NEWCOMERS NEED MORAL SUPPORT OF PEOPLE—GRAY

President of Hill Lines in the Northwest Sees Danger in Lack of Practical Information Among Farmers.

Oregon Agricultural College, Corvallis, Or., Feb. 10.—The moral responsibility of the citizens of Oregon, the railroads and the agricultural college toward the new settlers in the state was emphasized by President Carl R. Gray of the Oregon Electric railroad and Hill lines in Oregon, in a convocation address.

Conditions Have Changed.—"Thirty years ago a farmer had to raise enough for himself and one other person; today he must raise enough for himself and two others. We should see that this institution is amply supported, for in it are the very foundations of the whole state's prosperity.
