

SENSE OF REALITY IN SHAKESPEAREAN DRAMA AT HELIG

Julia Marlowe and E. H. Sothorn Charm Great Audience With Their Delineation of Characters in "Macbeth."

The unique and welcome spectacle of a Macbeth that was a human play, given by men and women and not by "dramatists," and of an audience gathered to witness it, that completely filled the theatre, were to be seen at the Helig last night. A really enthusiastic and a very large audience at a Shakespearean production is almost as rare a thing as to have Shakespeare played so that one leaves the theatre with the feeling that he has seen the actual workings of the souls of fellow beings and not merely listened to some very musical and sonorous language, the general purport of which he didn't catch.

To most of those who saw Sothorn and Marlowe in the greatest of English tragedies last night this feeling of keen participation in the action was uppermost. True, it took some little time to get into the spirit of the thing. The first act wasn't convincing insofar as it was intended to carry the spectators into the action of the play. But it is a difficult act at the best, with its eight scenes, its constant shifting and its attempt to familiarize the beholder with the intricacies of intrigue in the barbaric Scottish court of the eleventh century. But in the second, with Miss Marlowe at her best as Lady Macbeth, her exceedingly rich and lovely voice charming the ear, and with the admirably acted induction and the doubts of the vacillating Macbeth, the sense of reality became most powerful.

As the play proceeded this impression of verisimilitude grew. Sothorn lost his insel crown, Marlowe became less the queen and more the woman.

That which is almost unknown in Shakespeare as we've been accustomed to seeing it—a humanity that makes one forget the "classic" feature—reached its climax when Lady Macbeth, the murder of Duncan over, her ambition gratified, threw herself in despair, at the feet of her husband and together they gave themselves up to bitter consideration of their deed, ending, as the curtain was drawn, in a passion of weeping by the queen and a convulsive sob from Macbeth.

Perhaps the most spectacular feature of a performance that is notable for its spectacles was the make-up of Mr. Sothorn. It is a part of his art that he has always prided himself upon and the unhappy thane, portrayed as one half-frenzied, every particle of blood gone from his face, the black and unkept beard contrasting startlingly against the pallor of his cheeks, his eyes rolled back to a terrifying degree so that through one entire act nothing but the whites were visible, was being not easily blotted from the memory.

Fine Stage Effects.
In a very large and capable company Sydney Mather as Banquo, Wendell Morse, and the witches as given by Albert Howson, Malcolm Findley and Miss Chipendale are especially worthy of mention. The witches were particularly well played. Scenically, as everyone expected the production was a striking one. The stage effects were wonderfully done and the scenery, settings and costumes set a record for Shakespearean staging. The incidental music, composed by Arthur Sullivan, was intelligently and effectively given and for the most part added to the performance, though it is a question if some of it might not have been eliminated with good result.

The performance began at 8 and was not concluded until 11:30, but at that much of the original was left out. The performance was never, for a moment, tiresome, in spite of its length—a tribute to the excellence of the company and the production.

TOBACCO RULING OPENS

so serve so clearly to demonstrate that the combination here assailed is within the provisions of the law as to leave no doubt that it is our plain duty to apply its prohibition.

Construed as Estimation.
Lawyers construe this as an intimation of the government's duty to proceed criminally.

Under the decision of the supreme court in the tobacco case, it is believed that the British trust will be forced to discontinue its export business to America.

That the ruling of the higher court will mean more litigation and that it probably will be a year before the trust is finally dissolved, is the general belief here. The matter has been left to the United States circuit court for the southern district of New York to handle and it is this court that must decide the plans for the dissolution. It is generally believed that the defendants by frequent appeals to the supreme court will seek delay.

Karlson Dissents.
Strongly resenting the writing into the Sherman anti-trust law of the "rule of reason," and its application to the decision in the American Tobacco trust case by the United States supreme court, Associate Justice Karlson dissented as vigorously as he had done in the Standard Oil decision.

Intimating that the decision of the supreme court nullified the purpose and intent of the Sherman anti-trust act through this "rule of reason," he excoriated the admitted illegal combination but without applying a remedy or punishment for the violation of the law. Justice Harlan said:

"I have found nothing in the record which makes me at all anxious to perpetuate any new combination between these companies, which the court announces has at all times exhibited a conscious wrongdoing."

Statement Surprises Justices.
Harlan declared that the opinion of the court that the decision in this case, as in the Standard Oil, "is in accordance with our previous decisions in the Trans-Missouri and Joint Traffic cases, if we resort to reason," surprises him quite as much as would the statement that black is white or white is black.

Justice Harlan resents the statement of the court that the decisions in the Standard Oil and American Tobacco cases "were in accordance with previous decisions."

sume that the act was for the "first time in the Standard Oil case interpreted in the light of reason."

Reversion Not Justified.
"The rule of reason," goes on the vigorous old justice, "I am certain, does not justify reversion of the plain words of an act of congress in order to defeat the will of congress."

The dissenting opinion further declares that the supreme court has, in effect, still further nullified the Sherman law by adding to the "rule of reason" written into it in the Standard Oil case the word "undue" or "undue restraint" in the case of the American Tobacco trust.

"The court, in effect," he said, "inserts in the act the word 'undue' and makes congress say what it did not say, and what, since the passage of the act, it has explicitly refused to say."

SPEED CONTEST IS "ANYBODY'S BACE;" LEADERS CHANGE

advantage to him. Burman, Grant and Bruce-Brown were also heavily backed.

Before the race started Burman was crowned "Speed King," with all the ceremony of a real coronation. On his head was placed a gold crown, studded with rubies and sapphires. The bauls was worth $10,000 and was presented by a tire company.

In Four Rows.
When the race was finally cleared the cars that had passed the elimination contest by negotiating the course at a rate of 75 miles an hour or better were brought out for the start. They were lined up in four rows of ten cars each.

At a pistol shot the cars darted forward for the preliminary swing around the course at a 40 mile gait.

Bragg, Velle, Hall; Cole, Endicott; Amplex, Greiner; Benz, Burman; Benz, Knipper.

Racers on Way.
The racers flashed away at 10:04. A feature of the betting today was based on the hazards the drivers faced. A pool was formed on the number of drivers likely to perish.

The time for the first 20 miles was 15 minutes and six seconds. Wishart, in a Mercedes, was leading. At 100 in front of the grandstand, driving a Fiat, led. Wishart had dropped back to fifth place. The leaders stood as follows:

Bruce-Brown, Mulford, Aitken, Knight, Wishart, Turner, Grant, Cobe, Dawson, Harroun, Burman and Knipper in the order named. The time for the 100 miles was 1:22:16.

Edmunds relieved Endicott in the Cole car.

Grant's Alce was withdrawn in the fifty-first lap, owing to trouble with the bearings.

Bruce-Brown in Lead.
At 150 miles Bruce-Brown still led. Harroun, Mulford, De Palma, Benz, Burman, Wishart, Aitken, Turner and Cobe followed in that order. The time for the 150 miles was 1:59:12.

Hundreds narrowly escaped death when Lytle, Knight and Jagersberger collided in front of the grandstand. The steering gear of Lytle's Apperson broke and the car, going at full speed, zig-zagged wildly about the track. The cars of the other racers were rushing toward him. The crowds in the grandstand screamed in terror. Lytle's engine stopped dead and he was left helpless in the path of the other racers.

Knight in a Westcott struck Lytle's disabled car and Jagersberger in a Case crashed into the two cars a second later. The three racers were tossed about, then rolled over into the crowd. The drivers were not thrown from the cars. Knight's mechanic, Glover, was the only one hurt. His back was painfully wrenched.

Wishart, De Palma, Turner, Frayer, Belcher and Wilcox. The time was 4:08:24, a new record.

QUARTER MILLION TO "PREVENT ACCIDENTS" SPENT BY PROMOTERS

(United Press Leased Wire.) Indianapolis, Ind., May 30.—More than $250,000 was spent by the promoters of the Indianapolis motor speedway this year to "prevent accidents," during the races which began today.

The entire speedway track has been repaved with brick. Over the brick a veneer of cement was placed, and this, in turn was highly polished, making what is probably the smoothest motor track in the world.

The cost of this repaving and polishing alone amounted to $250,000, but aside from this, several thousand dollars were spent in other work to make the Indianapolis motor speedway the "safest and fastest track in the world."

To prevent some of the accidents due, at the opening races, to the use of the oval track, the inner speedway was closed and the races confined to the outer or elliptical course of 2 1/2 miles. Immense grandstands, accommodating 37,000 people, in seats, and standing room for 150,000 more, were provided.

Today's races have shown that a quarter of a million dollars spent in making the speedway "safe" failed to prevent the tragedies of motor car racing.

At the opening races on the speedway in 1909 seven persons were killed.

SALEM WILL HAVE A $36,000 ARMORY

City Puts Up $9000, County $9000 and the State $18,000.

(Salem Bureau of The Journal.) Salem, Or., May 30.—Thirty-six thousand dollars became available for construction of an armory in Salem when the Salem council last night instructed the recorder to draw warrants for $9000, the city's share of the total amount. Marion county paid its $9000 a month ago. These two sums are matched by the state appropriation of $18,000. Construction of the armory will be started immediately at the corner of Liberty and Ferry streets. It will be a pressed brick structure, containing a large drill floor, a gymnasium and baths and officers' rooms. The dimensions of the building will be 100 by 146 feet.

J. M. Garrison of Forest Grove has been appointed by Secretary of State Olcott to succeed C. E. Rockwell as supervisor of grounds and buildings at the statehouse. Garrison has lived in Forest Grove for the past 30 years, and during most of that time has been connected with the Pacific university faculty as instructor in penmanship. He will assume his new duties at the statehouse tomorrow.

MAYOR, DEFEATED, REFUSES TO QUIT

(United Press Leased Wire.) Oklahoma City, Okla., May 30.—Citizens of Oklahoma City today sent a committee to "reason with" Mayor Dan V. Lackey, who has refused to relinquish his office since the election of a new mayor and commissioners. Lackey was elected mayor under the councilmanic form of government, and says he will not resign until ordered to do so by the court. When Lackey attempted to justify his position before 5000 citizens he was booed and jeered.
