

OREGON EASTERN THREATENS TO PUT VALE ON A BRANCH

Trouble in Getting a Route From Vale Into Malheur Canyon Causes Survey to Begin Out of Parma.

(Special to The Journal.)
Vale, Or., Dec. 21.—Vale is taking on the real appearance of a railroad town this week, hundreds of railroad laborers having arrived in town during the past few days. Seventeen carloads of material for the Utah Construction company and the Wasatch Construction company arrived in the local yards Tuesday. In the big trainload were several cars of hay, provisions, grading outfits and horses. Several more train loads will arrive during the next few days.

In spite of the rush now on in the local yards all the material is being stored in the warehouse recently rented for that purpose as it is understood that orders for real construction will not be given for a week or two. The work during the winter months will be mostly tunnel and heavy rock work, but in the spring the contractors expect to have about 4000 men working along the Oregon Eastern through the Malheur canyon. Part of the outfit to be used shortly is now being gotten ready. As the general supply point for the big job of building 176 miles of the trans-Oregon line, Vale presents the busiest scene of railroad activity in the northwest at the present time.

Right-of-way agents who have been in the field are finding it hard to secure the needed strip of land from this city to the mouth of the Malheur canyon, 12 miles south, and yesterday a surveying crew was placed in the field to run lines out of Parma, Idaho, straight west to the Malheur canyon. The proposed line will be a cutoff of 12 miles over the Ontario-Vale line to the Malheur valley, and the news caused some sensation in this city as the cutoff would leave Vale on a branch line. It is said that the present delay in the beginning of actual construction work in the canyon has been caused by the order of Construction Engineer O. S. Osborn to survey the cutoff through the so-called South Vale oil fields.

As the Harriman people have already surveyed the proposed cutoff twice, the last time last spring, it is likely a suitable pass can be found for the cutoff, at least local railroad men say there is more than a bluff in the putting of a survey party in the field south of this city.

Recent official figures place Missouri in the lead among lead producing states, followed by Idaho, Utah and Colorado.

FRANK BEATTY IS FINED FOR KLAMATH GUN PLAY

(Special to The Journal.)
Klamath Falls, Or., Dec. 21.—Deputy United States Marshal Frank R. Beatty, here from Portland to get prisoners charged with selling whiskey to Indians, was fined $18 by Police Judge T. F. Nicholas yesterday afternoon. Beatty was charged with drawing a revolver on a man in a pool room, early yesterday morning. Beatty claims that he was attacked and drew the gun in self protection; the opposing claim was that he was quarrelsome.

WOMAN SHOEMAKER IS BACK AT BENCH AGAIN

(Special to The Journal.)
Lebanon, Or., Dec. 21.—Miss Ray Leonard, the lady shoemaker who went under the attire of a man here in Lebanon for 22 years, and whose identity was discovered when she was taken to the asylum, has been visiting friends in the country up until a few days ago when she returned to Lebanon and has opened a shoeshop again. Miss Leonard says she was afraid her old customers would not patronize her, but all such fears was unfounded, as she is getting all the work she can do. She is about 63 years old.

Work on Church Progresses.
(Special to The Journal.)
Lebanon, Or., Dec. 21.—The new Presbyterian church, which is being built in Lebanon is progressing nicely. The cement work which is built up about 12 feet from the ground is all completed, and the frame work is all up. The original contract price is $12,740. This does not include the completion of the basement nor the seating of the church, nor the windows.

Receives $6000 for Injuries.
(Special to The Journal.)
Falls City, Or., Dec. 21.—Clarence D. O'Brien has received $6000 damages from the Falls City Lumber company for injuries incurred while working for the lumber company at their camp, five miles above this city, last summer. He underwent an operation at Dallas immediately after the accident, and had one of his kidneys removed. He sued for $20,000 at the last session of the circuit court, but received $6000.

Masonic Temple Contract Let.
(Salem Bureau of The Journal.)
Salem, Or., Dec. 21.—Contracts totalling $105,000 have been let for construction and finishing of the Masonic temple in Salem. The chief contractors are Bartlett, Roth & Co., of Portland. The big block will fill an unsightly corner at State and High streets near the Oregon electric station.

EASTERN OREGON BUSINESS LIVELY

Dull Spell Followed by Active Trade Conditions in Wholesale and Retail Lines.

Baker, Or., Dec. 21.—After an autumn during which business has been quiet throughout all of eastern Oregon, the past two weeks have shown a wonderful increase, according to the wholesale and retail houses of this city. Traveling salesmen representing Baker houses in the eastern Oregon territory report a largely increased business over the past few months, and in lines not particularly affected by the approach of the holidays. General trading is on the increase, they say, with the dealers in the smaller towns buying ahead more than since the summer months. Since August they have confined their purchases to absolute necessities, and in contrast to the month of December, under ordinary conditions with the approach of invoice time, instead of falling off their orders are larger.

Local bank clearings show an increase, and the statements of Baker financial institutions for the past month indicate a healthy condition of business affairs in general. Ranchers are beginning to realize on their crops, and more money is in circulation.

Holiday business has been under normal in this city up to a week ago, but has been coming up with a rush the past few days, and retail merchants look for a total sales to exceed last year by a large figure. The improved local train service on the O.-W. R. & N. is thought to have been responsible for some part of the increase, as under present transportation conditions people from nearby towns in each direction can reach this city at convenient hours any time of day, while heretofore they were unable to do so.

Gives Up Pastorate.
(Special to The Journal.)
Baker, Or., Dec. 21.—Rev. Father J. J. Kerr, who has been assistant to his Grace, Rt. Rev. Bishop Charles J. O'Reilly, in the conduct of St. Francis cathedral, has been obliged by falling health to give up his pastorate here, and has been assigned to La Grande, where his duties will be less heavy. Rev. Bishop succeeds Father Kerr in the local field.

Baker County Pioneer Dies.
(Special to The Journal.)
Baker, Or., Dec. 21.—Lorenzo Krann, aged 60 years, and for nearly half a century a resident of Baker county, died at his home in this city yesterday from pneumonia while on a visit to his son in Denver. The deceased was born in Vienna, Austria, and came to this country when a very young boy, living practically all the remainder of his life here. He was a well known figure in the early events of the county, and had a wide acquaintance throughout eastern Oregon.

Wrestlers to Meet at Baker.
(Special to The Journal.)
Baker, Or., Dec. 21.—A boxing evening of this week, Joe Heinrich, Baker's best wrestler, will meet William Demetral, the Greek heavyweight champion of Salt Lake City. Heinrich is in fine fettle for the match, and considerable money is being wagered that he will win, the Greek undertaking to throw him twice in one hour or forfeit the match. Demetral will go from here to Portland, where he is booked for a match with John Berg.
