IN SOCIETY

Master Dan Cupid has given the nbers of the younger set and society in general a lovely surprise in the wedding of Miss Jean Kerr and Kenneth Holbrook of Boston, which was celebrated in Vancouver, Wash., Sat-urday, August 19, at the M. E. parson-age, by Rev. J. M. Canse. Mr. and Mrs. Cumming of Portland, accompanied the young people. Mr. and Mrs Holbrook spent last week at Seaside where Mrs. Amanda Kerr has a tage. They left this morning for their poneymoon trip. The wedding comes as the culmination of a romance begun in the east while Mrs. Holbrook was atschool in Boston. brook with his mother, Mrs. Walter H. Holbrook, and his brother, Donald Holbrook, arrived in Portland a week ago Saturday. Mrs. Holbrook and Donald were guests, at Alexandra Court until Saturday, when they left for their home in the east. It is expected, and very much hoped, that Kenneth Holbrook is to locate permanently in Portland.

The many friends of Mrs. F. M. C. Hiller and Miss Cassie Hiller will be in-terested in the following excerpts from long and breezy account in a Dawson paper of Miss Hiller's recent concert;

"Klondike fell in love last evening with little Cassie Hiller, and gave her a reception such as the young virtuoso never had before enjoyed. The manner of the reception was typically Yukonese, all being frankly demonstrative over the splendid work of the artist.

Encores followed each selection by the young violiniste, and after each and every number there was a beautiful bouquet of flowers passed over the footlights to the dainty hand that held the hurried away before the last number and secured the choicest available in short notice; and sent them forward. At the conclusion the top of the plane was laden with the floral tributes. Many were daintily bound in ribbon. One en thusiast over the splendld work secured the flowers, but could get no ribbon with which to bind them, and in a moment of sheer fright lest the curtain fall before the little token could be sent forward, whipped off his sliken necktie, hastily bound the flowery tribute and made the riffle.

"Had it been '98 the fair young violinist would have been showered not in flowers, but in nuggets from the hands of Klondike kings. The old town has heard many a skilled violinist and some whose mastery is still tradition in Dawson, but none ever received more praise than did Miss Hiller for her work last night. Scarcely more than a child, she plays with the touch of a genius.

With her mother as the accompanist, Miss Hiller was beaming, and with each number she displayed the cherriest of response to the generous applause.

'All of Dawson's musical colony was there last night, and all predict Miss Hiller will be known in the musical world if she but follow the work. The present trip north is preparatory to course in Europe.

"Another Matter," He Says. "But if you are approached with a proposition to investigate the alleged graft said to be existing in the city, will you entertain it?" was asked. "That is another matter," replied Burns, "and I would have to consider that at that time. I am not here to do any investigating only so far as my office is concerned," he repeated.

Mr. Burns was told that some harsh things had been said about his man-

"Kulper is a very efficient man," he said. "So far as his past is concerned, that does not enter into this matter at all. When I placed him in charge here I told him that bygones would be bygones; that we would start with clean slate. Says He Got Dynamiters.

"Several newspapers seem to think did not get the dynamiters," said he, referring to the Los Angeles Times ex-plosion case. "At least, that's what they say."

"Well, did you get them?" was asked.
"I think so, yes. I know I got them," he said as an afterthought.
"Everything is working fine at Los Angeles," he said. "But there is nothing new. We are simply getting along splendidly." Mr. Burns is accompanied by his two bodyguards, whom he has employed since the arrest of the alleged dynamiters in Indianapolis. They are W. H. Reed and G. B. Biddinger. They accompany him wherever he goes. The detective will stay in the city about three days, he says. That is, he expects to complete his business here within that length of time. Should he be approached by the crusaders, then that will be a different proposition— he may remain longer and he may not.

RIPE

Written for The Journal by Darra More HAVE been reading about Colonel E. H. R. Green, whose chief distinction in life seems to be that he is the son of Mrs. Hetty Green. colonel frequently bursts into print with a statement as to what kind of woman he is going to marry. And when he talks of women in general, he raves and he foams and he sizzles. His special grudge is the New York woman,, who, he declares is "fashion mad." And then, he adds, "When I marry it will be a real woman and not a clothesline."

I've heard a lot of other equally prominent and far more brainy men shop employes is not the reason for my make the same statement, Colonel visit to San Francisco at this time. March hares over the woman question, will not meet the representatives of the and mark you, I've seen these same unutterable, indescribable idiots of themselves over some woman. 've seen them dwell upon the virtues of ham and eggs, but I notice that they always "fall" for the champagne and terrapin. I've seen them march to the altar with worse than clotheslines, and I've seen them stripped of their very hide by the alluring feminine. You see, Colonel Green, you haven't much chance when a clever woman decides to marry you. Really! It is mostly "up to her." And, the world is full of just such clever women, and they don't always come in "clotheslines," either. And, rich men, such as you are, have to go under now and then. You must pay some penalty for all this richness, Colonel. These "fashion mad" wo" men are the great distributors, the great evelers of accumulated wealth.

You say the "western women who live in smaller communities, are a dif-ferent type and have different stand-They are all the same breed, Colonel Green, all the same. They may move in "various ways their wonders to perform." Some may be a little smarter than others. They may wear different uniforms, but they are all off the same holt of cloth. Don't forget for one minute, Colonel Green, that every woman is a born actress. She can cast her mold into any sort of woman that is likely to "get your goat." But after that step to the altar, when millions and alimon bloom at the end of the lane, look out for tricks. No man with barrels and barrels of money can tell what kind of woman he is marrying, or what manner of explosion may follow.

But, it is high time for your family for a killing. All that is necessary a dying calf expression, a sunbonnet and a calico apron. Do you remember the story they tell of the sailors who anded on islands where the penguins flourished, Colonel Green? Now the penguin is a very silly bird, it just stands Canada.
