Miss Elizabeth Stewart arrived in Seattle Tuesday for the guest of her friend, Miss Elizabeth Sander, a frequent Portland visitor. The following account comes from the Sunday Seattle Post-Intelligencer: Miss Elizabeth Sander made her debut Thursday afternoon at a brilliant reception given in her honor by her mother, Mrs. Fred Everett Sander, at the family home, 214 Seventh avenue. The rooms were exquisitely decorated in pink and white, carnations white lilies and quince blossoms being arranged in artistic profusion. The color scheme was chosen to harmonize with Miss Sander's gown of pink satin, with tunic of pale green marquisette edged with silver beads, and the shower bouquet of pink sweet peas, chosen from among many floral tributes to the young debutante, completed a lovely picture. Miss Sander wore an imported gown of gray satin, veiled with black marquisette bordered with bands of embroidery outlined with cut steel, and carried a shower bouquet of lavender sweet peas. The tea table was centered with an art basket filled with snapdragons, narcissus, lilies and maiden-hair ferns. It was presided over by Mrs. Maurice McFicken, Mrs. Ralph W. Emmons, Miss Elizabeth Stewart, of Portland, and Mrs. Alexander McClure Bell, assisted by Miss Marian Engle, Miss Helen McEwan, Miss Gladys Stuart and Miss Nellie Burns. The punch bowl was presided over by Miss Marguerite Stewart, assisted by Miss Martha Krutz and Miss Marguerite Gaffney. Assisting in entertaining the guests were Mrs. Sherwood Gillespy, Mrs. A. W. Engle, Miss Isabelle Whyte, Mrs. W. E. Boone and Mrs. Carolyn N. Gillespy. Mr. Albin, a cousin of Miss Sander, and Helen Thompson received the cards at the door.

MUCH ADVERSE CRITICISM

producing or distributing the necessary tea, even to the extent of regulating prices. This seems radical, but let someone sit down and try to work it out some other way, and see what other conclusion can be reached.

OREGON CONGRESS OF MOTHERS AND PARENT TEACHER CIRCLES

"To Care Is the Voice of the Past; to Prevent the Divine Whisper of Today"

The apathy, indifference and ignorance of parents and educators to the necessity of preventive methods, if we would conserve our nation's moral forces, are marked. Elizabeth Harrison, in an address before the National Convention of Mothers and Teachers, said: "If deep and earnest conference is needed as to the conserving of our material resources, how much more important is it that we should conserve our human resources."

If forests and waterways and coal mines are "trusts" to be rightly administered that future generations of citizens may have prosperity and wealth, how much more important is it that the children of today should be studied, protected, developed and their sources of intellectual wealth and spiritual power be conserved and not wasted?

We may preserve our national wealth of coal and iron and extend national ownership to gold mines, but unless we can preserve and develop the inner resources of the children of our land, our future citizens, of what avail the silver and gold? Of what use to mankind is a land that is rich in bank stocks and poor in brain power? Or one that has cheap transportation and cheap thoughts?

This child welfare problem is greater than a national problem. The world is looking to us educationally. When our nation stands well down the line in business integrity it is time for mothers, fathers and educators to look to the moral resources of our nation, the greatest of which is character. What is the whole business world seeking? Men and women of sterling character. This we get only by laying the foundation for it in the child life, for it is a true saying, "As the twig is bent, so the tree is inclined." We are just beginning to realize the possibilities that lie in each child's soul. Psychology, the science of the soul, is as yet in its infancy, and we urge the mothers of our country to make a study of psychology. Let us then turn our attention to the consideration of how best to develop character. No external coercion, no argument, no entreaty can develop character; all assimilation, all effort, all growth must come from within the child.

First of all, we mothers and teachers must realize that it is only by means of an ideal of some sort that we can awaken any human soul.

By living the ideal we would have the child follow, can we accomplish the best results in his education. The imitative instinct in children is such a wonderful thing if we only understand it aright. And did we understand it aright we would guard our every act more carefully. Many parents are telling their children not to do the things they themselves are constantly doing. Of what benefit is admonition? It is worse than useless. We may coerce a child into doing what we command, but that is not growth. Punishment is often necessary, but it is not of any real worth unless it is remedial, and for it to be a remedy it must be accepted and assimilated by the child's inner self. Let parents then "live the life" we would have our children live.

We are wondering who is going to be our Mrs. Cyrus McCormick Jr. and give us $50,000 toward the expense of our child welfare exhibit. Lack of funds threatens the success of many worthy causes.

A mother was heard to remark that she did not need any diatetic rules for her baby of 18 months. "He eats everything and is quite well." Dr. Holt of the Babies' hospital of New York says he has had a large experience with those babies who "eat everything" and seem to relish it and has followed many of them to the grave as a result of such unreasonable and inconsiderate practice. It is worse than folly, it is criminal for mothers to attempt to give the child anything and everything placed on the table.

Woodstock had an unusually interesting meeting last week. Dr. Koehler gave a splendid talk on "Foods and Nutrition." The question box operated by Mrs. Martin proved interesting and instructive. This circle decided to subscribe for the Dechmann lectures and meet once or twice a month in a study circle. They also voted to go as a body to the Oronoquas Mothers' day.

At the Vernon school Mrs. Manning was the principal speaker and gave a rousing "urge" for the cooperation between mothers and teachers.

The mass meeting at the Ladd school Saturday night was a large one and reflects the spirit of the times, a demand for a larger use of the public schools.

We would further urge the circles to send a careful report of their meetings to this department as it is of great help to the new circles to know what the others and what courses of study and program they have.

In the Child-Welfare magazine for May there is a study outline on "Moral Education" for the use in parents' associations. We advise every circle to get this number if they are not regular subscribers of the magazine, which they ought to be.

of wealth to continue, and regulate them; third, to own them. In so serious a matter no one would want to conclude without any reservation, but as I have suggested, the more I consider such matters the more I conclude that we have got to assume the burden of regulation."

Chamberlain Agrees With Harlan.
Senator George E. Chamberlain, of Oregon, said: "While the decision will, I believe, to some extent restrict the Standard Oil company, can't say that I am pleased with it, because it seems to differentiate between good and bad trusts, and my opinion is that all trusts should be considered in the same category. I agree with the opinion of Justice Harlan, dissenting from that of the majority of the court."

It is the law of the land. said Senator Weldon B. Heyburn, of Idaho. "As a lawyer I make it a point not to criticize or discuss opinions and decisions of the supreme court, except when there is a particular case in point."

Hawley Sticks on "Unreasonable."
Congressman Willis C. Hawley, of Oregon, said: "To me the decision is satisfactory, save in the particular that it presumes to read into the Sherman anti-trust law the work 'unreasonable.' We had a long fight in congress about the matter, and I don't think the court should have enacted legislation which the congress refused to pass. If leaving that undone would have forced the court to declare the whole law unconstitutional, then I think they should have declared it unconstitutional, and left it to the legislative branch of the government to effect a remedy."

Measured by the supreme court's interpretation. said Congressman Burton L. French, of Idaho, "it seems to me that an endless task is imposed upon our department of justice to prove in each particular case that an organization alleged to be operating in violation of the Sherman anti-trust law is not only operating in restraint of trade, but that such restraint is unreasonable. The congress did not intend to divide combinations in restraint of trade into the two classes, reasonable and unreasonable, but did intend to go further and prevent all combinations in restraint of trade."

"Probably an amendment to the Sherman anti-trust law should be passed immediately to make it plain that the Sherman law does not mean what a majority of the court has felt that it does mean. But the court intimates that with that idea as a part of the law the law would be unconstitutional. If so, we should amend the constitution so as to place with congress the power to legislate with respect to business concerns operating in restraint of trade."

The Largest Single Order ever given for automobile Tires and Rims has just been placed with the United States Tire Company by the Studebaker Corporation—Manufacturers of the popular E-M-F "30" and Flanders "20" Cars

The order calls for practically 135,000 tires and an equal number of Continental Demountable Rims—Gilbert type (Standard Universal Rim No. 3.) This single order FOR TIRES ONLY will amount to over FOUR MILLION DOLLARS.

Never before has an automobile concern making cars in immense quantities contracted for a strictly high-grade tire for its entire output of cars. The transaction is distinctly to the credit of both the Studebaker Corporation and the United States Tire Company—

To the former, because of its unwillingness to supply any but tires of proven quality on its cars, regardless of additional cost involved;
To the United States Tire Company because the selection of its tires in preference to all others was made after three years' experience with one of its four brands—Morgan & Wright.

It is of interest to note that three years ago the then E-M-F Company decided that the magneto was an essential part of every automobile and ought, therefore, to be included in the price of the car. This policy undoubtedly cost the company thousands of dollars in possible profits, but has resulted in having magnetos furnished without extra cost on practically all American cars. By its present decision to use only Continental Demountable Rims as standard equipment, it is adopting another policy that is well nigh revolutionary in the automobile business, as heretofore rims of this character, have been confined to the highest priced cars.

Three years ago the E-M-F Co. selected Morgan & Wright tires as standard equipment WITHOUT OPTION ON OTHER BRANDS. These tires were selected, not because they could be had at a less price (which was not the case), but because the E-M-F Co. had demonstrated to their entire satisfaction that these tires were the most desirable tires to put on their cars. The placing of the immense order referred to above is a flattering testimonial to the manner in which these tires have stood up on the E-M-F. cars during these three years.

The Studebaker Corporation has selected United States Tires and Continental Rims because of their expressed belief that this equipment on their entire product gives both the dealer and the man who buys the car the BEST equipment the American Tire market affords.

United States Tires are sold under four brand names: Continental, G. & J., Hartford and Morgan & Wright, and are manufactured in five of the largest and best equipped tire plants in the world. Under the present system of manufacturing, there is a UNIFORM SUPERIORITY in all these brands—a fact of immense importance to the motorist. In other words, United States Tires HAVE THE STRENGTH OF FOUR, yet they sell at precisely the same price asked for other kinds. They are undeniably
