

SAYS UNIVERSITY DOESN'T DICTATE TO HIGH SCHOOLS

President Campbell Declares That Quality of Teachings More Important Than Specific Subjects Considered.

With a splendid representation of educators from all parts of the state the second day of the eleventh annual meeting of the western division of the Oregon State Teachers' association proved of exceptional interest this morning at Lincoln High school.

President Campbell declared that the state university has undertaken no attempt to dictate to the high schools of the state what courses of study they should follow, but that the nine and a half units required for entrance are recognized as standard in practically all high schools.

He stated that after the student has entered the university the work is entirely elective, with the exception of one year of English composition and two years of some language not English.

Among the discussions of various phases of school life in the different sections that on social hygiene proved of greatest interest and at the completion of Dr. W. T. Williamson's address on "The Pedagogy of Sex Hygiene," it was necessary to adjourn the meeting from the school room to the assembly hall, where Dr. William T. Foster, president of Reed college, spoke on "Who is a Safe Teacher of Sex Hygiene?"

Dr. Williamson showed the necessity of such instruction in the schools and stated that it should follow elementary training in the home.

He showed the relation of the study to the health of the school children and gave an instructive lecture on the diseases and abuses which follow lack of proper knowledge.

Dr. Foster took up the discussion by stating that there were four requisites for a teacher of this subject.

Other meetings were held during the morning covering subjects in which the different delegates are interested.

At the general meeting officers were elected for the coming year as follows: President, Charles A. Rice, Portland; first vice president, J. H. Ackerman of Monmouth; second vice president, J. Percy Wallis of Jacksonville; secretary, L. A. Wiley of Portland; treasurer, E. F. Carleton of Salem; executive committee, L. R. Alderman of Salem, Charles A. Rice, Fannie G. Porter and Frank Higler of Portland, and Emma C. Warren of Astoria.

A reception was held at the Portland hotel last night for the delegates by the Teachers' club and the Principals' club.

OREGON FINDS BIENNIAL SESSIONS QUITE ENOUGH

(Salem Bureau of The Journal.) Salem, Ore., Dec. 29.—That for the past 25 years in Oregon the governors have not deemed it necessary to convene the legislature for other than corrective legislation or to elect a United States senator, that at none of these special sessions was there any legislation attempted other than that for which the governors called the sessions, and that biennial sessions are considered frequent enough by the people of the state generally, is the substance of a letter written by Secretary of State Elliott to R. Keith Charles of South Carolina, who is heading a fight in that state to do away with annual legislative sessions and have the sessions biennially.
