

CITY LOSING THOUSANDS OF DOLLARS IN STREET WORK; GENERAL TAXATION OFFERED; REMONSTRANCE METHOD

Separate Contract Plan Would Correct Evil, Says Councilman Burgard.

Believing the city is losing thousands of dollars through the policy of letting all the work connected with street improvement in one contract, Councilman John H. Burgard is investigating the feasibility of doing such work in two separate contracts, one for excavation and grading, the other for hard surfacing.

"I have spoken to some of my colleagues about this matter," says Mr. Burgard, "and they have agreed with me that the method should be changed. I intend to look into the matter carefully, but I do not believe that a charter amendment is the answer. All that is necessary, as I understand it, is to instruct the engineer to draw plans and specifications for the work in two contracts.

Entire City Should Share in Cost, Asserts Allan Joy.

Allan R. Joy, councilman elect from the Seventh ward, will be an advocate of paying the cost of all street improvements by general taxation. In his speech at Sellwood just before the election and in other public utterances he has gone on record as to his views of street improvement.

Mr. Joy suggests the somewhat revolutionary idea that the entire system of paying for streets followed at this time is wrong. He does not believe in the creation of special assessment districts, or assessing the cost to the abutting property.

Ellis Amendment Makes Defeat of Projects Easier Than Before.

Sixty per cent of the property owners involved in a street improvement will be able to defeat any improvement hereafter under the Ellis amendment to the city charter, adopted by the people last Monday. This takes the place of the 53 per cent remonstrance, which had aroused great opposition.

Another important feature in the clause in the new amendment which makes remonstrance possible after bids have been received. The Ellis amendment requires bids to be received on at least two classes of paving, one of which must be non-paved, and the property owner will know what class of material will cost at the time for remonstrance.

used in many of the outlying districts where the cost of hard surface places an excessive burden on the property.

VISITING KNIGHTS OF QUILL CLUB'S GUESTS

Friday night the Portland Press club will slash the doors back against the wall and drive a hand spike in the floor to hold them there so that the long horns from the rural retreats may find a haven of rest and delight where they may browse among the literary fields and listen to the pot pourri to be dished up by the various chefs of each theatre in the city, besides others.

Foley Kidney Pills

Mr. Harry E. Ramey, 200 N. 13th st., Springfield, Ill., writes: "My work requires a great deal of stooping and bending. Some time ago I noticed a sharp pain over my kidneys which grew worse and I found I could not walk without being all tired out. My kidney action was too frequent and painful and I could hardly sleep. I was troubled with dizziness and specks before my eyes. I got a bottle of Foley Kidney Pills and took them as directed and the first few days showed they were doing good work. I kept on taking them and am now no longer troubled as I was. I am as strong and well as I ever was, and all this is due to Foley Kidney Pills, which I recommend to people with kidney trouble." ## QUITS EDITORIAL DESK TO RUN OWN BUSINESS

After nearly a quarter of a century of newspaper work in Portland, E. W. Wright, one of the best known writers on the Pacific coast, has retired from the Oregonian and tonight will leave for San Francisco for a brief outing before engaging in his new work, that of real estate and investments. Aside from the immense volume of newspaper material which Mr. Wright has written, he compiled a history of Pacific coast shipping, which was published in 1895, and is considered authority on the subject.

NO GENERAL OPENING FOR KLAMATH RESERVE

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.) Klamath Falls, Or., June 8.—The Klamath reservation will not be handled like those of other reservations in recent years. Lands of dead Indians are now offered for sale. Parties wishing to purchase must file a bid with the local Indian agent, who will transmit the bid to the department of Indian affairs. If the amount offered is recommended as adequate, the sale will be confirmed by the department. Other lands on the reservation cannot be purchased, unless the Indian holding the allotment can show that he is fully capable of self government. If this is established, he may, with the approval of the Indian department, dispose of his land.

DEPARTMENT STORES BEGIN LATER OPENING

(United Press Leased Wire.) Seattle, Wash., June 8.—This morning department stores in Seattle, Tacoma, Spokane and throughout the state opened at 9 o'clock instead of 8:30. It was the start of the eight hour day, in compliance with the new law for women workers passed at the last session of the legislature. This law affects women in all kinds of work. Five thousand will be benefited in Seattle. Miss Blanche Mason, assistant state labor commissioner, said today that she believed there would be no friction in the enforcement of the law, and that it would mean no material reduction in wages.
