The kindness of Mrs. Grace Stephenson, now living at 364 Ross street, in loaning her diamonds to Samuel D. Livingston of 429 Columbia street when he was arrested March 4 for conducting a gambling game at the Arcade hotel, in order to provide bail for himself and others, has resulted in no end of trouble for Mrs. Stephenson, who through the cash assets that she has lost $95 in legal and a large supply of household goods.

MARRIED LIFE HAD TOO MUCH RESTRAINT

Ralph V. Hamlin did not like the personal restraint attached to married life, he plainly told his wife, Pauline Mills Hamlin, this was the only reason he was not satisfied. This was the explanation Mrs. Hamlin made this morning to Judge Gantenbein of the circuit court in asking for a divorce. She told the judge her husband became very restless a few weeks after they were married at Riverside, Cal., in 1909, and the only reason he could give for this condition was that he did not like the freedom in southern Oregon. He left his wife and returned to California. The divorce was granted.
