

Women's Clubs and Their Work

Edited by Mrs. Sarah A. Evans

TOMORROW afternoon at 3 p. m. in the auditorium of Olds, Wortman & King's store the Oregon Federation of Women's clubs will present one of the most classic entertainments ever given in Portland. It will be a lecture on "The Immortality of Hellenic Art," by Raymond Duncan. And will be illustrated by a large number of stereoscopic views of Hellenic art and crafts, which will include views of ancient temples, palaces and ruins. Dr. Duncan will also illustrate many of the poses and features of the Greek play.

This entertainment is a great concession on the part of Mr. Duncan, whose rule is, either to receive no admission at all and give his services free to the mission of education, or to charge the same prices for star attractions, which he always gets when he makes a business enterprise of his work. But, upon hearing of the work of the Oregon Federation of Women's clubs, and learning of the need of funds, he most generously consented to grant the request of some of the officers, and chairman of committees, and give this entertainment, with the modest admission of 25 cents, turning over the entire receipts to the federation.

Mr. Duncan needs no introduction to a Portland audience. For the past two weeks he has been giving a series of lectures in the Olds, Wortman & King auditorium under the auspices of the Portland Women's club. They have embraced Hellenic art, music, gymnastics, weaving and many other phases of ancient Greek culture. Every lecture has been given to an audience which crowded the rooms far beyond even the standing room capacity, and on several occasions large numbers were turned away.

This popularity of Mr. Duncan encourages the promoters of the entertainment to believe, that as the lecture is so much more important a feature than the attendance will be very great, and that the sale of tickets will have to stop before the hour of opening. As there will be no reserved seats, it will follow the rule of "first come first served."

LAST Monday a delightful and profitable meeting of the Forestry club was held at the home of Mrs. Morton Doty on East Davis street. The business session was devoted to the discussion of the matter of compiling a book on the historic trees of the Pacific coast.

The affair was left in the hands of Mrs. J. C. Pritchard, who will have the matter in charge if it is decided to undertake it.

Mrs. A. H. Breyman read the paper of the afternoon, on "The Forests of Today." She said in part:

"Trees form so great a part of our very existence, it is inconceivable how future generations could live without them. Until we begin to investigate, we cannot realize that the prosperity of every country depends upon its forests. Taking, for example, the two greatest forest producing states in the Union, Washington and Oregon. These forests bring more wealth into these states than any three of their other industries. Forestry wealth is community wealth, for it circulates through every artery of trade and commerce and affords every walk of life. By taxation it assists in supporting government, schools and public roads. More depends on the forests than on any other natural resource of the world; travel and all transportation by rail and water, the productivity of the farm, the prosperity of the merchant—all depend upon the forests. Without forests we would have no game birds, or the many things that make life bright and beautiful. If we wish to realize what a country devoid of its forests would be, we have but to look at the devastation of China, Greece and Asia Minor, which are the world's most terrible examples of the evil of forest destruction. Let us profit by these lessons before it is too late and save our forests to future generations. It is a lesson that would seem to admit of no argument."

THE Woman's Federation of Oregon was able to represent at Corvallis last Saturday in the person of Mrs. George M. Welster, leader in the art department of the Portland Women's club. Mrs. Welster came upon invitation of the College Folk, a woman's club of the Oregon Agricultural college, and she was greeted with a brilliant audience of 500 or more from the city and from the great school.

Prior to the lecture Mrs. Welster was met at the Commercial club by the Corvallis ladies, at their best, on Tag day, for through assistants and otherwise, they were raising hundreds of dollars for civic improvement. The clubrooms were decorated with many varieties of Oregon flora. Refreshments were served and the afternoon was one of the brightest social events in the history of the little city. A little later Mrs. Welster was a guest of Waldo Hall—the home of O. A. C. girls attending school from abroad. The hall was named in honor of Mrs. Clara Waldo, who devotes much of her time to the young women in college.

Mrs. Welster spoke of the good work accomplished by the Oregon federation, and urged the local clubs to join the state association and aid in the great work. It is generally known here that the federation is assisting many needy girls in obtaining an education; and the speaker emphasized the aid which local clubs could give the state association if more of them would assist in extending the influence and usefulness of the organization. It is probable that the College Folk and the Tuesday Afternoon Culture club will both join the federation at an early date.

Mrs. Welster has spent several years in Europe in the study of the masters. Her familiarity with Italian art enabled her audience to feel that they were walking with an artist among the highest class of Italian paintings. It was a talk rather than a lecture. You know that Aristotle talked and walked and Socrates talked and walked. When people were truly great there were few lecturers. They merely talked for they had much to say. The speaker gave the impression of one who had lived with art until she had fallen in love with it, and she was in love, she wanted to tell all about it. Art ceased to be high sounding, for she made it easy for the elementary minds, as well as for the deeper student, by bringing it down to the level of the rudimentary study of the farm. By taxation it assists in supporting government, schools and public roads. More depends on the forests than on any other natural resource of the world; travel and all transportation by rail and water, the productivity of the farm, the prosperity of the merchant—all depend upon the forests. Without forests we would have no game birds, or the many things that make life bright and beautiful. If we wish to realize what a country devoid of its forests would be, we have but to look at the devastation of China, Greece and Asia Minor, which are the world's most terrible examples of the evil of forest destruction. Let us profit by these lessons before it is too late and save our forests to future generations. It is a lesson that would seem to admit of no argument."

REFORM organization is not always popular, nor is it always well for it to be so, as popularity sometimes means weakness, but with increasing frequency we find evidence that the W. C. T. U. of Oregon comes dangerously near to popularity. One such evidence comes to us in the news of a reception recently tendered to Mrs. Ida Marsters of Roseburg, the state recording secretary of the W. C. T. U. While the reception was given under the auspices of the local organization, it was participated in by the leading citizens of the town regardless of church membership or reform affiliation. It sometimes happens that such recognition is given to those who, for themselves, are scarce deserving of the praise, which comes to them because of a place they have chanced to fill. The following from the Roseburg paper gives the main features of a very pleasant event:

The parlors of the M. E. church were the scene of a reception, last evening, given by the ladies of the W. C. T. U. in honor of the birthday of Mrs. A. C. Marsters, former president of the local organization. A large number were present to enjoy the event, and an immense cake, ornamented by 12 wax candles, all of which were lighted, representing the 12 years of service that Mrs. Marsters had given as president of the Roseburg W. C. T. U. was presented to the guest of honor in an appropriate fashion by Mrs. Barnes, and speeches by Rev. E. Olin Eldridge, Rev. J. E. Burkhardt, on behalf of the Ministerial union, spoke in a congratulatory way of the excellent work of Mrs. Marsters during the years that she stood at the head of the W. C. T. U. in this city. Other features of the evening's program were a charming recitation by Mrs. Barnes, and speeches by B. W. Strong and A. C. Marsters. Following the program delicious refreshments were served the guests, and a general social hour enjoyed. It was the consensus of opinion of those present that this was one of the most enjoyable affairs that Roseburg has known in many years.

LOW CUT GOWNS BARRED IN ROME

Vatican Rule Prohibiting Low Necked Gowns From Official Church Functions Enforced.

By Clement J. Barrett. (Publishers' Press Leased Wire.) Rome, May 29.—The rule of the Vatican which bars women who wear low necked gowns is to be rigidly enforced. The wives of ambassadors to the Holy See may no longer attend official functions attired in "low necks." This decision comes as the sequel to an unpleasant episode recently at the Spanish embassy when Cardinal Rampolla took exception to the dress of one lady announcing that she must leave the table.

At a state banquet which was given at the Quirinal in honor of Prince Arthur of Connaught, cordial boasts were exchanged. In the course of his speech Prince Arthur referred to the sympathy of the British people with the Italians 50 years ago, and went on to say: "Those feelings of unalterable friendship between our two countries have continued undisturbed ever since, and the good wishes of which I am the bearer on this auspicious occasion are not only those of my sovereign, but of the entire British nation."

Queer Case of Identity. There is a startling sequel to the case of Fortunato Assenzio, who was arrested in Naples on suspicion of being "Peter the Painter." Though it was soon established that this was a case of mistaken identity the man was detained as a suspect because of the mystery overhauling his life. It has been discovered that a poor peasant couple living near Vicenza has been making the prisoner a liberal allowance to lead the life of a dandy. They stated that they had been acting secretly on behalf of rich anonymous parents to whom Assenzio was born. A few days ago a nobleman presented himself at the municipality of Tonigi, and said he was Count Mastai and formally recognized Assenzio as his son whom he said was Count Mastai.

Stephan Murdered. A Neapolitan shepherd named Leonardo Pisone, who had eloped with his sweetheart because the girl's parents refused to sanction the betrothal on account of their unequal social status, has been murdered. The couple were traced to Naples and arrested. The girl was handed over to her parents, and Pisone was committed to prison, whence he was recently released through the influence of friends. The girl's father was astonished to see Pisone tending his flock in the vicinity of the father's house. The father, it is said, led a couple of ferocious mastiffs loose upon the lad, and then calling to his five sons they beat him till he was unconscious and threw his body down a ravine.

Milan Banker Stabbed to Death. With nine wounds on his body, Signor Setagalli, director of the Lombard Bank of Milan, was bound stabbed to death in his establishment. The victim's pocketbook is missing, but his gold rings were untouched. Although a bunch of private keys, including that of the vault lying on the office table, the steel safe had not been tampered with. Another circumstance that seems to point to private vengeance is the finding of a lock of female hair in a corner of the office. The police, however, are divided in opinion as to the motive of the crime. It is known that the director expressed fears of an attack on the bank from suspicious characters haunting the
