

COL. ROOSEVELT FOR PRESIDENT OF CHINESE REPUBLIC

Chicago Academic Makes a Startling Suggestion Before Civic Forum in New York; Says He Would Work Order

(By the International News Service.)
New York, Jan. 20.—That Theodore Roosevelt should be asked to assume the temporary presidency of the new Chinese republic was the startling suggestion made by Dr. Toyokichi Iyanaga, professor of political science in Chicago university, in an address before the civic forum in the Hudson theatre, Monday.

"The people of China are not ready for a republic," said the lecturer. "They have lived under a monarchy for 4000 years and their progress under a new regime will necessarily have to be slow. As a republic is no cure for all evils," said the speaker, "so the imbecile monarchy is damnable. Those who suffer most from this revolution are the masses and the foreign commerce. If the present state of affairs drags on the foreign powers will surely intervene. The foreign powers with their large interests in China will never stand for a division of China. It all depends of course upon the ability of the present leaders and statesmanship."

Admits Proposition Is Startling.
"Startling as might seem the statement," said the speaker, "the best plan for China under the circumstances would be, I am strongly tempted to suggest, to ask Theodore Roosevelt to serve as a temporary president of China and let him, with his powerful big stick, whip the people into one strong united nation, until China attains that important position in the family of nations to which her size and potential wealth justly entitles her to attain."

"If China will this revolution, a man who can handle the big stick, he will prove himself great for having been able to substitute this for the sword. At present, the sword seems to be the only solution for solving the problems of China."

RULES "TURKEY TROT" CANNOT BE ENJOINED

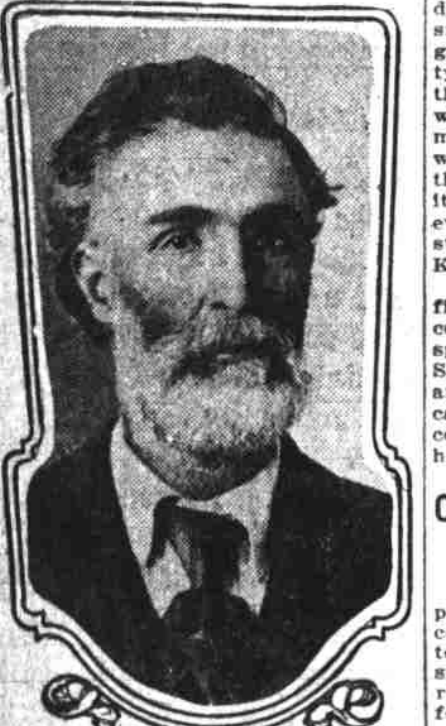

(By the International News Service.)
New York, Jan. 20.—The "Turkey Trot" for the first time received judicial consideration and as a result Justice Ford, sitting in the supreme court, ruled that one does not have to have "unique and extraordinary ability" to perform this new terpsichorean feat and that there really is "nothing novel or unique in the dance."

Justice Ford gave this ruling in refusing to grant to Werbs and Lutcher, producers of "Little Miss Fixit," an injunction to restrain Nora Bayes and Jack Norworth from allowing the "Trot" to be danced by members of their vaudeville company.
Werbs and Lutcher claimed the "trot" was original with "Little Miss Fixit" in which Bayes and Norworth formerly appeared. Rita Walker, a dancer of the Norworth Vaudeville company, testified that she discovered the dance in the "Barbary Coast" section of San Francisco and introduced the steps on the stage.

CALIFORNIA TURKEY HAS GOLD IN GIZZARD

(Publishers' Press Leased Wire.)
Sacramento, Cal., Jan. 20.—While dressing a turkey, Al McKinney, employed in the poultry department of a local meat market, found in the gizzard of the bird two gold nuggets, which assayed 12 and 13 respectively. With visions of a gold mine that he might be able to locate, McKinney investigated to ascertain where the turkey came from. It was found today that the bird was shipped from a ranch at Plymouth, Amador county.

HE SMILED AT GIRL; REMARK MAY COST MAN CITIZENSHIP

Convicted of Crime He Did Not Commit, Man Is Finally Released.

(United Press Leased Wire.)
New York, Jan. 20.—"Oh, I just want to forget if I can; just want to forget the dreary hours of the days and the sleepless hours of the nights I spent there in the big federal prison in Atlanta, knowing all the time I was innocent."
It was hard for Oscar Krueger to talk today, for his faithful little wife, kneeling at his side, threw her arms about his neck and kissed him every time he started. His little son, Harold, perched on his knee, clung tightly to his father, as though fearing some unseen force would take him away again.
For Oscar Krueger, freed after a year's wrong imprisonment, in Uncle Sam's big prison house in Atlanta, is back again in the heart of his family, trying to forget.
A young woman received an impromptu letter, proposing an engagement. She turned the letter over to Anthony Comstock, who suggested that she keep the appointment. It was at a crowded downtown corner, Krueger, on his way to a savings bank to deposit his money, saw the girl. She smiled at Krueger. He smiled back. The girl spoke to him. She was not of the type of a girl who speaks to men on the streets, and Krueger, thinking she wished to ask a question, stopped. Immediately he was arrested, charged with writing the letter. His attorney did not think the case a serious one and gave it little thought. The government, however, prepared such a strong circumstantial case that the jury convicted Krueger without leaving the box.
His wife and his sister took up his fight. Handwriting experts swore he could not have written the letter, despite Comstock's story on the stand. Senators, representatives, politicians and lawyers were appealed to. The case was reopened and Krueger's innocence proved. President Taft pardoned him. He reached New York today.

OHIO'S FUNDAMENTAL LAW TO BE REVISED

Columbus, Ohio, Jan. 20.—With 57 proposals already before the fourth Ohio constitutional convention, the committee named and the liquor and equal suffrage lobby interests registered as required, the delegates are prepared for action next week.
Of the mass of proposals the more important are those on the initiative and referendum, suffrage and franchise, the judiciary, taxation and bill of rights. The delegates will probably be in session for three months.

DECLARES SHINGLE MILL INDUSTRY IS BEHIND THE TIME

Mills on Coast as a Whole Are Badly Disorganized, Says Assistant Forester Knapp; Saving the Timber.

With a short speech in which he congratulated the supervisors and foresters of this district of the United States forest service on their excellent record during the past year, Chief Forester Henry S. Graves of Washington, D. C., closed the supervisors' meetings which have been in progress during the past week at the Carlton hotel, yesterday afternoon. Mr. Graves will leave Portland this evening for San Francisco, where he will attend similar meetings of the supervisors of District 5.
J. B. Knapp, assistant district forester and head of the division of products, was the principal speaker at the afternoon meeting yesterday. His address dealt with the products of the various woods of this section, the methods of manufacture and methods of handling. He said the shingle industry of the coast as a whole is in a badly disorganized condition, although efforts are being made now to improve it. The mills are as a rule antiquated, according to his statement, and little method is used in the manufacture and sale of shingles. No study is made of the kinds of wood which can be used in shingle manufacture.

Model Mill Designed.
At present he stated that the greater part of the rough material is shipped to eastern manufacturers and by them turned out in the finished product, which is reshipped to the coast. He based his statement on investigations which his office has carried on throughout this section, and declared that these conditions should be remedied.

Mr. Knapp also spoke about the lack of standardization in the arrangement of the majority of the sawmills of the northwest, which he declared necessitates the employment of many more men throughout a mill than is necessary. He has the work to fit with the machinery in use, as it was modern and good on the whole. He described a model mill which has been planned by his office and which will be placed before the mill owners in the near future.
Henry Ireland, forest supervisor of Sumpter, told of the rapid advance made by various parasites in the forests of the Blue mountains during the past five years. These parasites, he declared, have moved in a southerly direction, covering about 40 miles. In all between 150,000 and 200,000 acres have been destroyed by the parasites, or at least rendered of little value.

Much Could Be Saved.
Much of this timber could be saved, he thinks, if it could be marketed at once, but a great deal in such inaccessible places that private capital could not afford to build railroads to it. The parasites do comparatively little damage to the yellow pine, but practically ruin the lodge pole variety.
Resolutions in regard to the scientific part of the work were passed and thanks were expressed to the timbermen of the northwest for the hearty support which has been given the meetings. A resolution was also passed promising cooperation in State Game Warden Finley in the protection and propagation of wild game and birds.

The supervisors and forest service officials feel highly pleased with the results of the meetings, and an exchange of ideas has put aside many antiquated methods and has increased the efficiency of all who attended. Its effects have been both of benefit scientifically and practically in this increase of knowledge.
His case was held up two months pending further investigation.
The application for citizenship of Salvatore Scarpelli was denied by the court. It was shown by the government agent that Scarpelli, who emigrated from Italy in 1897, went to Canada within one year, where he remained nine years. On July 4, 1906, Scarpelli returned to the United States, but failed to secure a certificate of landing. The immigration laws were changed June 23, 1906, in which it was required that each foreigner must secure a certificate of landing. Scarpelli must wait five years before he is eligible to again apply for citizenship.
Final papers were also denied Gust Demetrakleis on the ground that he applied for citizenship before he was 18 years of age. He took out his first papers when he was 17 years old. He will be required to file a new application. Samuel Philan was refused his final papers on account of conflicting statements made about his arrival in America.
Citizenship papers were granted to the following:
Christian Floeur, Gustave Anderson, Johann Wallstrom, Frederick Magseth, Samuel Bert, Carl W. Foster, Henry Wolfe, Abraham Lieharn, Robert Isler, Mathias Stroms, John Struznik, John Strong and Richard Macken.

CHARGED WITH FRAUD

Julian Hawthorne, journalist, promoter and son of Nathaniel Hawthorne, the famous novelist, who, with four other prominent men, has been arrested by the federal government on indictments, charging them with using the mails to defraud innocent investors by the sale of mining stocks. According to the federal authorities, the frauds amount to between $2,000,000 and $4,000,000.

THE COMMONER CALLS FOR STATE STRAW VOTE

(United Press Leased Wire.)
Lincoln, Neb., Jan. 20.—A request to all Democratic editors in Nebraska to conduct a two weeks' straw vote on the Democratic presidential candidates was mailed here today from the office of The Commoner, William J. Bryan's publication. In the letter to the editors, The Commoner announced that it will not participate in the vote, but merely publish the result.
The letter also calls attention to the fact that several candidates are in the field and also to the importance of the crystallizing of sentiment in favor of one. Later the letter said, William J. Bryan will confer with the editors regarding the several candidates.

WICKERSHAM ASKS HARVESTER TRUST QUIZ BE DELAYED

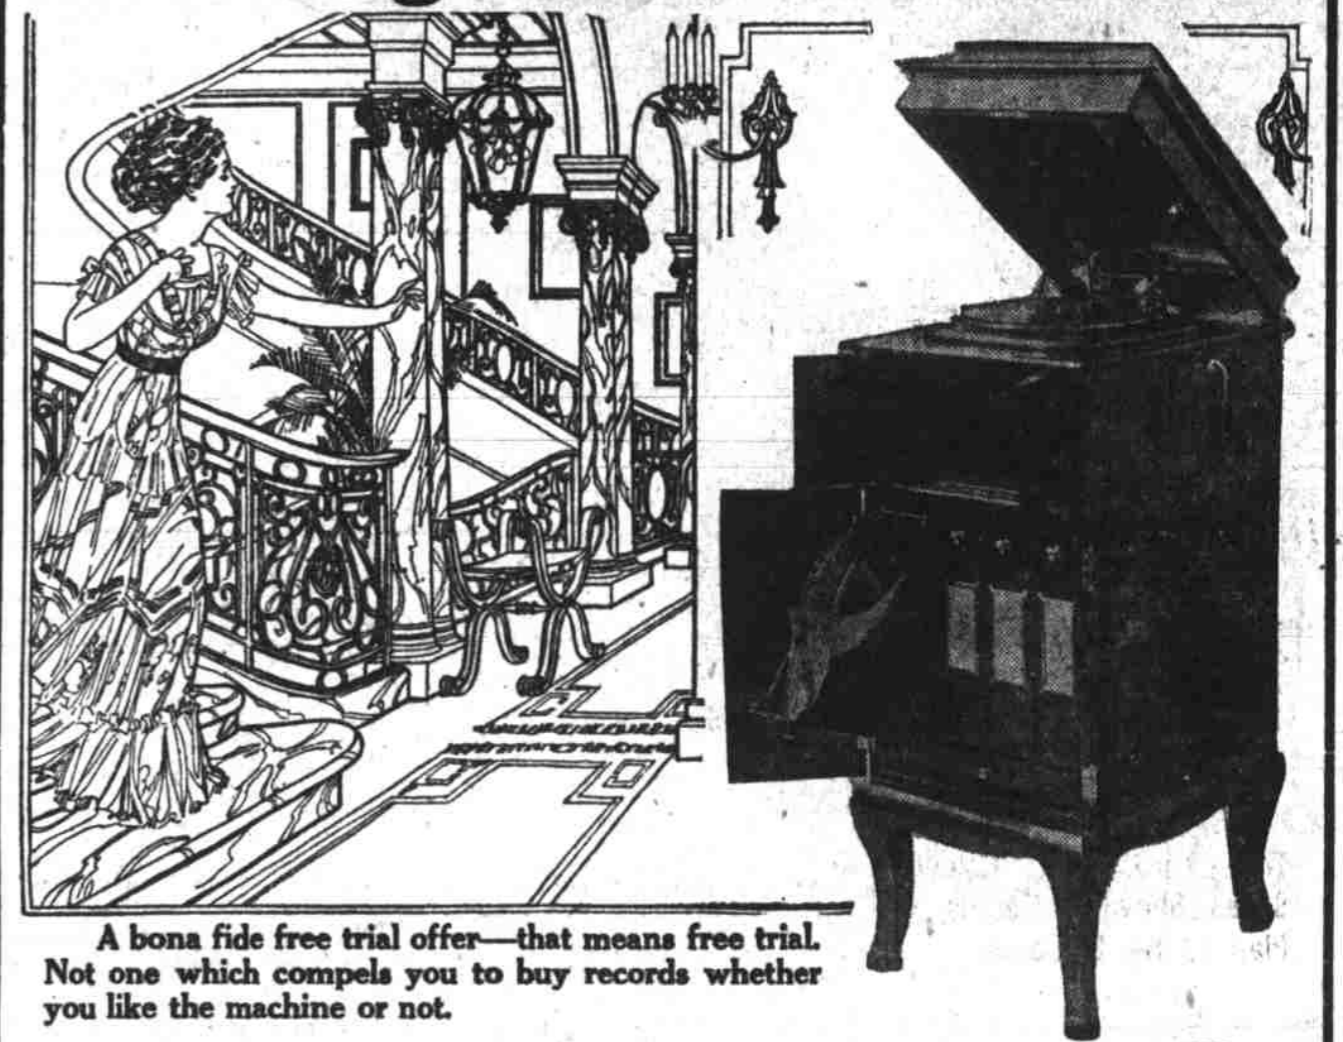

Attorney General Says Department of Justice Preparing to Dissolve Corporation Unless It Reorganizes.

(By the International News Service.)
Washington, Jan. 20.—At a secret session of the rules committee of the house today, Attorney General Wickersham and Secretary Nagel talked of the harvester trust and the shipping trust, for the investigation of which resolutions are now before the committee. The two cabinet officers favored an inquiry into the shipping combine, but it is understood the attorney general suggested the committee delay the Harvester trust investigation as the department of justice is preparing to dissolve the trust unless it reorganizes.

BUYS SITE FOR NEW LAUNDRY ON EAST SIDE

As a site for a new and up to date laundry, R. B. McClung closed a deal last week for the purchase of 125 by 200 feet extending through the center of the block bounded by East Irving and East Gilsan, East Third streets and Union avenue, frontage of the parcel. Mr. McClung contemplates leaving for the east in a short time for the purpose of getting new ideas on laundry construction and equipment. While in the east he will buy the necessary machinery for the new plant.

The incorporators are George Kaboth, John Mattson and C. G. Palmer. The capital stock is $2000, divided into shares of $100 each.

Splendid Combination Talking Machine Offers

A bona fide free trial offer—that means free trial. Not one which compels you to buy records whether you like the machine or not.

A 1912 Special Combination Offer

Now on Display at Eilers Music House

According to a frequently expressed desire on the part of many talking machine enthusiasts, we have now succeeded in securing from the makers a Talking Machine which we can offer, including a large number of most desirable records and two packages of the latest fiber needles, also four packages of the regulation steel needles, and the new $2 fiber needle sharpening machine, by means of which the fiber needles can be trimmed and made new again—all for $196 and on payments of $28 cash and $12 a month; no interest if paid for in full in one year. Three days' free trial if you like.

We have secured a machine which in finish exceeds anything made heretofore—its tone-reproducing capacity could not be surpassed. It has identically the same motor, the tone arm, the sound-reproducer found in certain $200 machines. Perhaps the sound-chamber is even better than in any other.

A most remarkable list of records is included in the price, $196. Caruso will supply two, one by Melba, one by Tetrazzini, one duet by Gogorza and Eames, two selections by Mary Garden, two by Alice Nielsen, two by David Bispham, two by Olive Fremstad, one by Maud Powell, the violinist; one by Fritz Kreisler, one by Harry Lauder; the Sextet and a selection from Lucia, the Rigoleto Quartet, twenty-five popular selections and four of the latest dance selections. If our selection does not meet your desires you are also at liberty to choose your own selections.

As stated above, we also include, besides these 48 selections, a liberal quantity of fiber needles and a lot of steel needles, and also the new wonder, the fiber needle cutter, which will trim your old fiber needles and make them new again. And the price! $196 cash or $28 now and $12 a month; no interest if paid for in one year. Three days' free trial. Telephone us to send this out, if you cannot conveniently call at Talking Machine Headquarters, Eilers Music House. All the makes of talking machines and all the records all the time. Eilers Building, Alder street at Seventh.
