Mrs. Longworth Wears Glass Heels.

It is to be hoped that Colonel Roosevelt does not feel that he has "cornered" the sensation market, for his family, for there is one, no less than his daughter, who has created a new ripple of her own. Mrs. Nicholas Longworth, who was Miss Alice Roosevelt, and not long ago the daughter of the White House, is wearing glass heels on her slippers. The discovery was made at a ball where Mrs. Longworth appeared in a filmy creation with tulle shoulder wings which caused a gasp of admiration and envy among her less original friends when she appeared upon the ball room floor. The dress was fashioned with a train, which parted as she danced and there were two glistening glass heels, which winked and scintillated in the dainty movements of the dance, as Cinderella's must have done when she danced with the prince in the old story.

Let fads flourish while they may for suffrage is undeniably gaining ground, and with the coming of equal rights will come the downfall of "freak dressing," declared Miss Ethel M. Arnold, of London, niece of Matthew Arnold, in her recent New York lecture on "The Citizenship of Women."

She went on to say: "The life of the average well-to-do woman is deplorably empty. She sits in her time with bridge whist and by adorning and disadorned herself in fantastic clothes. I believe that when woman gets the ballot and has a personal interest in civic affairs she will rise up in indignation at the dressmakers who are at present adorning us with clothes that make the angels weep loud and long. When women once set their hands to a thing they are more deadly than the male of the species," continued the lecturer. "Whenever I found a town well paved, well lighted, aglow with civic pride in my travels from the Atlantic to the Pacific I found that that town was the happy partner of a vigorous and flourishing women's club."

Engagement Announced.

Mr. and Mrs. D. M. Watson have made known the betrothal of their daughter, Delta M., to Donald Spencer, of Everett, Wash., the wedding to be an event of April. Miss Watson is a Portland Academy girl, who has spent two and a half years in study abroad. She is a member of the P. E. O. sorority and an accomplished musician, prominently identified with the musical circles. Mr. Spencer is the son of Dr. and Mrs. J. C. Spencer, of San Francisco. He is a Phi Delta Theta man of the University of California. Mr. Spencer spent a couple of years in Portland several years ago, when he was a member of the University club. He is at present in Everett, Wash., where he is manager of the H. M. Byllesby firm of electrical and gas engineers of Chicago.

Informal Complaint.

Mrs. Henry Frank asked a few friends of Miss Mayme West, whose wedding will take place tomorrow, to play bridge informally in her honor Friday.

Farewell Affair.

Mrs. Ernest Patton, Walt is entertaining tomorrow for Mrs. Charles Burkhardt, who in company with her mother and sister, Mrs. Williams and Miss Mabel Williams, is leaving the last of the week for a visit in California.

Century Club Dances.

This evening the Century club will begin a second series of dances to be held in Christensen's hall. The first series proved a great social success and indications are that the second will be equally popular.

Engagement Made Known.

Mr. and Mrs. Louis Dans have announced the engagement of their daughter, Lillian, to Sol Lubliner, of Portland. The wedding will take place in the near future.

Japanese Social.

The Young People's Fraternity of the Unitarian church gave a Japanese social on Friday evening in the church parlors. The subject of study taken up by the Fraternity this year is "Japan and Japanese Life." The rooms were elaborately decorated with Japanese lanterns and American and Japanese flags. Tea and ice cakes were a feature of the refreshment. A short program was rendered and appropriate games were indulged in. The Fraternity expects to give a social each month.

Random Notes.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert W. Wilson are from their visit in southern California, where Mrs. Wilson was showered with many social courtesies.

Dr. and Mrs. James Withycombe and Miss Mabel Withycombe, of Corvallis, passed Friday and Saturday in Portland. Dr. Withycombe and his daughter had just returned from a trip to British Columbia.

Mrs. George H. Hill, accompanied by Mrs. Beatrice Gadsby and her little son, Jack, are sojourning in Los Angeles. They will soon visit friends in San Diego and there go to Santa Barbara for a stay of six months.

H. C. Wortman has been a guest at the Wolcott in New York for a few days.

NEW ROSE NAMED FOR PORTLAND—ROSE CITY

Portland's fame as a city of roses will not only be perpetuated in the future by its own glorious blossoms but by a new rose, "Souvenir of Portland, Oregon," for which Hugh Dickson, of the Royal Nurseries, Belfast, Ireland, is responsible.

Mr. Dickson created the rose and showed it for the first time at the rose show held July 7, 1911, in the Royal Botanical Gardens, Regent Park, London, by the National Rose society. The first word of it came to Mrs. A. C. Canton from Miss Failing, who saw the rose, which is red and similar to the Richmond. Miss Failing considered the Souvenir of Portland, Oregon, inferior to the Richmond, but Mr. Dickson wrote Mrs. Canton concerning it, saying that although roses were not generally good in England last year the specimen he exhibited was not good, yet he held the new rose superior to the Richmond. The Richmond seldom comes true, as it almost always is marred with a white spot, which the new rose lacks.

New Hats Sensible

Coming Season's Millinery Is Extremely Kind to Elderly Women.

Written for The Journal by Elizabeth Lee.

Even the most conservative of middle aged and elderly women must agree the spring millinery, so far as sensible hats are concerned, is quite practical. In fact, this class may be said to be actually favored—a most unusual condition of affairs.

The crown this year are rather high, generally—for the shapes are those best suited to women past their youth, while the choice in trimmings has been equally happy.

The English walking hat and its modifications are among the new models. This is a shape that not only carries a good deal of style but is also universally becoming.

One rule to remember when buying a hat is that the edge of the crown must extend beyond the broadest part of the face. Some faces are just flat, others show high cheek bones, and rather wedge like in shape, while there are others exactly opposite. The jaw being the broadest part of the face no matter where the wide point happens to be the brim of the hat must extend beyond it, otherwise the defect will be brought into greater prominence than ever.

So many women who have broad faces make the mistake of buying a narrow toque. This shape looks very pretty in the hand, so the owner is often much disappointed with the result of the hat upon the head. The reason for this is because the hat is too narrow for the face underneath it.

A second model I consider very smart. The crown is a modified beehive shape, the brim rather narrow and quite straight all the way around. This is a hat which will suit the up-to-date woman, who has no desire to proclaim her age by wearing passe styles. It is youthful looking, at the same time in perfect taste even worn by a woman of 60.

The trimmings of wired wings of lace remind me there is nothing new after all. Seeing a hat trimmed with wings of baby Irish recalled to my memory an instance that occurred many years ago, in fact, when we all wore bonnets. I found a baby Irish lace collar of my mother's that had been put away because out of fashion. It was about six inches wide and I cut it into five bands. These were wired and placed in the fourth I gathered, and so formed wings.

These were the sole decorations of a black velvet bonnet, and very proud I was of it. Fancy a black velvet bonnet trimmed with white lace wings tied under the chin of a girl of perhaps 20! It was regarded by my friends as a somewhat erratic proceeding to cut up a collar to trim a bonnet. A collar in those days was a collar. How times have changed, to be sure! A bit of decoration nowadays may be used with equal propriety on slippers or millinery. Just which article of apparel needed it at the time would decide the question.

To go back to our millinery, really the soft looking czin hats, both in black and white, trimmed with stiff lace wings and a little velvet, are charming, and what a delightful way of using up the odds of lace that are sure to be stored away somewhere.

Recipe for Weak Kidneys

The following recipe is the best that can be had for weak or disordered kidneys: "Half ounce fluid extract Buchu; half ounce Murax compound; six ounces good pure gin. Shake the bottle well each time and take one or two teaspoonfuls of the mixture after each meal and at bed time." Any druggist will mix or supply these ingredients.

The foregoing formula comes from high medical authority and will produce quick and permanent results. It will speedily relieve backache, rheumatic pains, frequent and highly colored urination. These symptoms of kidney trouble must have prompt attention to prevent Bright's disease or diabetes.

St. Paul's declaration is that the word of God may be fully furnished. (II Tim. iii:17.) His further suggestion is that we "rightly divide the word of truth," as well as it is able to make us wise unto salvation. Let us follow this course and allow God's word to be its own interpreter—allow one passage to throw light upon another; and let us reject none of the divine testimony.

Some, repudiating the creeds of the past as no longer tenable, fault the Bible with being the basis for those creeds and throw it away with the creeds. These are becoming agnostics, higher critics, evolutionists, spiritualists, etc., and because of their worldly wisdom and social standing these higher critics are rapidly undermining all faith in the Bible as an inspired message from God to his people. They are adrift, some sailing in one direction and some in another—they have lost their chart of ages and the great compass of divine truth in the depths of the sea of human wisdom, which, from the divine standpoint, is declared to be foolishness. Let us not take their course.

St. Paul, on the contrary, declares that the difficulty with the creeds of the past has been that they divided up the word of God amongst them, and that each creed has a certain amount of gold as well as a large accumulation of dross. It would be too serious an undertaking for finites to put all the creeds into a crucible and separate the gold from the dross. Let us take the easier, the simpler method, to which all Christian people should be willing to accede, namely, to wholly cast aside our creeds and go back to the word of God—to the Bible—to the utterances of Jesus and his apostles and prophets. Thus doing, many will find to their surprise that, while the creeds have gathered precious jewels of truth from the Bible, they have given these false settings by which they misrepresent the truth which they profess to illuminate.

St. Paul's declaration is that the word of God may be fully furnished. (II Tim. iii:17.) His further suggestion is that we "rightly divide the word of truth," as well as it is able to make us wise unto salvation. Let us follow this course and allow God's word to be its own interpreter—allow one passage to throw light upon another; and let us reject none of the divine testimony.

THE GIRL IN LOVE

Written for The Journal by Darrs More. HE is 30 and she is 32. And her parents, her friends and everybody else she knows are trying to prevent the marriage. He is a divorced man and he used to be on the stage and his ex-wife says perfectly dreadful things about him, and he's, oh, so much older than she is, and nobody really knows how he makes his money now, though they admit that he always has plenty of it, and he wears purple clothes and keeps a bulldog. Those are some of the things "they say" about the man that the little girl is in love with. Those are the things that "they" din into her ears morning, noon and night.

But the girl is very obstinate. So unusual in little girls that are in love, isn't it? She declares that she will marry the man she loves though the heavens fall. Has she investigated any of these insinuations, you ask? Oh, dear, no. Didn't I tell you that she is in love with the man. She just talks it all over with the man and he settles all doubts. He is able to tell her everything that she desires to know.

The mother says the wedding can't be at home, so I suppose it will eventually be one of those justice-of-the-peace affairs. Father says he's through with the girl forever, that he doesn't care what happens, just as long as the girl doesn't bring the man home to live. Sister says she has always known that the girl would come to "some bad end."

And, the friends! Well, when the girl's own family can so far forget themselves, just picture to yourself the scarlet and purple tid-bits that are being rolled round under the tongues of the vast world of friends.

Rather hard on the girl, isn't it? For, those friends and relatives are doing every known thing to hasten her marriage to the man. In such cases, a girl has neither sense nor judgment. She is bound to do just the thing that nobody wants her to do. And, the blacker they paint the reputation of her future husband, the wilder will she be to marry him. There are girls you know who think it extremely romantic for a man to be sent to prison for arson and murder. And, as to the mere matter of a divorce in his family, a little curious speculation as to where his money comes from, and the race track gamblers—they are but the subtle trimmings that may have served to interest her in this man-of-all-men. They are the rainbow tints that have fed the flame of her dream.

The very best way I know to stop a wedding is to invite the man that you don't want your daughter to marry to spend a couple of weeks as a guest in the house. Be kind to him, more than kind. Dissertate at length upon his goodness, his charmingly-cut and beautifully colored raiment; make much of how good he was to his former wife, and how nice it will be to have such a man in the family. Hold him up to daughter's eyes as the pink of perfection according to the matrimonial diagram. Give the young lady all she wants of the man. Throw him at her head 37 times a day. And, in some way, manage to make him appear ridiculous before her. You must not be the agent, of course; it must come from other hands. Let her see others laughing at him.

But, if you really want the girl to marry the man, just continue in the tactics that you are employing. The more you fume and foam, the more she will love him. The more the world slurs his name, the faster she will fly to his bosom. It's always the way. Little girls have absolutely no sense when they are in love. They are not to be treated as human beings, but, as curiosities. It takes parents of great foresight and mental acumen to cure them of their obsession.

WOMAN WITHOUT NAME HELD, ROBBERY SUSPECT

(United Press Licensed Wire.) Los Angeles, Jan. 29.—A woman who persistently refuses to tell her name is held today by the police, suspected of knowing much about the robbery of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Gagnon, who were bound and gagged in their own home.

The woman was arrested with a man giving the name of Frank McPherson. The police declare they found articles valued at several hundred dollars, known to have been taken from the Gagnon home, in their apartments.

McPherson says he came here from Vancouver and Seattle. Among the woman's effects were many letters addressed to Jean Jackson.

Orators Win Honors.

(Special to The Journal.) Pacific University, Forest Grove, Or., Jan. 29.—In the annual oratorical try-out to select an orator to represent the college in the state intercollegiate contest, four aspirants took part. E. D. Clapp, in his oration entitled, "The Practice of Peace," won second place. The winning oration was given by Marion Taylor, whose topic was "Our Nation is to Be." Taylor will represent the school in the final contest, which is to be held at Forest Grove. Eight colleges of Oregon are in the league.

CLEVER "STUNTS" GIVEN BY WOMEN

College Girls at Waldo Hall Entertain in Most Unique Fashion.

(Special to The Journal.)

Oregon Agricultural College, Corvallis, Jan. 29.—To the credit of the Misses Ellen Canfield and Bertha Dishon of Hermiston belongs much of the success of the clever "stunt" night in Waldo hall, the girls' dormitory at the Oregon Agricultural college, Friday night. They planned the affair and superintended it, clad in gowns made entirely of tissue rose petals, one red and one pink.

At the close of the study hour, half an hour before the lights blinked for bed time, the girls stole down to the parlor, and there gave the performance as a surprise to Dean Crayne. The first number was a selection by the "comb band," composed of the Misses Mildred and Lois Wilson and Edith Shaw of Salem and Grace Waddle of Long Beach, Cal. "Blue Beard's Wives," in the persons of the Misses Frances Cook of Shaniko, Lois Wilson, Dorothy Steunloff and Jessie Harritt, all of Salem, hung by their hair on the wall, a black curtain giving a gruesomely beheaded effect.

The Trained Monkey.

One of the most amusing numbers was the "Monkey and His Master." Miss Helen McGuire of Portland being the comic little simian and Grace Hobbs of Eugene her musician master, who played on a Jew's harp. A thrilling tight rope performance was given by Miss Clara Pierce of La Grande, and other thrills were furnished by June Gray of Eugene, who was "June, the Snake Changer."

Perhaps the most intense excitement was the "eyebrow juggling and hair balancing" by Miss Ursula Beck of Aurora, who selected choice hairs from the brows of her friends and did acrobatic stunts with them and with a long bright thread from Mrs. Crayne's shoulder.

Pretty Dances.

The program closed with two character numbers, a snake-dance by Miss Hopkins, usually known as Miss Sylvia Jensen of Logan, Utah, and a "piece" by Little Johnny Jones, alias Miss Lydia Harris of Contra Vista, Cal. Twelve young women took part in the program, which entertained the Utopian

Not So Pleasant.

ENVY the wild animal which, hunted for its fur, was lured into a trap and skinned to make a coat for her. I thought, "It must have been a joy to yield its fluffy skin To smuggle her so safe and warm and wrap her closely in." How glad, how more than glad—indeed, it would have died of grief!

I envied, too, the happy lynx from which her muff was wrought, when she, too, her hands warm—ah, indeed, that was a pleasant thought! There was the silk-worm which had spun the silk to make her hose. And the glad sheep whose broad back grew the wool to make her clothes!

To live for her were joy, but who would not give up his breath For her, just to be with her, giving comfort after death?

I thought these things devotedly, but my lips were dumb. I thought her far above me. Say, but that was loving me.

I met an aged man last night, A worried man he had; I was surprised and glad, indeed, to learn he was her dad. His coat was shabby at the edge and shiny were its seams. He showed a two days' growth of beard, Shaniko, Lois Wilson, Dorothy Steunloff and Jessie Harritt, all of Salem, hung by their hair on the wall, a black curtain giving a gruesomely beheaded effect.

At last he said: "I'd like to treat, but have no cash to spare; My daughter keeps me skinned to buy the things she wants to wear!"

Literary society at the Oregon Agricultural college. Piano solos were given by Misses Mildred Soden, Portland, and Ella Hansen, The Dalles. A vocal solo was contributed by Miss Gertrude Me-Be of Corvallis. Clara Wolke, Grants Pass, gave a reading; and Mabel Huff, Corvallis, a recitation. A review of the Utopian society was given by Miss Opal Wasson, Corvallis, and Miss Opal Daley, Medford. The chief "stunt" was furnished by the Misses Germonde Ketchum, Portland; Ada Cassels and Esther Hall, South Bend, Wash.; Annabelle Callison, Aberdeen, Wash., and Cordelia Goffe, Central Point.

The Investigations of Foreign Missions

Singapore, Jan. 28.—Pastor Russell's text for today was, "Of a truth I perceive that God is no respecter of persons, but in every nation he that fears him and worketh righteousness is accepted of him" (Acts x, 34, 35). A report from this address follows:

Never before have I seen so cosmopolitan a city as Singapore. The swarms of Chinese, Malays, Siamese, Cinghalese, Burmese, Afghans, Madras, and many other nationalities are here interspersed by representatives of practically every nation in the world. Here, too, New York city must in my mind take second place as respects cosmopolitan population. The sight of these commingled peoples, only a few of whom know of, worship or in any wise acknowledge "the only true God and Jesus Christ whom he hath sent," stirs my heart and my head as well. My head inquires respecting God's provision for the three fourths of humanity who have never heard of him and the salvation which he has provided in Christ.

We recognize the clear statements of the apostle that "Without faith it is impossible to please God" (Heb. xi, 6); and "How shall they believe in him of whom they have not heard" (Rom. x, 14) and also the commission: "This gospel of the kingdom shall be preached in all the world for a witness and then shall the end come." (Matt. xxiv, 14.) Properly enough, we ask, what kind of an end is coming and what will it mean to the 1200 millions who know not God and to the thousands of millions of their ancestors similarly ignorant of him?

Tried and Found Wanting.

A considerable class of very good people by their creeds tell us that if God had foreordained the heathen to salvation he would have seen to it that the gospel should have been preached to them; and that their not hearing the gospel signifies that God "passed them on" as "non-elect;" that the "elect" are to be found only amongst those who have been favored of God and who accept that favor and are "sanctified by the truth" and "made meet for the inheritance of the saints in light"—Col. i, 12.

Another class of people by their creeds, which no longer truly represent them, tell us that they believe as above, only that they add another condition, namely, that "the elect" in order to be of the "elect," must be brought to a knowledge of water baptism—complete immersion, and must obey this teaching.

Another theory held denies that there is any "election" in respect to the matter, and denies that any particular amount of water is necessary, although it does
