the life of a growing child spent always between the walls of a great city?"

"What agencies does the community afford, as he grows, for his instruction and training for his life work—for the growth of his mind, as his body develops, toward making him a useful citizen? What is his protection against the fiercely pressing, urgent demand for wage earning units of all sizes in the struggle for a family's existence on a minimum wage in a packed city? "What assurance is there that he will have any of that element of youth and growth—recreation? Coming from a crowded house directly into a paved street, where is he to find the chance for the outburst of youth in play which it is his human right to demand? What laws have those wise adults put on their records for the regulation of all these matters for the children of their city? And finally, what is being done for the children by those few who must see farther than the many—what is being done by philanthropy to fill the gaps which best it may help and there and set the standard in a few spots until the community can see and will act for itself for all of its children?"

"These questions the Child Welfare Exhibit puts and attempts to answer as best it may."

"The young child is a young animal with the possibilities of a god. He cannot fill the circle of his great powers if they are neglected on any side."

"We are strangely blind to the interests of our race. The leaders of our nation have long spent more time and thought, money and scientific effort on the development and preservation of plants and animals than on the development and preservation of our own young."

Then wring out and put into a boiler of hot water, in which a bar of soap has been cut, a spoonful of borax and two of kerosene have been added; never more, as it will form dots on clothes. Boil 30 minutes, take out, rub and rinse. Unless dirty they will need no rubbing. I think every one that tries this will find it satisfactory.

A very easy way of laundering clothes. Soak the clothes over night; chop up one bar of naphtha soap, put in one half gallon water, let boil till thoroughly dissolved; have enough lukewarm water to cover clothes; pour the boiling soap in; put clothes in; next morning chip up one bar of good common soap, put in three quarts of water and let cool for five minutes; pour in one half teaspoonful of gasoline. Stir while pouring. Have cold water ready in boiler; pour soap and gasoline in; set on stove; let come to nearly boiling; put clothes in; boil 50 minutes; rise in three waters, with a little bluing in last water. Clothes will be very white with but little rubbing.

Friendly Advice.
One of the members of a country congregation boasted that he could preach as good a sermon as the minister. The worthy divine, hearing this, offered him the use of his pulpit one Sunday.

When the fateful day arrived the church was crowded, and the boastful one ascended the pulpit. Opening his Bible he gave out his text, "I am the Good Shepherd."

Apparently at a loss he repeated the words. It was obvious that he could get no further when for the third time he said, "I am, the Good Shepherd."

At last an old woman rose, and thus addressed the would-be preacher, "Come down, ma munnie, and be one of the flock; it'll suit ya better."

Dyspepsia

Constipation, Sour Stomach, Headache

Most people eat more than is good for them. The stomach tries to digest all that is put into it, but if repeatedly overloaded it goes on strike. That's indigestion. Rich, over-sweet, indigestible food weakens the stomach and makes it unable to take care of the material put into it. More food taken into a weakened stomach than the stomach can digest, stays there, forms gases and rots, bringing on all the horrors of dyspepsia. The only way to cure dyspepsia is to clean out the digestive canal with CASCARETS. Keep it clean with CASCARETS. All forms of stomach and bowel troubles are quickly
