

McGOWAN DENIES HE PERJURED SELF TO PROTECT HINES

Witness Contradicts Testimony of Detective With Whom He Went on Hunting Trips Into Wilds.

(United Press Leased Wire.)
Washington, Feb. 7.—Contradiction of charges made before the senate committee investigating the election of Senator William E. Lorimer of Illinois by A. J. Bailey, a Burns detective, to the effect that he had perjured himself at a former hearing, was made to the committee here today by Charles McGowan of Toronto, Ont.

McGowan, although admitting that he met the detective in Regina, Sask., and that they went on numerous hunting and fishing trips together, was vehement in his denial that he had perjured himself at any time.

McGowan was said to have been in a smoking car between Chicago and Milwaukee when Edward H. Hines, a Chicago lumberman, is alleged to have made a statement that he had paid a slush fund of $100,000 to "put Lorimer over." McGowan testified at the first investigation that he had been within earshot of Hines during the conversation, and that no such statement was made.

Operatives of the Burns detective agency, including Bailey, charged on the witness stand that McGowan was given $1500 to swear that Hines had made no reference to any jackpot in connection with Lorimer's election. Bailey told the investigating committee that he met McGowan at Regina; that they went hunting and fishing together and that McGowan had confessed to him that Hines did make the statement attributed to him in the smoking car and that he had been well paid for perjuring himself at the first investigation.

A plan to test the work of stenographer Sheridan in the Lorimer investigation has been devised. Eleven stenographers will assemble and take notes on a proceeding similar to the one in which Sheridan's notes were said to be "manufactured." Sheridan will again take the notes in the committee rooms, staged after the fashion of the hotel rooms at Toronto, where McGowan was alleged to have talked into a phonographic apparatus.

We are making preparations to organize in every state, believing that practically all of La Follette's following will flock to the Roosevelt banner when the campaign starts."

COLONEL ADMITS HE'S BEEN SAVING HIS AMMUNITION

ing they had a peculiar application to his own position now.

Roosevelt refused to discuss the significance of his talk to the reporters at this time, but evidently intended to give the impression that he is remaining silent as to his own program with the view of keeping ammunition from those he referred to as "the enemy."

Shows Lincoln Letter.
"This is a first class in applied decent politics," said Roosevelt when the newspaper men were lined up. "You have noticed, young gentlemen," he said, "that I have frequently told you that I had nothing to say for publication. But I want to read you the following letter, written by Lincoln in 1860, to C. F. McNeill:

"I have made this explanation to you as a friend; but with an explanation made to our enemies. What they want is a squabble and fuss. They can have it if we explain, and they cannot have it if we don't."

Colonel Roosevelt referred to criticisms of him because he had entertained prominent labor leaders at the White House, and read Lincoln's reply to a committee of the workmen's association of New York, defending labor. Then he referred to a letter from a letter written by Lincoln to G. B. Prentice in October, 1860, which said in part:

"Your suggestion that I write a letter setting out my conservative views and intentions is certainly worthy. But would it do any good? If I labored a month I could not express my conservative views and intentions more clearly, more strongly than has already been expressed in my speeches already printed and before the public. If what I have already said has failed to convince you, no repetition would convince you. I have had men to deal with, both north and south, who are eager for something new upon which to base misrepresentation; men who would like to frighten me or at least to fix upon me a reputation for timidity and cowardice. They would seize upon almost anything I should write as being 'an awful coming down.' I intend keeping an eye upon these gentlemen, and will not unnecessarily put weapons into their hands."
