

MADERO MAY BE FACED BY CRISIS OF BIG MOMENT

Enemies Excite Illiterate Peons by Purported Promises of Free Land Which Cannot Be Given.

(United Press Special Wire.) Mexico City, June 17.—The most subtle plot of the anti-Madero faction in Mexico, discovered tonight, will probably prove the most dangerous to the young leader who will be contending with when he becomes president, as he undoubtedly will in the national elections the first week in October.

Enemies of Madero have scattered broadcast throughout the republic the announcement that as soon as he becomes president, Madero will seize the vast estates of the feudal land owners and divide the land among the peons. Eighty-five per cent of the Mexicans neither read nor write and the announcement, scattered by men supposed to be friendly with Madero, has been received with wild acclaim.

When Madero becomes president and the 16,000,000 peons of Mexico discover that he cannot divide his great estates, free among the peons, Madero's friends fear there will follow an uprising which will unseat Madero. The land question figured prominently in the fall of Diaz.

The Maderistas have begun a campaign of education in the hope of showing the peons that Madero cannot divide the estates free among them. The present de facto government, under De la Barra, is showing great good will toward Madero in regard to land matters and is investigating all the land holdings in the country. Many land owners have equated on great tracts of land and rented them out. This land will be seized by the government and sold to the peons, but this will be the closest Madero will be toward giving free land to the peon.

SOLDIERS TAKE $10 APIECE AND AGREE TO LAY DOWN ARMS

(United Press Special Wire.) Mexicali, Cal., June 17.—Ten dollars cash paid to each member of the liberal garrison at Mexicali this afternoon put an end to the revolution in Lower California as far as the rebels now in the field are concerned. The money in United States coin was handed to the seventy odd soldiers composing the garrison by emissaries of Francisco I. Madero in return for a written agreement that they would not again take arms against Mexico. The men surrendered all but their side arms, crossed the line in a body to Calexico, Cal. Officers of the U. S. army directed them to move on as quietly as possible.

Within two hours after the men had been paid off, Mexicali began to assume the condition prevailing before the war. The Maderistas at once began the work of re-establishing the city government. A jefe politico and jefe municipal were appointed and the work of organizing the police force will be taken up shortly.

The ex-rebels were not molested by the U. S. troops as long as they kept moving. Hundreds of the rebel soldiers who have lived in Calexico since the trouble started prepared to move back and take up their abode. The Cudahy ranch and other large interests near Mexicali will resume operations within a few days.

7 MILES OF WOMEN TRIP

(Continued From Page One.) Sachse, and Miss May Winter, of Indianapolis, acted as marshals of the division. In the ranks were representative actresses, authors, doctors, lawyers and musicians.

The division of women who have served jail sentences for the "cause" was headed by a woman's band of Scotch bagpipers. Their picturesque plain uniforms and fine playing attracted attention all along the line of march.

MURDERER IS STILL FREE

(Continued From Page One.) A small county carried with him, wrapped in a newspaper, the two bloody towels found on the floor of Mr. and Mrs. Hill's bedroom and the little piece of white muslin, blood stained, that Sheriff Stevens picked up before the Delk house the morning after the murders. The dogs were given to Sam and Sam Bradford, their owner, tinkled the

Blood Hounds Perform Marvelous Feats

S. B. Bradford, owner, and his trained canines who are being used in hunt for slayer of Hill family.

"Sam" and "Brady," the bloodhounds of S. B. Bradford of Seattle who had them on the Hill murder case, are regular pals. They have always worked together, and have man-hunting reduced to a science. There appears to be a mutual understanding between the two dogs when they are on the trail, for they divide the work, and each is a specialist in his line.

When following a trail in the brush, "Brady" smells the ground and "Sam" scents the bushes and shrubbery. In the open, "Brady" takes the ground, and "Sam" keeps his head in the air, does the barking and watches everything above the ground. "Brady" is the leader at all times, and when a dispute arises between the two dogs over a questionable point on the trail, his judgment in the matter appears to prevail. The dogs have worked in this team-fashion for several years, and do better work together than alone. A small bell is used by their owner in putting them on a trail.

To take a trail, an object that has been handled or worn by the man sought is given the dogs. While they are examining it, the owner tingles the bell, and the dogs know the scent from the object is what they are to take up. If the trail be a track, the dogs are taken to the spot where the man has walked, their noses held to the ground, starting bell for them to pick up and follow the scent.

They nosed around under the windows of the Hill house for a minute or two, made off around the chicken coop and then directly across the lot for the Mathews house, which is nearest the Hill home on the south. They lost whatever scent they had near this house.

The hounds were taken back and started over again with the bloody towels and cloth. This time they turned south, following the trail through the grass on the side of the road for perhaps a quarter of a mile to a point where a rail gate forms a break in the barbed wire fence that marks the road from the thick woods on the opposite side from the Hill cabin. There is a trail running through the woods, but paralleling the road, perhaps ten yards back from the open road. This trail runs a quarter of a mile further into a field adjoining the Delk house and comes out into the main road again through a gate next the fence about the Delk house.

When the dogs had been watered and rested after their hot chase down the trail from the Hill home they were taken into the woods back of the Delk house, in the hope they might dig up some of the tramp "junk" that have been found in these woods. It was while on this quest that the strange man seen by the farmer dodged from bush to bush and was lost to sight again in the woods.

Descriptions Lacking. Descriptions of the man who has been terrorizing the Ardenwald people are strangely lacking. Probably half a dozen different people have caught a glimpse of the man as he crossed a road or followed their cattle up from pasture in the early morning. Everyone who saw him had his features so impressed upon their visions that they are positive they would know him again among a hundred, but they are unable to give careful descriptions of him. He seems to be a middle aged man, powerfully built, with a stubby growth of beard about his face. "Gus Obrist, whom he attacked, says he exclaimed, "That's enough!" as he jumped upon his back. The morning before Obrist says he heard him call out, "Shut up!" as if to some companion out of sight down the pasture. "Obrist, like the man who says he saw him yesterday afternoon, is certain he could identify him.

May Be Maniac. The belief is gaining ground with the sheriff's men that this man is the homicidal maniac who escaped from the Crystal Springs Sanitarium a month ago, not far from Ardenwald, and has never been recaptured. As to whether he is the one who murdered the Hills, they are unwilling to express an opinion.

The night and day hunt that has been made for the Hill murderer has developed one peculiar thing—the number of insane men, insane beyond any and converted them from foes to be feared into friends and loyal subjects of the empire.

Standing in front of the Hotel Cecil is Andrew Fisher, once a pit boy, now the premier of Australia.

Reside him is Sir Wilfrid Laurier, premier of the Dominion of Canada, French by descent, English through religious regard for the old country, and Canadian always.

These are only a few of the thousands of notable figures that are in the streets, the foyers of great hotels and in the places set aside by the king for royal and other important visitors.

American Visitors Numerous.

There is an army of Americans in the city, too, and they add to the gaiety of the momentous occasion by injecting a spice of the merry and bustle of life in the United States into ordinarily placid English surroundings. Everywhere you hear expressions of the white lights in Broadway and the fiery chariot that blazes forth nightly near Herald Square.

Chicago, too, is represented and the strident notes of its citizens rise above the din caused by the drivers of other lands.

There are many visitors from Boston, who were to home when you sing the broad praises of the Hub. There are regiments from Philadelphia, Washington, St. Louis, Kansas City, Denver, Pacific coast cities, with squads from Cheboygan, Kalamazoo and a hundred other small cities and towns which have won fame by being placed on the map.

All these Americans seem to have money and they are spending it, too; some with the abandon of a sailor on shore leave, others with the discriminating tact that insures respect and good service from the English.

GOVERNOR NAMES A REPRESENTATIVE TO MEET BOSTON

B. F. Irvine of Journal Editorial Staff Selected to Greet Cruiser and Party—Boat to Arrive at 2 P. M.

Unable to go in person to Rainier this morning to meet and receive the cruiser Boston, Governor West has appointed B. F. Irvine, of The Journal editorial staff, as his personal representative, while his secretary, R. A. Watson, will also accompany the party which will be composed of Adjutant General Finser, Mayor Simon, members of the city council and other officials.

The Boston left up the river from Astoria at 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon with Pilot Harry Emsken in charge, and anchored at Rainier to await the arrival of those who are to meet and accompany her to Portland as guests of Lieutenant Commander Speler. She is expected to arrive here at about 2 o'clock in the afternoon, when she will be greeted by the whistles of the vessels in port. It is probable that a number of launches will travel some distance down the river to meet the historic cruiser.

The Boston, which has been turned over to the Oregon Naval Militia for drilling and cruising purposes, will remain in the harbor here except when taking the militia out on practice cruises. Several sailors of the United States army have been detailed to look after her while she is in port. It is expected that the first annual summer cruise of the militia will take place within the next week or so.

SUPREME COURT'S RULING KNOCKS OUT MANY STORES

(United Press Special Wire.) Chicago, June 17.—Seven new stores of the United Cigar Stores company, which were to have been opened in Chicago, have been ordered closed, and it is probable that they will never be opened. A similar condition is said to prevail in all parts of the country. Leases have been signed on the Chicago stores and the trust will be compelled to pay rental, but will go no further toward opening the stores. The determination not to open these new places follows the supreme court decision in the tobacco case.

VOLCANO COLIMA IN MEXICO IN ERUPTION

Mexico City, June 17.—The volcano Colima broke out in eruption today and the town of Colima has been shaken so that the tower of the Cathedral was hurled to the ground and shattered.

Refugees are leaving Colima by the hundreds, heading for this city. The nurses and doctors of the Red Cross are preparing to leave for Colima tonight, although full details of the damage and injury to life are lacking.
