

SEE COACHED GIRL IN HER TESTIMONY, PROSECUTOR SAYS

State's Attorney Charges That "Apostle" Went Over Entire Story With His "Priest-ess" Before Trial.

(United Press Special Wire.)
Chicago, June 22.—Charges that Evelyn Arthur See, "apostle of the absolute life," who is on trial here accused of debauching his girl disciple, Mildred Bridges, deliberately coached the girl in her testimony were made today by the state when See's hearing was resumed. The prosecution alleges that See's book, "absolute life on trial," was written while he was in jail and that Mona Rees, his other girl disciple, typewrote it and studied his contentions in preparation for examination by the court.

The state declares that See invented his defense that "wifehood and motherhood" as impersonated by the two girls was a spiritual and not a physical condition, and that their coming of his book enabled the Bridges girl to take this tack when she was examined by Judge Honore and the attorneys for the prosecution. The state probably will introduce the book in evidence to show that its line of argument is an exact parallel to the testimony wrung unwillingly from the Bridges girl.

The examination of the Bridges girl was concluded this morning. The defense tried to show that she had been better treated in See's "junior commonwealth" than she had been at home, but Mildred refused to make any charges against her father.

Asked if See taught her what she knows about sexology, the girl said that he had not and that her information on such matters came from her mother. She asserted that the personal pronouns in the "book of absolute life" did not refer to See himself, but to the spirit within him.

At this part of the hearing Assistant State's Attorney Burnham read extracts from the "book of absolute life" dealing with sexology, which were quite unprintable.

CAPTOR OF JESS HALL

he feared the prisoners working unguarded.

Hall White Man's Hops.

While in prison before the attempted escape, Jess Hall boasted of his prowess as a prize fighter and declared openly that he was the white man's only hope. As he was being brought back into the prison gates this morning, faded and with ropes around him to prevent his having to be shot if he tried to break away, fellow prisoners gathered about were heard to remark:

"It's all off now with the white race."

HUBER TELLS WHAT IT'S LIKE TO BE IN THE HANDS OF OUTLAW LIKE HALL

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)
Monmouth, Or., June 22.—How it feels to ride with an outlaw was vividly described for The Journal yesterday afternoon by Mail Carrier Fred Huber, on his return with his weary team from Wren, Or., 30 miles from here, where Jess Hall, fleeing desperado, released him and his outfit Wednesday evening. Huber is the man who took the compulsory journey under the shadow of the convict's guns from Monmouth to the Corvallis & Eastern station, Huber's team enabling Hall to get into the timbered country near Peak, Or., in western Benton county, where he made his last stand.

"Takes Ride Without Permission.

"Are you going to Monmouth?" was the first salutation Hall gave the mail carrier Wednesday evening, when the latter was on his way home and about three miles from this place.

"Yes," responded Huber, who did not know the wayfarer.

"I'll ride in with you," said Hall, and the mailman made no demurrer. Hall said little on the three miles' ride, getting out at Monmouth postoffice, securing a railroad map at the depot and hastening out of town.

When Marshal Nott, Postmaster Wolverton and Huber concluded the mail carrier's passenger was the Corvallis holdup, whose identity was already suspected to be that of Hall, and when they overtook him a mile from here, Hall wheeled, covered the marshal and said:

"You get back to town." The marshal and the postmaster "got."

"Now drive where I tell you," said the convict to Huber, clambering into his rig, "and you'll be all right. Got a gun?"

"No," said the dumfounded Huber. Three miles on, however, the team

Marshfield, Or., June 22.—Three men suspected of murdering Alex McNabb, the homesteader who was found dead in his burned cabin in Douglas county, are said to be walking from Coquille to this city and the sheriff's officers are watching for them. The men were in Coquille yesterday and one of them

CONSTABLE SAYER HELD FOR SHOOTING SOLDIER

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)
Astoria, Or., June 22.—Constable John Sayer was arraigned before County Judge Judd yesterday afternoon on a charge of assault with a dangerous weapon on Roy C. Jones, whom he shot a week ago last Saturday, while placing him under arrest. Sayer was placed under $250 bond to appear for preliminary hearing. At last accounts Jones, who was not expected to live a few days ago, was steadily improving.

CAPEN ORDERED TO FILE FINAL REPORT

County Judge Cleeton of the county court this morning directed Frank Capen, administrator of the estate of George B. Capen & Co., to file a final account of his administration. The estate has been in the course of administration for 14 years, and no final account has ever been made to the court.

Elery Capen and other heirs started the action to force the final accounting, which they claim has never been made. The Capens are brothers. The account is to be filed within 10 days.

I. STRASBURG'S HUMOR COSTS HIM $20 FINE

Ieta Strasburg, who runs a restaurant at 54 Sixth street, became much peeved at 54 Sixth street, because he believed Monday night because he believed he had been overcharged by a boy employed by the City Transfer & Delivery company. To relieve his pent-up wrath he tore the messenger call box from his wall and threw it into the street. This put fifty call boxes out of commission for half an hour.

Strasburg was arrested this morning for violating the terms of the messenger company's franchise by interfering with the service and was fined $20 by Judge Taswell.

BE JOYFUL, KIDS, IT'S YOUR TURN SATURDAY

Yes, tomorrow is the joyful day for school children, for Saturday Manager

Corday has decided to invite every school boy and school girl in Portland to be the guest of Mr. Corday at the Oaks. Children must be under 12 and accompanied by parent or guardian and then they will be admitted free.

Great preparations have been made for a big invasion of youngsters, and from lots to 12-year-olds they will be welcome as flowers in May. Romping on the lawns will be encouraged, the fine playgrounds is waiting and all in all the Oaks will be the spot for a tired mother to bring her offspring.

Now while the youngsters are enjoying themselves, mothers will be able to listen to Philip Fels and his magnificent band as well as to the Metropolitan opera quartet.
