The big tears rolled down the cheeks of the North Dakota rancher when he was sure the little girl was his, and his to take home. The girl is just as enthusiastic over her new home as the parent. Her mother is dead, but there is another to give the daughter that motherly attention which she has not known for many years. History of Girl.

The story of little Lillian Apley is one of those rare bits that is often heard of. It is the story of a child taken at the age of one year, placed in strange hands, later carried away from the notice of the father, grown nearly into young womanhood, left to drift in the world, and finally picked up by the Salvation Army.

Aply formerly lived in Wisconsin His first wife died soon after the birth of Lillian. By mutual consent, the habe of less than one year was placed the care of a family by the name of Owens, who lived nearby. The usual attachment developed between the little child and its foster parents, and the father was not allowed to see it. One day he broke down the door and sought to take his child by force. He was arrested, and ordered not to molest the foster parents, who quietly moved away oon after this affair, and never informed the father. He began the search, which was prosecuted through the entire west. Several times he has given up, but upon hearing of new clues would resume the investigation. Traced to Portland.

The foster parents moved to Washington, and located near Walla Walla. A few years ago they left the child in the custody of another family. This family later became tired of the girl, and left her in some way to shift for terself on the streets of Walla Walla. She was picked up by the Salvation Army, and given a home. Last September she was sent to Miss E. Liene-man, matron of the Salvation Army Rescue home, 392 East Fifteenth street,

INSURANCE SHOWS Three Sisters Meet First Time in 57 Years BIG GAINS FOR YEAR

Annual Report of Insurance Department Gives Interesting Statistics.

(Salem Bureau of The Journal.) Salem, Or. Sune 17 .- Taking insurance statistics as a casts of estimating the commercial growth of Oregon," said Insurance Commissioner S. A. Kozer today, "it may be seen that the develop-For 13 years E. F. Apley, Napoleon, ment during the year 1910 was 100 per D., has searched for his daughter, cent greater than that of 1909 over 1908. The largest increases are noticeable in the amounts paid for fire and life insurance, though the largest percentage of increase appears to be in the item of automobile fire insurance. premiums increased from $190,000 in 1909 to $286,000 in 1910 and the premiums paid for fidelity and surety bonds increased from $133,907 to $206,-625. Mutual fire insurance companies ncreased their premiums from $324,-802 to $395,112 for the year 1910." The third annual report of the insurance department of the state, covering the business transacted during the year ending December 31, 1910, will be ready for distribution in a few days. Lists of all the companies authorized to transact business in the state may be had by application to the department.

Business Shows Gains.

From an examination of the report t will be noted that 32 companies were Deensed to transact at least one of the various classes of insurance business in the state during the year and that nine withdrew or their licenses were revoked The total premiums received by companies transacting business in the state aggregate $7,627,104 as against $6,520,362 for the year 1989. The premiums returned in 1910 amount to $1, 076,937, while corresponding sums re turned in 1909 amounted to $963,404 Amounts paid policy holders in Oregon by all classes of companies, exclusive of fraternal benefit societies, amounted to $2,222,894, while in 1909 the com-panies paid $2,023,354. It will thus be observed that while the gross amount which the people of this state have paid in premiums shows an increase over the year 1909 of more than $1,107,000, there has been an increase in the amoun which the companies have paid in losses and claims of $1,200,540. Praternal Societies Not Listed.

The amounts paid by fraternal societies are not included in the foregoing figures, those societies having required only by recent act render financial statements to the insurance department of the state. However, as more than $1,000,000 are paid by members of fraternal societies, the gross amount paid for insurance in this including that placed through authorized companies, aggregates well on to $9,000,000 paid by the citizens of Oregon for the protection of their dependents and business and the preservation of their credit.

The average rate per $100 of insurance charged by stock fire insurance com-panies during the year 1910 was $1.57, while for the year 1909 the average was $1.70 and the year 1908, $2,14. For a period of 10 years prior thereto the rate ranged from $2 to $2.55 per $100 of insurance. The loss ratio to the com parries upon a gross basis was about 34 per cent, while for the year 1909 if wa $1.3 per cent, and for the year 1908, 37.4 per cent, and for a period of 10 girl appeared very willing to go from 25.6 per cent to 58.5 per cent. The with the father to his home, the rescue net loss ratio to the companies for the year 1910 was .42 % per cent. A review of the tables contained in the report will show that notwithstanding the Judge Gatens said it was one of the average loss ratio is increasing from year to year, the average rate per $100 charges of extortion and graft made by discharged during the day by Roadmasof insurance is gradually being reduced and that it would appear that the state

The fight started after the foreigners had been ordered from the saloon by the hartender. The order met resistance by the Italians and in response to the bartender's calls for help, Moran, his son and Tom Mylin rushed in and with their fists were soon doing great execution among the belligerents. One of the Italians bore down upon the 18-year-old son of the section foreman and was felled with a club. Moran had retreated outside the saloon when one of the burliest of the foreigners drew a knife and plunged it to the hilt in his breast, the blade piercing the reast bone and penetrating the liver. As the victim fell, the assailant dashed around the corner of the Bowman hotel. threw away his knife and made off down the street, followed by a number of pursuers.

Foremost among these , was Mylin, who overtook the fleeing man and threw him, holding him until the officers arrived. With a number of his countrymen he was taken to the jail, where he was identified as the man who did the stabbing. In quelling the fighting Italians the officers wielded pick handles and a number of heads were broken.

After he had seen his father struck down, young Moran went in search of a gun, and failing to secure one, attempted to organize a mob to raid the Armory and take the guardsmen's rifles. Several joined him but cooler heads succeeded in restraining them. Feeling against the laborers was high how-over, and several were assaulted later on the streets so that the officers had to place them in jail for protection. "My acquaintance with Frank Lawence began last fall when he came to the camp of Tom Watson and myself on Fiddler's Gulch. He seemed like pleasant old gentleman and I gave him a letter of recommendation to Dick Bowell, a young friend of mine living near Kerby, which Lawrence presented in person, Sowell thereupon gave him $6.50 as a grubstake for a prospecting trip, and Lawrence returned to our camp after purchasing a few supplies at a store here. He located a quarts claim in his own name and that of Sowell on Car-penter Guich, a short distance away, and soon after put location notices on two other claims near Fiddler's Guich, using his own name in one, and the names of myself, Watson and himself for the Appeal of Webb, Condemned Murderer, May Be Lost by Delay in Filing Transcript of Trial in District Court.

Jesse P. Webb, slayer of W. A. Johnon in a room in the New Grand Central hotel, where Johnson was beaten with a blackjack and his body stuffed into a trunk, will be sent to the gallows within a few weeks if a motion prepared by District Attorney Cameron to dismiss the appeal is granted by the state supreme court, Cameron holds that Webb's attorneys have fatally erred in falling to file the transcript on appeal within the time granted by Circuit Judge Morrow. This is a jurisdictional defect, he urges, so the supreme court has no jurisdiction to consider the appeal.

Other Cases Similar. The district attorney's office won simflar motions dismissing the appeal in the cases of R. P. Dickerson, convicted on manslaughter and given three years, Williams, an officer of the Leather Workers' union who was sentenced to five years for embezzlement, and Doug-las, convicted of embezzlement from the Thiel Detective agency.

"I have been less eager to take advantage of such errors in a case where a man is under sentence of death," said the district attorney today, "and yet I cannot see that a man convicted of such a brutal crime is entitled to special consideration.

Delays Are Unavoidable.

"In this office we meet with continual delays in criminal cases, and the work piles up. The purpose of the statute in laying down the method of appeal is to require reasonable diligence in disposing of cases. They ought to be kept moving, and papers filed within the required time, unless extensions are granted for good reasons.
