Events in Society

Miss Loomis to Leave. AFTER a visit of a month with her sister, Mrs. Antoine G. Labbe, Miss Evelyn Loomis will return this evening to her home at Shelburne Park, Wash. Numbers of delightful affairs have marked her stay. Miss Loomis had luncheon with Mrs. Isabella Gault today and Monday Miss Marjorie Hoffman was a dinner hostess for her.

Mrs. Herz Complimented. Miss Genevieve Thompson entertained with a small luncheon today at the Hotel Portland for the pleasure of Mrs. Heinrich Herz of Berlin, who is the guest of her mother, Mrs. C. A. Fackelmeier. After luncheon the party enjoyed the matinee performance of "Get Rich Quick Wallingford." Mrs. I. N. Lippman is giving a musicale, with Mrs. Delphine Marx as soloist, for Mrs. Herz tomorrow.

Affairs Planned. Mrs. F. D. Chamberlain, who will soon remove to Denver, is making the arrangements for a couple of affairs planned for this week. Friday Mrs. Charles Fremont Bunker will entertain at bridge for her as will also Mrs. Chester Deering on Saturday. Mrs. W. A. Hathaway has planned two bridge parties to be given next Wednesday and Thursday, and Friday of next week Mrs. M. A. M. Ashley will give a luncheon for her sister, Mrs. George H. Nottage, of Seattle.

Mr. and Mrs. Metzger Entertained. Miss Clara Strauss and Nathan Strauss of New York were the honored guests at a bridge given last evening by Mr. and Mrs. Henry W. Metzger. Eight tables were made up and prizes won by Mrs. F. M. Sellen and Mrs. Joseph L. Metzger. Oran Frank and Jonquilla were used in the decorations. Yesterday afternoon Miss Strauss was at home in her apartments in the Portland. She was assisted in receiving by Mrs. Marcus Fleischner and Mrs. Henry W. Metzger.

House Warming. An affair of interest for Friday is the Irvington club house warming. The event will mark the completion of the new annex, which has been erected temporarily for several years until the club can build a magnificent house now being planned. The wives of the social committee will be in the receiving line. They are Mrs. W. F. Woodward, Mrs. W. J. Hoffman, Mrs. Frank S. Fields, Mrs. Johnston Porter, Mrs. Andrew Porter, Mrs. A. L. Fish, Mrs. J. Horace Lockett, Mrs. W. E. McMenamin and Mrs. P. Mendenhall. Cards and dancing will be the diversion of the evening.

Like Other Girls. -By Darra More. Written for The Journal. HAVE a letter to a stenographer. It is a nice letter, too, and the writer must be a very nice girl. She is afraid that the impression you get from that stenographer is a queer sort, and she wants me to know that there are just like other girls. Why, of course, they are. Whoever, but some jealous-eyed wives or misguided Lathorates who seldom see any good in anything, ever thought differently? The stenographer is not some strange type of vampiric lady. She is not a girl with "fine hair" and "wonderful blue eyes." No! No! Just look about you in the lunch rooms at noon time or on the 8 o'clock car in the morning. She looks just like any other girl except that she is a little neater, a little more sensibly gowned and groomed, a little better mannered.

Business Girl's Dress

Becoming Attire on Present Day Salaries Often Taxes Ingenuity of Women to Obtain.

Written for The Journal by Elizabeth M. Lee.

A letter requesting suggestions for an outfit suitable for a business girl who also says, must dress neatly, but whose salary is only $15 a week, lies before me. She is employed in an office where she is required to meet persons doing business with her employer, so it is necessary she should always look well dressed. Probably there are thousands of young women in this city who are wrestling with the same problem. Some girls whose salaries range from $15 to $25 a week and who are expected to be decently clothed at the least. Of course, the amount to be spent for clothes must vary in each case, depending upon the sum required to meet other obligations. Some girls can enjoy the whole of their earnings. Others are the support (or partial) of relatives, and so on. However, a girl cannot get along a whole year going to business upon less than $150 a year. If she can afford $200 so much the better, but the former sum is imperative, if she would keep her position. The first expensive item on the list is the tailored suit. By watching for bargains a good, serviceable suit which would last for two years may be bought for $25. To save the wear of the suit a well made tweed skirt and a couple of blouses should be provided. One of the waists could be a pongee and the other a thin mouseline harmonizing with the color of the skirt. These silks will be no warmer than the wash waists suitable for office wear and with fresh neckwear will always look neat. Laundry expenses, too, will be lessened by wearing the silks, because any girl is equal to the task of getting up a pongee waist. Nine dollars will cover the cost of the two waists and $7 the skirt. A pretty lingerie blouse to wear with the suit for best will be $2.50. A dainty simple frock of cotton voile for warm days or for evening will take a $10 bill, and $25 will not be one penny too much for a best dress of chiffon taffeta. A long, thin coat may be termed a necessity, but $10 will cover for this garment must answer for cool days, traveling, and for evening. A dollar will cover the cost of the material for a negligee to be made at home. A petticoat of heatherbloom will be $2 and one of mouseline for best at $3.50 if bought at a bargain.

AMERICAN FASHIONS

It is an idea of one of the fashionable gown makers to drape the thin silks with the airy mousselines instead of the draping the transparency over the silk, and some of the results are peculiarly successful. In the sketch is shown one of his triumphs, white satin with turquoise chiffon. The satin skirt and the chiffon are gathered together at the top, where they are brought into the belt, then they are both drawn up a little low in front to be caught and held securely by a bow of black satin and white chiffon, that terminates the waist and swings down the front from the girdle. The girdle itself is of the same materials spread apart at the back, narrowing to the knot that is affected in front. The corsage with its kimono top is banded with lace, and the simple embroidery is done in gold thread with a single thread of black outlining the design.

Frocks of this ethereal type will be equally suitable for the summer outfit. China silk and the thin crepes are being used in a similar manner, and, as they are inexpensive as such gowns go, one can hardly have too many of them. Some unusual effects are arrived at by mounting, say, a China silk with thin mousseline or marquisette of one of the smoke shades, then superposing a bright colored chiffon over it. This is demonstrated in a frock that has gone forth in a southern trousseau. There was a narrow fourreau of rose-tinted silk veiled, not with a smoke shade as suggested, but with a black, then over it was hung a pale green mousseline banded with lace, the black and the rose transparencies taken in together in a little drapery that was held with a large pink satin rose, just above the hem. Small hand-run hooks and pleats are appearing on these "chiffons," as they will be greatly in evidence in the mulls and organdies later on, and there are excellent opportunities for utilizing narrow ribbons as well as the very wide velvet ribbons. Thus far comparatively few of the figured chiffons have been dealt with, but they are so lovely, both in their patterns and colorings that it is inevitable they will come into their own before the season is fairly started. One chiffon is in old blue, sprinkled profusely with wrigly white lines. It will be made up over white, with white satin used as a trimming, and it will have at least the charm of novelty.

CHURCH WOMEN WILL SELL SHAMROCK PINS

Women of the various parishes of the Catholic church of Portland will sell shamrock pins Saturday, March 16. This was announced yesterday afternoon at a meeting of 50 women representing the parishes, in the St. Mary's academy, when it was decided to set aside March 16 for Shamrock day, when 30 groups each containing 30 women, will have charge of the sale. The money derived from the sale of these pins, which will sell at 10 cents each, will be for the benefit of the girls' orphanage near Oswego, which is conducted by the Sisters of the Holy Names. Father O'Hara will supervise the work of selling the emblems. He will be assisted by the sister superior who had charge of the sales on the two previous Shamrock days. The women of other denominations are to be invited to assist the Catholic women in their work of raising money by the sale of pins. At the present time the institution near Oswego has 105 girls of Catholic and other faiths, who receive their education by the sisters' aid.

A Leap Year Dance

Unique Features Add to the Enjoyment of Occasions That Come Once in Four Years.

Written for The Journal by Florence Howe Hall.

It adds to the fun of the evening where some of the men wear a little feminine jewelry, such as a necklace or bracelet. Some may display a lace handkerchief, a fan, or a bouquet. Others might carry suspended from the arm one of the pretty decorative bags now fashionable. It should be of exaggerated size. There must be only a touch of feminine in their attire. Anything beyond this—any wearing of woman's costume—would be in very bad taste, and might give serious offense to the hostess. The ladies appear in their usual evening dress, without any attempt at imitating masculine attire, unless in some very slight degree. Thus, graceful gold shoulder knots might recall to the beholder the formal military epaulettes. Horsehoes or riding whip scarf pins of exaggerated size could be worn.

The decorations of the ballroom might repeat the same or similar idea, as a compliment to the guests of the evening—the men. A garland of southern smilax or laurel might be festooned along the walls as a frieze, punctuated at intervals by a pair of miniature riding whips, with a horsehoes above and one below, or toy swords or toy guns may distribute them to the guests just before these enter the ballroom. An appropriate design for the cover would be a circus rider leaping through a hoop. The supper may be served either from the sideboard and a large central table in the dining room, or from small tables. The former arrangement is the usual one and is more suited to a leap year dance, since it gives the ladies an opportunity to wait upon their partners, thus carrying out the spirit of the occasion. Hot bouillon served in cups; oysters, creamed or fried; chicken and lobster salad, sandwiches, chicken croquettes, lobster a la Newburg, ices, bonbons, cakes, and coffee are usually served at a ball. At a leap year dance the bonbons may include sugar hearts, candy canes, and chocolate cigars. For a small dance, bouillon, chicken salad, and oysters, with rolls or sandwiches, would suffice for the substantial part of the supper. A large bowl of lemonade or punch, with a ladle and plenty of glasses, should stand on a table in the hall, or in a convenient place throughout the evening. If the electrician is not to be trusted that there is always a supply of fresh glasses on hand.

Dear Miss More—I am a very practical girl and I think young people ought to be discouraged from marrying on $14 a week. I earn $15 a week and live at home. And I find that $50 a month doesn't go very far toward my own personal expenses. How far would $55 a month go toward paying rent, grocery bills, doctor bills, etc. (etc. for two)? A young man with a salary of $100 a month has asked me to marry him and I have refused because I consider his salary too small to begin housekeeping on. I can't see that I would be bettering myself by marrying a man who can't support me better than I can support myself. I think other girls ought to look at the matter in the same light. It is all very well to talk about love and the divinity of its joy and how it lightens the burdens, but unless there is a comfortable amount of money to make things run smooth, love is apt to dissolve. Also, the girl who attempts to keep house on $14 a week would degenerate into a slave, a drudge. It isn't worth it, girls. This is very plain talk, but I believe this is a question where there is too little plain talk and too much romance and visions. Are you brave enough to print it? A BUSINESS GIRL.

The Algerine was sent from San Francisco. The Shearwater will be taken to drydock at Long Beach for repairs.
