Among the members of the Thirteenth New York volunteers remaining and and spent considerable time in traveling who attended the banquet and reunion, about the country. The reunion lasted was Job E. Hedges, the well known New York politician. He made the principal address of the occasion, and since Mr Jordan's return to this city he has re ceived a handsomely bound book from Mr. Hedges' pen, entitled, "Common Sense in Politics."

Mr. Jordan is a pioneer of Portland having been the first chief of both the volunteer and the paid fire departments. He was chosen chief of the paid department in 1883. In 1884 he was elected sheriff of Multnomah county, and was reelected in 1885. He visited friends and relatives in New York and Michigan, but says that there are few of his friends remaining.

"In New York city," said Mr. Jordan, "you can see Oregon apples advertised quite extensively. The sign, 'Oregon Apples,' always attracts attention, and they have advertised the country won-

Vacation of Adams and Oregon Streets Again Before Courts.

Another attempt was made at noon today in the circuit court to force the city auditor to place the referendum petition over the vacation of Oregon and Adams streets on the ballot for June 5. This is the second time the matter has been before the circuit court, and the supreme court is expected to pass upon it Tuesday.

M. O. Collins started the action today through his attorneys, Jeffrey & Lenon, and secured a temporary mandamus order directing the auditor to place the question before the people. Arguments will be made this afternoon. The chief question involved is over the right of the city to vacate portions of Oregon and Adams streets so the O. R. & N. company can erect the new bridge. The circuit court last year held that the referendum did not apply to this kind of a question, and the petitioners took the question to the supreme court, which will pass upon it tomorrow. The city council passed an ordinance March 9, 1910, vacating parts of the two streets. M. O. Collins and a large number of voters circulated a petition to have the measure referred to the voters at the city election. When the question came before Judge Cleiand, who was then presiding in the circuit court, Assistant City Attorney Tomlinson contended the act of the council in vacating the two streets was judicial and
