MONEY COUNTERS HAVE BIG TASK

New York Subtreasury Has New Head So the Money Counters Are Busy.

(Publishers' Press Leased Wire.) New York, July 1.—They are busy counting down at the New York subtreasury these hot summer days. When Uncle Sam gets a new man to look after his New York branch money counter, it is necessary to get the contents of the cash drawers so that the new boss may know just what he is responsible for.

As much as he carries something like $144,000,000, some money that, in the building at Nassau and Wall streets, is quite a little job to count it. Charles S. Millington took charge of the subtreasury a few days ago and at once set 11 expert money counters at work. They are still at it and will be pretty much all of July. It takes 11 men just about five weeks to count $144,000,000, and they have to be master money counters at that in order to get through the job in that time. It is worth note by the way that Uncle Sam's New York bank roll contains something like $50,000,000 in the "reverted gold coin."

There is one crusade now under way in New York which has the hearty sympathy of every decent man and woman in the big town. If it is successful much will be forgiven Mayor Baynor and his police department. There is in the city an element of young men, whose idea of fun consists in bewitching peacable citizens, insulting defenseless women and in every possible way making nuisances of themselves among the Sunday crowds bound for the various summer resorts about the city. It had come to a point when it was better for a man who did not care for a pitched battle with these hoodlums, to keep his family at home on Sunday. As this is about the only way a great many New Yorkers have of enjoying an outing with their families, Mayor Gaynor decided something should be done, something generally is said.

Here is what happened: One hundred of the bluest and scrappiest young policemen on the force are detailed each Sunday to put on their Sunday-go-to-meeting, citizens' clothes and ride back and forth between the city and the pleasure resorts. As soon as a gang of these young rowdies "start something," the "strong arm" squad as it is called, gets busy, and they enjoy it. The police magistrates have joined in the good work and jail sentences are invariably dealt out to the hoodlums. It is now a safe to travel from Coney Island to New York at night as it is safe between Chihuahua and Torreon, and at the rate of progress now being made, before the summer is over a man may take his family for an outing with no fear of having to fight or submit to a beating.

FRESH BRANDS COVER 13 OF TODD'S HORSES

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.) The Dalles, Or., July 1.—Sheriff Freeman's capture of Albert Hill and Fred Willis, alleged horse rustlers, in the northern part of Wasco county, has greatly relieved the minds of Sherman county farmers, who have been losing animals for some time. Hill has a ranch

Boy Scouts Cover 191 Miles in 3 Days

Lieutenant General Sir Baden Powell, chief scout of the boy scouts, and two of the young men who will take part in a review of 50,000 boy scouts at Windsor on Tuesday, July 4, before the king and his staff.

(By the International News Service.) London, July 1.—A deputation of Boy Scouts, who are later to attend the King's Boy Scout review under Lieutenant General Sir Baden Powell at Windsor on July 4, has brought a message from Oldham to the Boy Scouts headquarters in London, covering the distance of 191 miles in three days and a few hours.

The message invited the chief scout, Lieutenant General Baden Powell, to visit the Oldham scouts.

At 4 o'clock on Wednesday morning four scouts set out from Oldham and covered 67 miles by 8 o'clock at night. They slept in a barn, with no covering beyond the hay and straw.

One boy had to go back owing to a sore foot, but the others, who all be-

New York, July 1.—With the arrival here last week of the new ocean giant Olympic, a new stage was entered in the never ending race of rival steamship companies for supremacy upon the ocean. For the past five years since the advent of the Lusitania and Mauretania, these two liners have had a clear title to the championship in size as well as speed, being 80 feet longer than the Adriatic, which was the next largest in this dimension, and having a gross tonnage nearly 8000 tons greater than the Kaiserin Auguste Victoria, which has been their nearest competitor in this respect. Now, however, the Olympic has set a new mark in size well in advance of all other ocean steamships now afloat. She is 882 feet in length, nearly 100 feet longer than the next largest Atlantic liner. If set up on end she would overtop the lofty Metropolitan tower by 175 feet, and would exceed all other existing land structures with the single exception of the Eiffel tower. She has a registered tonnage of 45,000 tons, or 12,500 tons greater than her largest competitor among the trans-Atlantic liners. It is 22 1/2 feet in breadth, with promenade decks so wide that when thronged with passengers, they look like a section of the "boardwalk" at Atlantic City, and its height from keel to funnel tops is 175 feet. This new marine marvel is an 11 story-ship, having that number of separate decks. She has accommodations for 2600 passengers, and carries a crew of 860, making her a veritable floating city.

Costly Competition in Steamships.

Enormous as is the Olympic and her companion ship, the Titanic, which is shortly to follow her, it is not likely that they will be allowed to hold the pre-eminence for size very long. Already the Cunard line has under construction a new ocean giant which is to be 852 feet in length, or a few inches in excess of the new White Star champions. Not to be left out of the running even for a moment, the Vuncal shipyards at Hamburg, Germany, are rushing work on a new ship which is to carry the flag of the Hamburg-American line, and is to be called the Imperator. According to report she is to be 830 feet long, and to have a gross tonnage of 50,000 tons, which will give her a comfortable margin in size over anything thus far projected, and she is to be ready for service in 1912. It is not to be expected, however, that even this enormous craft will shake the ultimate limit of marine achievement, and it is probable that within a few years more steamships a thousand feet long will be plying between New York

LONG CHERISHED SENATORIAL COURTESY GETS SEVERE JOLT

(United Press Leased Wire.) Washington, July 1.—Three months' experience has demonstrated that there are all kinds of senators in the big class of newcomers whose entrance into the "highest deliberative body in the world," on April 4, practically revolutionized that august assembly.

So many millionaire bosses were retired that the senate lost, to a large extent, right to its ancient title of being a "millionaire club." It gained only one millionaire, unless McLean of Connecticut, as well as Lippitt, Republican, is in that favored class, but it has been strengthened by the addition of new blood, young men of ambition and energy, free from the shackles of big business and in full touch with the spirit of modern conditions.

A striking feature of the invasion has been the disappearance of the last vestige of that long revered tradition that new senators should be silent during the first congress in which they serve. Progressives have badly shaken the practice in the last few years, but the intruding phalanx of freshmen in the present congress has driven it into the limbo of "has beens."

Some of the aggressive new senators have taken upon themselves all the privileges of veterans who have spent a generation in the "upper house of congress." A startling demonstration of their independence was given by Senator Luke Lea (Democrat, Tennessee), and Senator William S. Kenyon (Republican, Iowa), early in the session. Lea is the youngest member of the senate being 32 years old, just two years over the minimum legal age for senators, and Kenyon is not much his senior.

Lea and Kenyon defy custom.

There was a discussion in the senate on the question whether the Lorimer investigation should be conducted by the committee on privileges and elections or by a special committee appointed by the senate.

"Then six feet of Lea arose at the young Tennessee's desk, and his voice clear as a bell and strong enough to carry to the furthest nook of the senate chamber he made remarks frank and free about the fetish of "senatorial courtesy." It had been misused, he said, as a block to legislation important to the welfare of the nation. It would, of course, be courteous to his colleagues, but he did not propose to allow, without protest, so called courtesy to interfere with the business of the senate.

Old senators listened with amazement. There was the youngest senator assuming to himself the prerogative reserved for years to former Senator Hale, the high prerogative of lecturing the senate. They chafed under the fire but none chose to answer.

The old timers were given another shock when Kenyon took the floor and fired a broadside along the same lines that had been observed by Lea.

"We are met in our contention," he said, "with senatorial courtesy." It seems to me that as to almost everything you try to do in the senate it is suggested, "Look out, you are offending senatorial courtesy." Senatorial courtesy can never be a cloak to prevent men voting their honest convictions. It shall never be with me.

"The people of this country having a deep interest in and love for this government, intend to go through with the proceeding and have a thorough investigation made, even though it may jar the somewhat dilapidated fetish of senatorial courtesy."

"Since which the traditional power of 'senatorial courtesy' has not been invoked in the senate."

Works Becomes Assertive.

Senator Works the progressive from California, was one of the first of the new members to assert his independence of hoary tradition. He early took the privilege of discussing in set speeches strong in argument and reflecting thorough research, the more important questions pending in the senate. He reviewed the Lorimer investigation of last year, counted it a failure and argued that a special committee should have charge of the new investigation. He had been proposed as chairman of a special committee named in a resolution introduced by La Follette (Republican, Wisconsin) but announced that if the resolution were passed, he would not accept the honor. Works has delivered speeches also in commendation of the Arizona constitution, the election of senators by the people, the initiative, referendum and recall. He praised the mystifying and complicated cotton schedule in the Payne-Aldrich tariff law of two years ago. It was one of the wonders of the age. Lippitt will have influence, all right, but it will not be oratorical.

McLean, another Yankee senator, has kept out of debate, but has been industrious and proficient in attending to the interests of his Connecticut constituents.

The main achievement of Townsend (Michigan) has been the delivery of an instructive speech proposing that the Welland canal be deepened and widened and deep channels be established in shallow water in the St. Lawrence in order that the cities of the Great Lakes may become seaports. He showed that with Canada cooperating in the project, it would greatly reduce freight rates and confer many advantages on the lake marine.

Polinder, the Washington progressive, made an effective speech calling for a thorough investigation of Lorimer and he introduced a resolution calculated to remove the muzzles from the government employees in the civil service, that they may make their grievances known to congress.

Cool Summer in Berry Fields.

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.) Hood River, Or., July 1.—The Hood River valley is experiencing the coolest cent. This is practically twice the increase in the value of exports and imports during the same period. In 1909 there was not a single 20,000 ton liner in existence. At the present time there are 15 steamships of 20,000 tons or more in service between New York and Europe, adding more than 25,000 tons of carrying capacity in this one class that has come into existence within the decade. The output of newer and ever larger liners, therefore, not only marks the growth of ocean trade, but even more strikingly measures the intense rivalry that prevails for the commerce of the seas. In no other business in the world probably has competition over a long period been so intense as in the ocean steamship business; in no other have such tremendous sums been expended in the effort to gain such slight and temporary advantages, and in no other have such heavy losses been endured over a long period in the effort to win supremacy.

"The public has profited by this struggle for its favor, for as a result it has at its command the most luxurious facilities for travel to be found anywhere in the world in the steamships plying across the Atlantic. In the handling of passenger traffic the movement toward lower rates and improved service has been manifest. The rate advertised from New York to Liverpool on the Great Western in 1838 was $250 for a stateroom and $150 was the lowest price charged for a cabin berth. Today the minimum price of cabin fare is about half these, and of course there is no comparison between the two periods in the quality of food, the degree of comfort, and the variety of conveniences provided. In hardly any other business has the principle of regulated competition worked out such effective and beneficial results as in the handling of ocean traffic."

Every luxury that modern ingenuity can suggest is included in the designs of new liners along with the increases in size and engine power. The latest aspirant for maritime laurels, for example, includes in its construction such features as a swimming pool, Turkish baths, a glass enclosed sun parlor, a gymnasium and an 18 hole golf course. It would seem that there could be little left to suggest, but as long as the pride and the treasures of the competing interests hold out the marine architects will hardly acknowledge themselves at the end of their resources. The race of the ocean giants is likely to continue, therefore, and the public will be kept on the qui vive awaiting the reply to the always interesting question "What next?"

Tag Day for City Bathhouse.

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.) La Grande, Or., July 1.—Something exceptionally convenient is afforded in bathing facilities for La Grande people in plans now being put into building shape at Riverside park here. On July 8, the day Aviator Welch flies here, local promoters of the bathing house, with the assistance of 45 young women, will sell tags to obtain the final amounts in cash necessary to complete the building. It will be bungalow style, supplied with departments for women, men and boys, and spring boards, chutes and promenades will be built in front of the building. It will be the finest thing of its kind in eastern Oregon, costing several hundred dollars when completed.

A Prominent Business Man of Portland Recommends the

Neal Three Day Cure For Alcoholism

The Treatment That Makes Happy Homes

Many Portland business men have in their employ men that would be valuable to them if it was not for drink. The following letter will appeal to them as well as others. There are hundreds of men in Portland today, as well as in other cities, that are of no use to themselves or their families, on account of the demon "Drink." The Neal treatment restores those who have fallen to the lowest degradation, to their family, friends and society, in three days. It makes happy homes where misery existed before. The following letter explains itself:

Portland, Ore., Jan. 2d, 1911.

"Manager Neal Institute, Portland Or.

"Dear Sir—I read with great interest the announcement in the Portland Sunday papers of the opening of a Neal Institute at 354 Hall Street. As a business man in the city of Portland, I can recommend most highly your treatment for the cure of the 'Drink Habit.' I know personally of two Portland men that have taken your treatment at the Neal Institute, and I am satisfied that they are both permanently cured of the most degraded of all habits (drink).

"Drink has ruined more homes and caused more heartaches than any other habit under the sun.

"I have in my employ at the present time a man that has taken your cure, and a happier man does not live in Portland than he. Hardly a day passes that he does not say something in praise of the Neal Cure.

"Wishing you great success, I am

"Yours truly,

"A gentleman who owns over 30 houses in Portland called at the Neal Institute yesterday to investigate for himself and the wife of one of his tenants who could not pay their rent on account of the husband's drinking, the methods employed in the Neal three-day cure for alcoholism. He said that drink was the only trouble he had with his tenants in not paying their rent, and that he was going to recommend several of them now to take the Neal treatment. One thing that appealed to him in one way and made him skeptical in another, was the fact that the patient lost but three days from his business. The fact that we gave a bond and contract assuring a cure, or a refund of the money at end of treatment convinced him after reading some of the letters from patients who gave us the privilege of showing them in our office without publishing their names in the newspapers or circulars. Strict privacy is always observed in all correspondence as well as to names of patients.

The Neal Three-Day Drink Habit Cure is entirely different from any other. It is purely vegetable. The medicine, which is perfectly harmless, is administered by a regularly licensed physician and one who has had an unusually wide and varied experience in the treatment of alcoholism. There are no hypodermic injections used in this treatment. The medicine is taken internally.

The Portland Institute is a home-like place. Each guest is at all times under the personal charge of a regular physician. Names of guests are never divulged, and all communications are held in strictest confidence. Guests enjoy all the privacy and comforts of home, club or hotel. All patients have a private room and all meals are taken in same.

Write the Institute and they will give you unquestioned reference as to their ability to do as they promise. A personal interview with the Manager or Physician in charge is more satisfactory and much to be preferred in all cases.

Arrangements can be made for home treatment for those who cannot conveniently take it at the Institute. Institute open night and day.
