

DR. HAZARD WILL GO ON STAND TO SHOW THEM UP

"My Move Now in Their Game," Says Fast Specialist, Whose First Witness Boosts Strongly for Her.

(Special to The Journal.) Portland, Wash., Jan. 27.—Speculation to whether Dr. Linda Hazard, on trial on a first degree murder charge, for having starved Claire Williamson to death, would testify, was dispelled this afternoon, when Mrs. Hazard unreservedly stated she would "get on the stand and show up that bunch."

"That bunch" is interpreted to be C. E. Lucian, Agassiz, the British vice consul, and the relatives of the dead girl, at whose instigation the investigation was begun which resulted in the arrest.

"Then you are going to take the witness stand, are you?" she asked.

"You bet your life I'm going to," she replied.

Miss Nellie E. Sherman, who took the stand for the defendant, this morning, was still under direct examination, when court adjourned at 3 o'clock this afternoon.

Other Side of the Story. Every material portion of the testimony given by Dorothea, sister of the deceased girl, was absolutely contradicted by Miss Sherman.

Says Girls Never Complained. She denied the statement of Miss Cameron, who testified that Miss Sherman had called her attention to the fact that by pressing upon the abdomen of the Williamson girls their daily bath, other than to carry the water, Dorothea Williamson had previously testified to an active part that Frank Lilly took in the task of bathing the girls.

LAWYERS CHARGE EACH OTHER WITH PROLONGING TRIAL

hinge on the testimony Morris was expected to give. He is needed to give direct evidence of the conspiracy alleged to have existed between Wilde and himself in consummating the telephone deal.

Each side now charges the other with killing time and needlessly prolonging the hours consumed in court. Dan J. Malarkey, chief counsel for Wilde, says Special Prosecutor Clark and Fitzgerald are "stalling" to gain time for the deal.

After spending over a day and a half in the witness chair, Frank H. Stow was finally excused yesterday afternoon. It was through Stow that Wilde's intimate letters to Morris prior to the bank deal were introduced, and through him that Wilde was presented to the jury in the light of having deceived his associates in the Union Telephone Construction company as to the proceeds of the deal.

Traded Bonds for Houses.

W. A. Currie, of 532 Elizabeth street, was the most interesting witness of the afternoon, he being the first of the witnesses to show what Morris did with the $40,000 in bonds. Currie said that in March, 1907, Morris gave him four Tacoma telephone bonds of $1000 each to dispose of, he being a broker.

The second block of four bonds, Currie stated, was traded to W. E. Howard for a house and two lots at 1209 East Main street.

Florence Adams, stenographer in the Oregon Trust & Savings bank, The state alleges she was a "dummy" to cover up the transactions, and that S. A. Reed served the same purpose. Reed was a treasurer of the telephone construction company, and was declared by Special Prosecutor Clark in his opening statement to be a "handy man" for Wilde.

It has not yet clearly appeared why Morris was satisfied to take $40,000 in Tacoma bonds, instead of cash in return for the bonds, or the proceeds of deposit coming from the bond purchase. One theory is that it was easier to cover up the transaction by taking bonds, as the sudden increasing of Morris' account by $40,000, when before his account consisted of an overdraft, might have excited suspicion. The means adopted in disposing of the bonds by a devious system of transfers is alleged to bear out the theory of precaution to conceal what had been done.

Bookkeeper Takes Vacation. George M. Frost was called and produced the four bonds he received in exchange for his house and lot. The bonds, with interest coupons attached, were passed to the jury box and carefully inspected by the jurors.

Adolf Schulz, chief bookkeeper of the Oregon Trust, was called to identify the telephone bond accounts and general bond and warrant accounts. He identified a credit slip for $10,000 in the handwriting of George Estes, head of the bank's bond department, which was his authority for entering the sale of $40,000 in Tacoma bonds. These entries are used to trace the bonds taken over by Morris.

W. D. Fenton testified briefly, explaining that he had temporary custody of the bonds alleged to have been embezzled by Morris. This was a link in the evidence tracing the history of the bonds.

Believes Signatures Spurious.

One of the features of yesterday was the effort of the defense to introduce a letter signed with the name of F. F. Graves, president of the Union Telephone Construction company, in which strong endorsement is given Wilde and the opinion expressed that Wilde does not owe either Stow or Graves on account of the bond deal.

Later on the state will press for the admission of this letter, which is claimed to be genuine. The signature gives appearance of having been written by an infirm hand, which the defense alleges is due to sickness and age. Stow, comparing the signature with an identical signature of four years earlier date, said he did not think they were the same.

In this connection Stow added a new nickname. He said that Graves frequently complained of being sick, and achieved the nickname of "Sickness" among his associates.

Another feature of Stow's testimony was the position into which he was driven on a cross-examination in regard to his claim against Wilde for $15,000 as a division of profits on the telephone deal with the Oregon Trust. Stow said he did not think this money if it is proved that Wilde embezzled it from the bank if not embezzled, he wants it and intends to sue for it.

He admitted he had made demand on Wilde for the money after Wilde had been indicted and after he had signed an affidavit to assist in the extradition of the defendant from California. The defense endeavored to show by cross-examination that Stow is largely responsible for the criminal prosecution of Wilde, and that his efforts to have Wilde indicted came to a head after Wilde refused to "dig up."

Wilde's Letters Submitted.

The extensive collection of letters from Wilde was added to by the production of his "not a cent for tribute" missive, written last May, in which he intimates that Stow tried to hold him up for $10,000.

In this letter Wilde refers sarcastically to Stow's alleged waste of money in the preliminary work of the construction company at Denver and Omaha, enumerates a number of stockholders, who, he says, are willing to contribute to show "who is who," and proceeds:

"Yes, I said those bonds and made my commission honestly and fairly, and what is more, am going to keep same; I have no desire to divide or contribute fair gains against or with ill gains. Your secret trip to San Diego with overtures for $10,000 and rank statement connected with it put me more wise to you, and I began immediately an investigation of considerable thoroughness.

"Nothing could overshadow your ingenious and virtuous career in particular localities. Mr. Irwin, our vice president, U. S. Grant, those banks I visited in San Diego and Los Angeles in the past few days, holders of the Denver Construction company and Omaha bonds are keen for a showdown, since seeing your recent letter, and you won't have any trouble whatever in getting in the limelight and an opportunity to unravel the mess you and yours created so artistically, and thus place the responsibility of the rotten corporation right where it belongs. Your tissue paper house better be boarded up and I advise you to go right to work. Don't worry about me. If I am in bad anywhere it naturally will come out in the wash.

Jury Sees Show.

"Yours and fifty thousand for investigation, but not a nickel dead or alive for tribute."

"P. S.—The awful story of findings of the dissipation and willful waste at Denver and Omaha of the innocent investors and stockholders' money, this letter forbids me to incorporate. And your gratitude is a lively appreciation of favors to come."

Last night the jury received permission from Judge Kavanaugh to attend a theatrical performance, and today, in charge of the bailiff, has permission to take a car ride. Jurymen will also be permitted to receive visits from members of their families at their hotel.

"Liar" was passed for the first time during the session yesterday, when Deputy District Attorney Fitzgerald hurled defiance at Malarkey. The latter had charged there was a "frame-up" and declared that Special Prosecutor Clark is "running" the office of the district attorney. Fitzgerald said this was a lie. Judge Kavanaugh calmed the attorneys and threatened them with a fine if they stage another scene of the same character.

SENATE KILLS TAX COMMISSION BILL. SESSION NEAR END

Revenue Bill Passed, However, Which Will Give Some Relief From Taxation Woes If Hawley Signs It.

(Special to The Journal.)

Boise, Idaho, Jan. 27.—Although the Idaho legislature did not conclude its work and adjourn tonight as had been planned, there remain but a few details in the way of supplementary legislation before the adjournment early in the week.

While a revenue bill has been passed and is in the hands of Governor Hawley, the legislature has not accomplished what was designed by the governor when he issued his call for the special session. Many of the features of the bills prepared by the special revenue commission have been incorporated in the measure which has been passed by both the house and the senate.

In the last effort to secure passage of the bill providing for the creation of a state tax commission, Governor Hawley last night telegraphed to the governors of practically all states which have such commissions, asking for expressions on their value. Twelve answers were received and every one endorsed the tax commission idea. In spite of this, the senate defeated the measure after it had been passed by the house.

The revenue bill as enacted provides for valuation at full cash value but taxation at only 40 per cent of such valuation. Other provisions of the bill contain the following: Payment of taxes, twice a year. The numerical system of listing lands upon the tax rolls.

Exemptions as before except that private libraries are exempt to the value of $400 only.

Homes are exempt to the value of $200 only where the total value of the home property does not exceed $1000. Personal notices required before tax deeds can be issued.

ROBBERS HOLD COUPLE PRISONERS IN BEDROOM

Los Angeles, Jan. 27.—After gagging and locking them in the bedroom of their apartments, two robbers ransacked the place and escaped with $25 in coin, clothing worth $50, and a key to a safety deposit box containing $4000 in cash, according to Gagnon's report today to the police. The men leaped upon the couple after they had returned from the theatre. Both were masked.

TOY TOY IS BACK AT THE OLD TEEPEE

Murderer of Anna Edna, a "Witch," Wanders Streets of Pendleton Again.

(Special to The Journal.)

Pendleton, Jan. 27.—Toy Toy, who with Columbia George, murdered Anna Edna, a squaw whom they believed to be a witch responsible for misfortunes that had visited them, is back in Pendleton today for the first time in 12 years. Following his pardon Thursday by President Taft, he left the federal prison on McNell's island and came straight to Pendleton, arriving here last night.

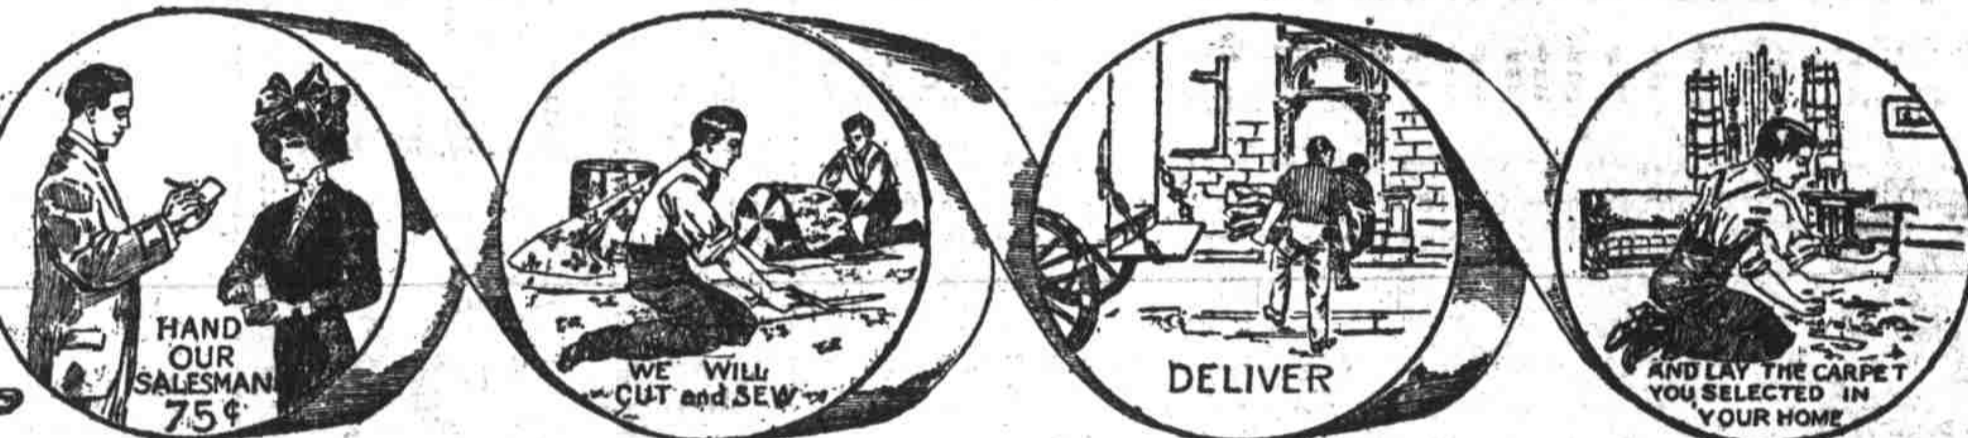

It was in 1899 that Toy Toy and Columbia George gave Anna Edna a bottle of whiskey containing a quantity of strychnine. They were arrested, tried in the state court and both sentenced to life imprisonment in the penitentiary. After serving six years, their attorneys appealed the case on the ground that the state court had no jurisdiction, the appeal was upheld and the Indians were liberated, only to be tried in the federal court and again convicted. They were then sent to McNell's island.

Columbia George was pardoned two years ago, but Toy Toy was kept imprisoned until Thursday because he was a relative of the murdered woman and because the evidence showed that he had enlisted his confederate's services in the crime.
