

PROHIBITION LIVE ISSUE IN TEXAS

Saturday Will Close Campaign Waged With Much Bitterness.

Austin, Texas, July 20.—Texas is about to go to one of the stiffest tests made anywhere in the country between the liquor interests and the anti-saloon forces. The state campaign which has been waged with a bitterness that has seemed to increase daily for the past three months will close tomorrow and on Saturday the voters will decide whether or not an amendment providing for state-wide prohibition shall be added to the constitution of Texas.

Reports from all directions indicate that this is by far the most bitter political struggle which ever has occurred in the Lone Star state. Today and tomorrow the fight will be brought to a whirlwind finish with mass meetings in every nook and corner of the commonwealth, from the panhandle to the gulf, and from El Paso to the forests of east Texas.

It seems impossible to forecast the result of the special election with any degree of certainty. From the headquarters of both the prohibitionists and the anti-prohibitionists are emanating reports indicating that both sides view the outlook with equal confidence. Some onlookers see in the results of the last Democratic primary an indication of the vote in the coming election. To the majority, however, the results of the recent primary only serve to make the present situation the more puzzling. In the primary an overwhelming vote for Railroad Commissioner Oscar B. Colquitt, the anti-prohibitionist candidate for governor, was polled, but at the same time a great demand for the submission of the prohibition question was voted in Democratic Texas.

Throughout the campaign both sides have maintained headquarters in a number of the leading cities of the state. From these headquarters tons of literature have been mailed and hundreds of speakers have been sent forth to stump the country from end to end. Governor Colquitt himself has led the force of anti-speakers. On the prohibition side former Governor Campbell has been one of the most active workers. The newspapers, the churches, the Y. M. C. A. and numerous other organizations have lined up on one side or the other in the campaign and many instances are cited where even families are split over the issue.

The only feature of the struggle which stands out with unmistakable clearness is the fact that the public generally is desirous that the saloon question be definitely settled once for all, for it has long been a bugbear in Texas politics. But whether they want to vote out the saloon at the same time is a question that can be answered only by a count of the votes day after tomorrow.

MOSIER WORKS FOR COLUMBIA LANDING

Has Visions of Lower Freight Rates If Water Competition Can Be Secured at Wharf.

(Special to The Journal.) Mosier, Or., July 20.—The local merchants are working on a scheme to get the river boats to build a landing at this point. There is an excellent location for a dock just west of the railroad station and a crossing has been granted by the O. W. R. & N. With the river transportation facilities Mosier will enjoy better service than at present and perhaps get lower freight rates. Hundreds of acres of young orchards are coming into bearing every year and Mosier will soon be an important fruit district. The new town of Oriley in the Mosier district is being developed very rapidly and other large tracts are soon to be opened up.

Portland Doctor Builds Home. (Special to The Journal.) Mosier, Or., July 20.—Dr. A. C. Marcum of Portland is having a handsome bungalow constructed on his 40-acre orchard tract near Mosier and will complete the summer months here. He has one of the finest orchards in this district, beautifully situated on the rolling hills overlooking the Columbia river.

COURT'S RULING GIVES WOMAN HER FREEDOM

(Dated Press Leased Wire.) Los Angeles, Cal., July 20.—By order of District Attorney John D. Fredericks, all surveillance of Mrs. Ortie E. McManigan has been called off, as a result of Judge Walter Bordwell's ruling that Mrs. McManigan need not testify before the grand jury concerning the case against J. J. and J. B. McNamara, charged with murder in connection with the destruction of the Los Angeles Times building. This means that Mrs. McManigan will not be questioned until the McNamara case is called for trial.

The condition of Mrs. McManigan's health today shows no improvement. A physician summoned to attend her early this morning said her heart was weaker than on Tuesday or yesterday. She is confined to her bed.

MADERO INSURRECTOS RESIST DISARMAMENT

(Dated Press Leased Wire.) Agua Prieta, Mex., July 20.—Martial law was enforced here today. No one was permitted to cross the international line into Douglas, Ariz. The order was the result of mutiny of Madero Insurrectos against being disarmed. Bloodshed was threatened when the soldiers refused to surrender their arms to Lieutenant Colonel Rafael Romero, the officer detailed to superintend their discharge. Romero was young prisoner by the mutineers, but was released after a promise to increase their pay.

Veterans Rally Again on Blood-Stained Sword

Men Who 50 Years Ago Today Met in First Battle of Rebellion Gather Again on the Battlefield.

(Special to The Journal.) Manassas, Va., July 20.—The blood-stained sword of Bull Run is again peopled with those who with bitter hatred and feverish anxiety awaited the break of dawn 50 years ago today to commence the first battle of the rebellion. But instead of mingled curses and prayers; instead of the nervous tread of sentries; the fevered restlessness of foreboding; the rival camps of the blue and gray house men bowed with years, whose only thought is that of peace and brotherhood; and whose time is spent in greeting brother soldiers, recalling incidents of days gone by and preparing for the rigors of the crowning day of the Manassas National Jubilee to be held tomorrow on the semi-centennial anniversary of the bloody battle of Bull Run.

Elaborate preparations have been made for this unique gathering. The president of the United States, and the governor of Virginia will be present to deliver addresses, with commanders-in-chief of the Grand Army of the Republic and the United Confederate Veterans, and distinguished soldiers and statesmen from every part of the United States.

Memories of the Civil war recalled by the Manassas national jubilee. A war time print of the battle of Bull Run, July 21, 1861, and the two generals who opposed each other in the engagement. General Irwin McDowell, the Federal commander, is on the left, and General Pierre G. T. Beauregard, commander of the Confederates, on the right.

States. The town is decked with Confederate and Federal flags, and the streets swarm with visitors, bent on witnessing the most unique ceremony in the history of post-bellum reunions. Everywhere the martial spirit is in evidence. Tottering veterans throng sidewalks, brilliant with uniforms of officers and privates of the present day. The old Henry farm house with its shot riddled walls is gay with bunting, and hundreds of visitors, both old and young, keep the charactaker busy with their questions, while old soldiers, the light of youth for a moment showing in their wrinkled faces, tell tales of daring deeds performed on Henry Hill.

Take Same Positions. It is here that the most impressive sight of the day will be witnessed. The time shattered remnants of the Federal and Confederate ranks, at 12 tomorrow will issue forth from camps pitched in the same position occupied by the opposing armies 50 years ago, and slowly tread the blood stained, bullet plowed turf till they and their "charge" with mutual hand clasps and well wishes instead of the singing bullets and wild curses that greeted their charges 50 years ago. After this ceremonial the veterans will partake of a love feast in commemoration of the reunion and will be further regaled with an especially prepared series of motion pictures showing stirring battle scenes and peaceful pictures of later days.

At 2 p. m. the veterans will return to this city and at 3:00, 48 young ladies, representing the states of the Union, will clasp hands and sing the Manassas National Jubilee Anthem, especially written for the occasion. At 4 the veterans will be addressed by President Taft and the governor of Virginia, and at 6 Manassas and surrounding county towns will open their houses to visitors and veterans alike in the largest public reception ever held in a state famed for its hospitality.

Features of Battle. With the single exception of Gettysburg there is probably no Civil War anniversary so momentous; for the first battle of Bull Run, according to generals who fought in it, not only initiated the country into war, but its effects, mistakes and lessons were felt clear through to Appomattox. About 18,000 men were engaged on each side. The official reports give the Union casualties as 19 officers and 483 men killed, 54 officers and 947 men wounded, and 1176 men captured. The Confederate losses are unknown, as there were no records kept. Of the 18,000 men engaged scarcely a handful remain today to take part in the celebration. Time has wiped out whole companies and mustered regiments now present but a few survivors. It is not probable therefore, that this history of the United States will ever again chronicle such a meeting between the Blue and the Gray as that which will take place tomorrow, and for this reason every effort has been made to make it one to be remembered by posterity.

Men Prominent in Rally. Among those prominent in the promotion of this unique rally are: General John E. Gilman, commander in chief of the Grand Army of the Republic; General George W. Gordon, commander in chief of the United Confederate Veterans; Lieutenant George C. Round, first Connecticut heavy artillery; and chairman of the executive committee; Captain Westwood Hutchinson; G. Raymond Ratcliffe, C. Maurice Hopkins, D. R. Lowell, 121st New York; Arthur Hendricks, 5th New York; H. B. Matto, 89th Ohio; J. H. Thomas, of the interior department, and many others who played prominent roles in the first great battle of the Civil War.

In addition to the invitations extended to the veterans they have been asked to mail postals inscribed with a brief patriotic sentiment. These manuscripts will be on exhibition in the Manassas public library and will be finally removed to the new Carnegie library in New York city, where they will be preserved forever as relics of men who passed through the greatest crisis in the history of the United States.

These postals and letters have been pouring in upon the executive committee by the hundreds and their exhibit in the library is the daily scene of eager crowds of veterans who search like school boys for letters from comrades half forgotten with the lapse of years.

In fact, the library is a trysting place for veterans from both sides of the Mason and Dixon line, and many are the friendships that are daily renewed before this exhibit of letters from members of both armies.

G. W. MARSH DROWNS IN 3 FEET OF WATER

(Special to The Journal.) Hillsboro, Or., July 20.—G. W. Marsh, prominent for a lifetime in Washington county politics, was found dead at 6:30 o'clock last evening, three feet of water in a creek on his farm near Centerville. The coroner's jury returned a verdict of accidental death. Mr. Marsh was subject to melancholia and had returned two weeks ago from a sanitarium. He was assembly candidate for county judge last year, but was defeated at the primaries and was much disappointed. He was 53 years old and a native of the county. He was a member of the Oregon house in 1896.
