In the New York Evening World of January 22: "Two things marred the evening: the chatter of the audience throughout the performance and the stamper for the exits before the curtain falls. The standees behind the rail were less numerous than at any previous presentation of Puccini's latest work." The opera, in truth, was "The Girl of the Golden West." In this the World is mistaken for during the performance in Portland there was no chatter and the fall of the curtain was not preceded by a stamper. The production was given a very fair hearing and yet presentation of the production in the west might readily have provoked chatter. But the westerners were absorbed in the music.

The directors of the Toronto Symphony orchestra have asked the city council of Toronto to contribute $5000 a year toward the support of the organization. The loss borne by the directors during the season of 1916 and 1917 was $22,000, in spite of heavy attendance at the fortnightly concerts. The policy of the orchestra, as expressed through the conductor, Frank Weisman, is to establish the cause of good orchestral music by which such a grant would insure a public half way; that is, by answering as far as possible the popular preferences without sacrificing the high standards of the organization. The city council has agreed to consider the plan by which such a grant would insure a series of low priced concerts like those given at Sir Henry Wood's Queen's hall events in London.

The records by John McCormack, the great Irish tenor, are unmistakably the greatest of their kind yet issued. He is an artist of exceptional versatility, having received his vocal training in Italy and singing Italian like a native while, at the same time, there is no living tenor comparable to him in the singing of Irish songs.
