A firmer tone is showing in the wool market and prices show a further advance of from 1 to 2c a pound. The sels at Shaniko late yesterday afternoon was at the highest prices of the season. was at the highest prices of the season, although the purchases were made on a new basis, which would cut down the value somewhat. Instead of paying for their wools at Shaniko weight, the buyers decided that they would pay only 90 per cent on the Shaniko weight and an additional 10 per cent if the weights were correct when the purchases reach the mills. This is equivalent to a reduction of fully 5 per cent as there is considerable shrinkage in the wools by the time they reach their eastern destithe time they reach their eastern desti-

While prices bid and paid at Shaniko .

While prices bid and paid at Shaniko yesterday ranged from 10% to 16c a pound, local interests here are not offering over 9c to 15c a pound. This is practically the same price as the Shaniko sales when the shrinkage is taken into consideration.

N. Valley wools are beginning to arrive in small lots in the local market and the shearing season is well advanced. Buyers are bidding from 14 to 15c a pound for the Willamette valley, quality making the difference in price.
