 Special feature—Mothers' Congress picnic.

Chautauquans got into their best bib and tucker early this morning in preparation for what promises to be one of the greatest days in point of attendance, the season has yet had. The weather is delightfully warm for cool weather and the perfect shade of the great oaks is making the Chautauqua a comfortable resort, while the city is coming near sweltering as it ever does in Oregon.

The grounds have been well dampened down, and the management will see that they are kept so all day. Every headquarters has put on a holiday appearance with fresh flowers and bright flowers, and all seem to be preparing for what is commonly called "a big day."

The parliamentary class conducted by Mrs. Emma A. Fox of Detroit, Mich., is holding its sessions with wonderful attendance. Each day there is an increase in attendance, but the most marked feature is the earnestness with which the members take hold of it. The method pursued is to take some phase or two of organization work, on which Mrs. Fox lectures, giving the class permission to ask questions. The last half hour is given to a drill. A member is chosen president of what, for convenience, is called "The Chautauqua Parliamentary Law club," and a secretary. These officers are secured in the various ways officers may be chosen, and then the assembly is ready for business, which Mrs. Fox simply directs, by criticism, through the intricacies of motions, amendments, previous questions, etc. that most women believe are invented for no other purpose than to vex their souls. Today the subjects of the lecture will be the fiscal year, reconsideration and proper terms.

Art Class Popular.
 No less popular is the art class, which is held in the same place in the morning, and followed later in the day by the psychology, by the same teacher. Mrs. Booker's Bible class attracts a throng every day, and this morning's work promises to be of special interest. The headquarters of the Boy Scouts is almost the first thing seen on the grounds as one enters the main gate, and the scouts are in evidence every place over the grounds where anything is to be seen, heard or learned. They are a manly set of youngsters, and by their good discipline and gentlemanly conduct have won the good will of every one.

The Gillespie school of expression seems, this morning, to be gathering to itself all the young men and women on the ground, so popular is it. On a number of occasions this session the attendance has reached beyond the hundred mark, and this morning is going far ahead of it.

This is farmers' day. It is a compliment to all farmers to have on their day an address by Mrs. Clara Waldo, regent of the Oregon Agricultural college, and a zealous friend of progressive farmers. Mrs. Waldo spoke at the forum hour on "Life at Home and Abroad." As she but recently returned from an extended trip abroad, where she studied home conditions, she is abundantly able to discuss the subject with interest and intelligence. Miss Zeta Hollister was the very acceptable soloist of this morning's forum.

Dr. Charles F. Aked will be the big attraction this afternoon, and tonight the Williams Jubilee singers will make

MRS. FISKE'S LATEST PLAY IS CHARMING

Mrs. Fiske at the Hellig, in her eastern success, "Mrs. Bumpstead-Leigh."

Mrs. Fiske will permit a local audience to pass judgment on her latest eastern success, "Mrs. Bumpstead-Leigh," at the Hellig theatre for three nights beginning tonight, with a matinee Saturday.

In this first comedy by Harry James Smith there is no demand for subtlety or sensitive feeling. It is a farcical American play in which the daughter of old Jim Saylor, maker of a celebrated stomach elixir, is warmly received by a snobbish Long Island family at their country house under the impression that she is a DeSalle, an American long enough in England to talk responsibly through her forgetfulness about the nicest people in the kingdom. Obvious and good humored Mr. Smith is capital in his satire. He makes Mrs. Bumpstead-Leigh patronize this great land and he makes the snobbish Rawsons accept her bad manners under the impression that being imported they must be superior. When the Rawsons are out of the way, Mrs. Bumpstead-Leigh coaches her subservient mother and bullies her ingenuitous brother, who, of course, is engaged to a Rawson. But the best thing in the play is the eruption in the second act of Peter Swallow, an old family friend of the Saylor. Swallow is a "monumentalist," a maker of tombstones, with other "Hoboken" Mrs. Fiske gives herself to the part of Mrs. Bumpstead-Leigh unreservedly.

their first appearance. There are nine members of this company, and their repertoire runs from plantation songs and negro melodies to sentimental songs and classic selections.

Salary Close Engagement.
 It was with sincere regrets everyone on the Chautauqua grounds bade farewell to the Sadlers last night after their two days of steady programs. To hold what from the very nature of Chautauqua is a moving audience for three or four consecutive days is a feat seldom rivalled by any platform manager, but it was with confidence the Gladstone Park people undertook it with the Sadlers, and the universal opinion was that they made good. While the general attendance, through sheer weariness, was not as large as on some other days, they gathered into the auditorium everyone that was on the grounds, and what was better still, held them there through very prolonged sessions. Their talks abounded in practical common sense advice, they reached their hearers because they used no technicalities or professional vocabulary, and they drove home truths to every man, woman and child that heard them.

Miss S. M. Wilmer, who is a part of the Sadler company, held the audience spellbound last night with her dramatic reading of "La Samaritaine" ("The Woman of Samaria").

Mrs. Elfrida Weinstein was the soloist, and was gracious in responding to the many encores.

Wm. Meinecke of Walla Walla After a Fight With Dallas Marquis, Summons Him by Telephone to Get Shot.

(Special to The Journal.)
 Walla Walla, Wash., July 13.—Having shot and probably fatally injured Dallas Marquis, William Meinecke early this morning shot and killed himself. Marquis is in a hospital and will probably die from a horrible wound in the head.

Meinecke and Marquis had had trouble previously and about 1:30 o'clock this morning the latter sent in a call from Sixth and Main streets for a cab. Marquis answered the call and soon a shot was heard. Marquis managed to walk three blocks to the State hotel, where he fell exhausted into a chair, murmuring, "Meinecke shot me."

Meinecke came to the police station to give himself up but could not be induced to part with his gun. After frightening a few bystanders, he disappeared but was located and brought to the station house by Patrolman George Wilcox, who did not, however, get his gun away from him. As they entered the door of the police station, Meinecke by a quick movement placed the gun to his head and blew out his brains.

The two men had become enemies and last night engaged in a fist fight and it is thought the tragedy was a consequence.

Marquis' left eye is gone and a part of his brain is exposed. Meinecke was 30 years or more of age and several years ago attempted to establish an independent cab line here but failed.

O. N. G. SHOTS DOWN IMAGINARY ENEMIES

The Clackamas rifle range today was given over to preliminary practice in advance of the annual state rifle competition, which takes place tomorrow. Between 75 and 100 officers of the Oregon National Guard, supplemented by detachments from the various companies throughout the state took part in the day's practice shoot.

Captain Townsend of the regular army who has been in charge of the annual shoot for O. N. G. officers—assembled last Monday morning—gave his men special instruction yesterday in capturing the enemy's stores and ammunition train. The hostile army was supposed to be in camp at Oak Grove, north of Clackamas station. The raiding force was commanded by an officer of the guard, while both the attacking and defending troops were directed in their general movements by Captain Townsend. As the attack proceeded, such difficulties were interposed by the directing officer as would arise in actual warfare.

Last night, troop leading problems were studied by the class, a map of the Gettysburg battlefield being used for these maneuvers which were of a purely
