

M'NAMARA'S TRIAL PUT OVER FOR DAY; COUNSEL AT WORK

Legal Holiday Causes Postponement; Illness of Talesman Causes Judge to Order Special Quarters and Cook.

(United Press Special Wire.)
 Los Angeles, Oct. 12.—With one taleman indisposed as the result of being confined in a big, hot, barometer room, where the usual of fresh meat is not available, the danger of a postponement in the case of James H. McNamee through sickness or death of a juror before the trial finally ends was brought home to the court and lawyers today. J. J. Blain, one of the venturers' counsel, stating that his explanation regarding the postponement for jury duty, was ill today.

When Judge Nordwell learned of the matter he sent the Sheriff Haggerty and a body of constables to the court house to get the juror out of the room, as they prefer, can attend them in the presence of the juror.

Well satisfied with the position taken by Judge Nordwell that venturers may be questioned regarding their prejudice against taking jurors as a body or membership in such attorneys for James H. McNamee spent today framing questions which would be comprehensive and also come within the order of the court. They agreed that under the ruling made it will be possible to get at the feeling of venturers as to the organized labor in connection, and this will aid in safeguarding peremptory challenges and in securing the names of obvious candidates for jury duty for "causes."

There was no session of court today because it was a legal holiday but both prosecution and defense busied themselves scanning venire lists and looking up the code provisions to fortify themselves for the struggle which will be resumed tomorrow. The fact that both sides clashed over the interpretation of the law within five minutes of the opening of the examination of the first venireman showed the intensity of the feeling existing. It is certain that no point will be gained in the struggle for position without a fight.

Venturers Pass Quiet Day.
 The 11 prospective veniremen who occupy seats in the jury box passed a quiet day. They were held in their quarters in the court house most of the day although given a reasonable opportunity for needed exercise. It is generally accepted by both sides that there is no chance of getting a single juror out of the 11 men now in the box. In fact three of the men are known to have openly expressed opinions regarding the guilt of the accused, so they probably will be quickly excused for cause.

Up at District Attorney Fredericks' office there was no concealment of the belief that in putting James H. McNamee on trial first the state had scored a strategic victory. It was conceded that much of the evidence against James H. McNamee is inductive rather than positive, and that to establish the state's case that the union labor leader was the head and front of a murder conspiracy, it will be absolutely necessary to show that such conspiracy actually did exist.

Question Only a Beginning.
 The defense of course contends that James H. McNamee is innocent of the murder of Haggerty or any of the 11 men who lost their lives in the early morning of October 1, a year ago when five destroyed the anticipated structure which housed the Los Angeles Times. Not admitting, for the sake of argument, the attorney's case, that the state secured a conviction of James H. McNamee, this would be only the beginning of the foundation Detective Bureau tries to lay following James McNamee and other labor leaders in a court to meet dramatic performance.

The defense in J. H. McNamee's case will be an alibi, and witnesses whose identity is closely guarded will be called to establish that he was not in or near the Times building at the time about the date of the explosion. But in the case of J. J. McNamee an alibi is admitted by the state and conspiracy is charged.

All of One Act of All.
 J. H. McNamee was a factor in the conspiracy, and so was Orlie McNamee, if the state's case is to stand. And the acts of one of the conspirators were the acts of every member of the group, no matter how widely separated, the state contends, and therefore if J. H. McNamee is convicted of Haggerty's death, his sister brother must be equally guilty, whether he was in Denver, in Chicago, or New York on the night of the explosion.

It is known of the fact that the trial of J. H. McNamee will be drawn out for weeks. More than 100 witnesses will be called, many of whom will testify, should Judge Nordwell not intervene, to matters having absolutely no connection with the destruction of the Times building. They will be the individuals revealed up by Detective Burns to support his allegation that J. H. McNamee was an active participant in a murder syndicate.

All these the shadow of the sister brother will hang over the trial of the younger, and at certain intervals will strictly exclude it.

COUPLE ARRESTED ON COMPLAINT OF GIRL

The police this morning arrested Sam Krammer at 240 Couch street on a charge of allowing his wife in a disorderly house and for accepting the earnings of a fallen woman, and his wife also on a charge of harboring a disorderly house and on a white slave charge. The arrests were made on complaint of Patricia Krammer, a Russian, who recently came to this country, and whom the United States immigration officials are now watching, with a view of returning her to her native land.

In a white slatterned before the United States officials the girl stated that she has been with Krammer at 240 Couch street for about six months, and that in that time she has given him and his wife at least $1000 of her $15 gotten

CHINESE DRIVER RUNS AUTO THROUGH WINDOW

Four days, a Chinese used at the 1000 Mission street, while driving an automobile down Oak street 13th street, narrowly missed running down a person, and in the effort to save the man he ran his automobile through a big glass window at the Hotel Portland company store at 13th and Oak streets. The window and a part of the ceiling were demolished, but no one was injured. They were arrested on a charge of driving without a chauffeur's license.

The two are held under $2000 bonds each.

Mixture of Crags.
 (Special to the Journal.)
 March 11, 1911. At the prevailing high price for the two great American staples, an abundance of wealth and happiness may be expected to result from the wedding here today of Miss Alta Collins, daughter of a prominent farmer of this county, and George Wheat of this city.

About 20 miles north of Hingham the Chinese government has evicted a light-house of nearly $20,000 value, visible 20 miles at sea.
